U. S. Slashes Retail Credit, Orders Bills Paid Quickly

New Regulations Effective at Once; Installment Time Cut to 12 Months

By Eric Friedheim
International News Service Staff Writer

The Federal Reserve Board last night ordered drastic restrictions in credit and installment buying as part of President Roosevelt's battle against inflation.

New regulations, which become effective immediately, seek to reduce the volume of installment sales, installment loans, consumer loans and require persons to keep their charge accounts paid up. The board's regulations provide:

1. A 33 1-3 per cent down payment on most articles bought on the installment plan with a maximum of 12 months in which to pay the balance.

2. Most articles bought on charge accounts must be paid for by the tenth day of the second month after purchase. Customers, however, may buy additional articles if they agree to pay off any arrears in six monthly installments.

3. Single-payment loans by finance companies, banks and others amounting to $1500 or less must be paid off in 90 days.

The board listed 41 types of articles of which the new installment regulations apply.

Some of the articles, such as radios and refrigerators, already have been announced.

Clothing, Appliances on List

Articles added to the list include automobile batteries and accessories, nonmilitary clothing, shoes, hats, haberdashery, yard goods, used furniture, jewelry, household electric appliances, table and kitchenware, athletic goods, pottery, glassware and others.

There is no change in the present requirement of one-third down payment and 15 months' maturity on automobile purchases. Down payments on new furniture and pianos, however, are increased to 20 per cent with 12 months to liquidate the balance.

Listed articles bought on charge accounts must be paid for on the tenth day of the second calendar month following purchase.

No further credit may be extended to purchase any listed article

Chapter III

Hendricks Field, Fla., May 5.—High above the misty Florida swamps young men in fantastically big airplanes wing from this place to distant pinpricks on the map, day after day and night after night, young men with a most serious job to do.

They are undergraduates in organized destruction, these earnest young fellows with their Flying Fortresses. They have come up from schools which made them experts in some special trade; now they are learning to put their trades together, to lose themselves in the team, to make the team the brain and heart and nervous system of a bombing airplane, to make that airplane a sensate creature which can go to the enemy with terror and death and then come home again triumphant.

Trained to React as One Personality

When a student comes to Hendricks Field he is a pilot, a navigator, a bombardier, a mechanic, a radio operator, an instrument man. He leaves as one member of a crew put together here from a lot of individuals like himself and integrated, coordinated and trained to think and act and react as one being, so long as they are in their airplane.

In theory, every crew put together here remains together through its training and goes to a bombing squadron together, never to be broken down into its parts again until the war is won. It does not always work out that way.

British Have a Different System

Illness, of course, takes a hand now and then. And temperamental differences sometimes arise which make it necessary occasionally to revise a crew to separate two clashing personalities.

The British have a way of dumping all students at their crew schools together for a couple of days and permitting them to become acquainted and form themselves into crews on the basis of first impressions. Our air forces have adopted another

50% Gasoline Slash Ordered To Start May 16

Reduction to Become Effective on Date Slated for Rationing

By the Associated Press

Gasoline consumption in the East will be slashed 50 per cent below normal starting May 16, the War Production Board announced last night. This means that many of the area's ten million motorists probably will have to get along with as little as five or six gallons a week.

The reduction becomes effective the day the Seaboard area begins using ration cards.

Simultaneously with the gasoline order, WPB directed that deliveries of light fuel oil reduced also by 50 per cent below last year, beginning May 16 in the 17 eastern States and the District of Columbia.

This was the first cut on fuel oil, used for house heating, and the order applied to deliveries to suppliers.

While the overall gasoline curtailment will be one-half, informed sources explained that it would amount to about a 60 per cent cut for nonessential users of automobiles, since necessary vehicles will continue to receive their full requirements of fuel.

The WPB action, taken on recommendation of Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes, came shortly after Joseph B. Eastman, defense trans-

WLB Overtime Order Spurned By G. M. Chief

Wilson Wires Davis His Refusal to Comply With Board's Edict

By the United Press

Detroit, May 5.—President C. E. Wilson of General Motors Corp. tonight refused to comply with a War Labor Board order to extend for three weeks the double time provisions of the company's expired contract with the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.).

The refusal also applies to current contract negotiations between the corporation's Frigidaire division at Dayton, Ohio, and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (C. I. O.).

Both disputes have been certified to the WLB at Washington and hearings before a WLB panel are scheduled to open at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Wilson rejected the WLB order on grounds it was "based on ex parte consideration of this matter by the War Labor Board."

In a telegram to Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB, Wilson protested:

"Our case involves many other issues and an attempt to settle any of them in advance we consider prejudicial. Our fair and practical offer to the union provided adequate method for handling this and all other economic considerations."

As certified to the WLB, the union demands include $1 a day wage in-

Better Than Ever

Record Attendance Expected As Folk Festival Opens Today

The Ninth Annual National Folk Festival will open at 1 p. m. today at Constitution Hall. Record-breaking attendances are expected for the event which this year is more elaborately planned than ever, the Festival Association announced.

In the eight performances, afternoon and evening, 40 groups, comprising more than 600 individuals will appear in songs and dances as old as America.

And, in this present festival, the songs and dances by some of the groups will be as old as China, India and Russia. The scope has been enlarged to embrace those countries, to weave their colorful folk treasures through a program of American offerings.

Canada has sent a group of singers and every section of the United States will be represented. Chicago sends French, Irish, Polish and Lithuanian groups; Cleveland, Czecho-Slovakian, Ukrainian and Rumanian groups; Madison, Wis., Swiss and Norwegian representatives; Milwaukee, a Polish group. Then, too, there will be cowboys from Colorado and Texas, lumberjacks from Michigan and Indians from the West and from New York.

Each performance will conclude with a presentation of songs of men in the service—soldiers on Wednesday and Saturday, sailors on Thursday and marines on Friday.

The evening program will begin at 8:15 p. m. A full story on the festival is carried today on page 18.

House Votes $56,126,131 D. C. Budget

Record Sum Wins Approval With Only $468,709 Slash by Funds Committee

The largest single budget appropriation ever approved for the District—a total of $56,126,131 carefully fitted to the needs of a wartime National Capital—was voted by the House of Representatives yesterday.

The fund represents a boost of $670,842 over last year's appropriation. Actually, however, more money was spent during the 12 months just ending, since the original budget grant was later inflated by a supplemental highway appropriation of $1,911,000.

Police, Fire Funds Increased

Stripping "nonessentials" and pointing its recommendation toward the straitened demands of wartime, the House Appropriation Committee pared $468,709 from the estimate presented by the Commissioners in reporting the bill to the House.

Only change made in the bill as reported was a committee amendment authorizing an additional $11,040 to the Blue Plains Home for the Aged and Infirm. Representative Houston (Democrat) of Texas, who offered the change, explained that it was made necessary at the last moment when it was learned that a dozen WPA employes now utilized there were about to be withdrawn. The extra funds were marked for replacing these men.

An amendment offered by Representative Bender (Republican) of Ohio to slash $30,000 from the Public Utilities Commission appropriation was rejected by the House. Bender described it as a punitive measure to penalize inefficient operation, intramural friction and "buck-passing."

School Request Slashed

Principal cuts were made in construction funds for public schools and in the rejection of numerous requests for personnel increases—though more than 250 new employes were authorized for the various branches of the city government.

The committee boosted from one million to two and a half million dollars the annual amortization of the District's largest debt—a nine million dollar PWA loan. It also recommended an extra $413,135 for the Heath Department over last

'Operations Proceeding'

By the Associated Press

London, May 5.—British commandos, regular infantrymen and royal marines moved upon Madagascar's Diego Suarez naval base tonight in a swift incursion which struck from the reaching hand of the Axis a vital Indian Ocean position and effected a major Allied coup in the world-wide struggle for mastery of the seas.

Vichy Reports Paratroop Attack

"Operations are proceeding and our casualties have so far been light," the Admiralty and War Office said in a brief joint communique to night. "It is understood that the Governor General of Madagascar has declared his intention to resist."

The landing forces, protected by warships and airplanes, dashed ashore at Courrier Bay, 10 miles across the Isthmus from Diego Suarez itself, at dawn this morning, and by nightfall had broken the Vichy French coastal defenses, captured a battery which had shelled the landings and were smashing at the back door of the base through the hot tropical jungle.

Force Solely British

Advices released by Vichy sources tonight said the British occupying forces, which the French estimated, perhaps excessively, at 20,000, had reached Andrakaka, 4 miles from the naval base. The same report put the French and Indian defenders at 7500, nearly twice the London estimate.

Vichy reports said waves of parachutists had been landed at the outset of a double attack in which warships and squadrons of aircraft made a frontal thrust from the sea timed with the overland assault on the rear by light armored units landed in Courrier Bay.

The French said also that the British naval forces consisted of

Japs Storm Into China Via Burma

Another Front Opens; Thin British Line Between Invaders, India Faces Trap

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, May 5.—The Japanese armies stormed onto Chinese soil through the Burma back door today, and, while thus menacing the cause of Free China on yet another front, began a movement of envelopment designed to entrap and destroy the thin, tired line of British who stand between the invader and India.

The vanguard of the Japanese columns crossed the shallow Wanting River into China's Yunnan Province at the end of a 500-mile advance up Burma.

Meager military advices told of the fiercest of fighting in the mountainous area on both sides of the border; official reports, perhaps delayed, indicated the Chinese still held the Chinese customs station of Wanting and had, for the time at least, halted Japanese reinforcements at Chukok, on the Burma side.

Try to Cut Off British

Another arm of the Japanese advance, based on Kutkai inside Burma, appeared to be trying to forge northwest toward Bhamo, head of navigation on the River Irrawaddy, 170 miles north of fallen Mandalay.

This force will try to flank and cut off the British, who are withdrawing up the Chindwin River Valley toward the rugged Indian frontier.

(In New Delhi, India, officers returning from the frontier between India and Burma said a rapid Allied withdrawal was in progress in Burma. A spokesman said it appeared likely a considerable number of British and Chinese troops would be captured by the Japanese.

(United States and British operated airlines were doing a last ditch job of evacuating troops and refugee civilians, but most of those brought out were women and children.

U. S. Raids Japanese Airdrome

(Seven planes of Pan-American Airways were diverted to the evacuation service and hauled out 1200 persons before the Japanese virtually surrounded the airfield from which they were operating north of Mandalay. These unarmed planes are flying in broad daylight without escort despite the presence of Japanese fighters everywhere.)

Moving ahead of the Japanese ground forces as throughout the Burma campaign, Japanese bombers heavily raided Yungchang, 100 miles inside Yunnan Province at the intersection of the Burma Road and the upper reaches of the great Mekong River. Japanese advices hinted that an Allied air base had been established here.

Although the miliary news contained no mention of direct air support for the Chinese in their own borderlands, two flights of long

Gen. Wainwright Reports Enemy Assault on Manila Bay Fortress Came From Bataan After Weeks Of Murderous Shelling and Raids

By John G. Norris

Japanese landing parties stormed across the 3-mile strip of water between Bataan and Corregidor last night in a supreme effort to capture the embattled fortress.

A War Department communique late yesterday announced that the island citadel had been assaulted at midnight Tuesday—shortly before noon our time—and added tersely that "a landing attack was in progress."

There was no further word of the progress of the attack during the night, but it was evident that a furious battle was under way.

Officials here made no attempt to hide the seriousness of the situation, and it was feared that the end was in sight for Corregidor's heroic defenders.

President Praises Men

With the ominous one-sentence report telling of the assault on Corregidor, the War Department made public a message from President Roosevelt to Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright earlier in the day.

The President's dispatch, sent before word has been received of the attack on the fort, lauded the Philippine defenders for their "heroic stand" and declared that the "calm determination" of Wainwright's leadership "in a desperate situation sets a standard of duty for our soldiers throughout the world."

Gen. Wainwright's brief message to the War Department did not say whether any Japanese troops had succeeded in landing on Corregidor or not. The feeling here was that if the attack were in force, as is likely, some of the enemy troops probably could be put ashore.

Size of Force Undisclosed

If the American-Filipino defenders succeeded in repelling the assault, observers believe the Japanese would wait for the cover of night again before coming back. If not, Corregidor might fall in a matter of hours.

The exact size of the garrison at Fort Mills on Corregidor has not been revealed, but 7000 or more troops have been estimated to be there and at the auxiliary forts—Drum, Hughes and Frank—all three on nearby islands.

As long as Corregidor and its satellites hold, Japan is denied the use of Manila Bay as a base, one of the important objectives of the invasion.

This attack was the first attempt to storm the rock-hewn fortress, but

Luzon Units Get Citations For Bravery

By Sandor S. Klein
United Press Staff Writer

A stirring new chapter in the story of American fighting men—a chapter this time of men armed chiefly with courage and devotion to duty—was unfolded last night as the War Department cited units of the United States-Philippine forces on Luzon for their "magnificent defense of the island against overwhelming odds."

The citations, issued in the name of President Roosevelt, were based on operational reports from Philippines and on recommendations submitted by Gen. Douglas MacArthur. They were made public in a special War Department communique.

In the terse language of the military world, the citations related incident after incident in which the American-Philippine troops, sometimes together, sometimes alone, performed almost unbelievable feats with a display of moral ingenuity and combat efficiency "which has impressed fighting men the world over."

"Surpassed All Records"

They told the story of men who "performed prodigies far beyond reasonable expectations"—

Of antiaircraft artillery units which "surpassed all known records in accuracy of fire, taking heavy toll of the attacking hostile planes"—

Of airmen who were only partially equipped with modern craft but nevertheless engaged a numerically superior enemy and "fought its limited equipment to destruction."

No individuals were singled out for special citation. Instead, the praise was bestowed on entire units—their enlisted men and officers and nurses and chaplains whose heroism will live in history.

Withstood Savage Assault

Here are some of the stories that were unfolded:

The North Luzon force: Attacked on December 23, 1941, when in a state of only partial mobilization and training near Lingayen Gulf, this force withstood savage assaults by the enemy. Finally forced to withdraw, it maintained complete cohesion, executed difficult delaying actions. Losses in some of its units

Raise Payable in War Stamps Reported Given Ship Workers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The War Production Board's wage stabilization conference was reliably reported last night to have granted a 6-cent-an-hour wage increase, payable in war savings stamps, to the Nation's 600,000 shipbuilding workers.

The increase ranged from about one-fourth to one-half that due the workers under existing agreements made last August and linking future wage raises to cost of living increases. It was said to have been agreed upon after receipt from President Roosevelt of a telegram declaring that "full" increases under the old contracts were "irreconcilable with the national policy to control the cost of living."

Pattern for Future Disputes

Meantime, in the disputes involving Detroit building trades, the WLB board of review ruled against wage raises for 14 of the highest paid crafts and granted increases for 10 lower-paid groups.

The decision, made by an arbitration board under the building trades stabilization agreement, was the first affecting wages on a large scale since Mr. Roosevelt's cost of living program was announced. It was seen as setting a pattern for future wage disputes of construction workers, in line with the President's recent message to Congress declaring that general rates should not be increased and only inequities and substandard rates could be "adjusted."

Raise of About 5 Per Cent

The reported shipbuilding workers settlement on increases paid in war bonds was also seen as setting a precedent for solution of the problem of meeting past cost of living increases without contributing to an inflationary spiral set off by higher wages.

The shipbuilding stabilization conference, now meeting in Chicago, was confronted with agreements negotiated last year, providing annual wage increases to meet cost of living increases. According to the statistics presented, living costs have increased for East Coast shipbuilders by 12 per cent; for West Coast labor by 15 per cent, and for Gulf shipyard workers by 20 per cent.

In Keeping with Policy

The increases granted amount to about 5 per cent, plus a 5 cents an hour boost for Gulf shipyard labor to bring them into line with rates paid in Pacific and Atlantic Coast yards.

It was not clear last night whether the plan provided for the payment of the increases in regular defense

Bulow, Schulte and Patrick Trail in Primary Balloting

By the Associated Press

Senator William J. Bulow, who criticized Administration measures in the international field before Pearl Harbor but has supported the war effort, trailed former Gov. Tom Berry, all-out Roosevelt supporter, on early returns from South Dakota's Democratic Senatorial primary last night.

Returns from 804 of 1944 precincts gave Bulow 5619 votes, Berry 12,285 and Edward Prchal 602.

Of special interest to Capital residents was the fact that Representative William T. Schulte, member of the House District Committee, was running behind Ray J. Madden for the Democratic House nomination in the First Indiana District.

Madden had a three-to-two lead with one-fifth of the 171 precincts reported.

Two other States also nominated candidates for Congress but Senator Bullow's bid for a third term commanded chief interest. Berry, a former cowboy, campaigned as a 100 per cent Roosevelt supporter. Bulow remained in Washington and sent home recorded speeches for broadcast; he pledged support to the war program but reserved the right to oppose any domestic policies he thought unsound.

Men of Corregidor Win World Acclaim

Isolated Troops Waged a Masterful Defense in Virtually Hopeless Battle

A new and perhaps final chapter was being written last night in one of the greatest annals of United States military history—the heroic fight of outnumbered American-Filipino troops in the "First Battle of the Philippines."

Japanese hordes were making a landing attack on besieged Corregidor Island. For 150 days, the embattled defenders of the "Rock" have been holding off the enemy, but officials here feared the end was in sight.

It will be just five months ago tomorrow that the Japanese treacherously launched the nearly simultaneous attacks on Hawaii and the Philippines. Since then, the isolated little army of Americans and Filipinos have fought a well-nigh hopeless battle against overwhelming odds.

Masterful Defense

Waging a masterly defensive action, a force of not more than 50,000 unseasoned troops repeatedly beat off and whipped some 300,000 Japanese, most of them veterans of the Chinese theater of war.

The first attack came by air on the same afternoon as the stab-in-the-back at Pearl Harbor. Much of our Far Eastern air force was caught on the ground and demolished. The remainder went immediately into action against the fleets of enemy transports hovering off Luzon.

For a week or more, squadrons of our flying fortresses and naval planes bombed the invasion fleet. One of them, piloted by Capt. Colin P. Kelly, a young Army flier, sunk a Japanese battleship. Kelly lost his life in the action.

Fought Under Great Odds

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of America's Far Eastern Army, marshaled the limited troops at his disposal. The enemy struck at the north, south and west coast of the island and met blistering fire.

Having overwhelming air and sea superiority, the Japanese struck at will. Our little force of bombers and warships had to withdraw to the Dutch East Indies.

Several landings were effected in the north and south of Luzon and enemy troops poured ashore from scores of transports. The small United States forces, augmented by larger Filipino troops only partially mobilized and trained, fought a withdrawal action. Losses in some units exceeded 50 per cent, but the defenders heroically executed difficult delaying actions.

MacArthur Joins His Armies

On December 25 General MacArthur declared Manila an open city and began a difficult rearrangement of his northern and southern armies to avoid them being caught in a pincers movement. The maneuver was successful and MacArthur gradually withdrew his forces through the Pampangan swamps north of Manila into the rugged fastness of Bataan Peninsula.

The American naval base at Olongapo on Subic Bay, north of Bataan Peninsula, fell to the enemy and its naval and marine garrison joined MacArthur's army. They became his beach defense force and distinguished themselves throughout the fight. Some 3000 of the sailors and devil dogs are still fighting on Corregidor and the other island forces.

Throughout January, the Japanese hammered at MacArthur's lines across the upper part of narrow Bataan Peninsula. Using dive-bombers and superior forces, they drove back the defenders some miles by constant attacks.

Other Islands Invaded

Heavy reinforcements were brought into Luzon by the Japanese, and their forces invaded Mindanao and several other lightly defended Philippine Islands. The defenders of those islands, forced to retire, formed guerilla bands and made repeated raids on the enemy shore positions held.

Late in January, heavy pressure on MacArthur's lines was relieved by successful counterattack.

Repeated enemy assaults gained little ground, and the foe then attempted flank attacks from the sea. These were broken up. Renewed landing attempts resulted in some Japanese troops getting ashore, but they were surrounded and captured or killed by our forces.

Then, in February, MacArthur pulled the unexpected. His tired troops counterattacked and won back most of the ground the enemy had gained during January. It was reported that the Japanese commander in the Philippines, General Homma, had committed hara-kiri, because of his failure to defeat MacArthur.

P-40's Active

General Yamashita, conquerer of Malaya and Singapore, took Homma's place, reports from the Philippines said.

Another unexpected move was pulled by the defenders early in March. A handful of P-40 pursuit planes, which had been their only air support since the first week of the war, loaded up with small bombs and attacked Japanese shipping in Subic Bay. Three big ships were sunk and wharves and depots blown up.

A long lull followed in the fighting on Bataan. Then on St. Patrick's Day came the most dramatic event of the war. General MacArthur, his family and staff officers arrived in Australia to take command of all entire Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific.

He left the Philippines under orders from President Roosevelt and left his forces there under the command of his brilliant second in command, Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright.

Late in March, Yamashita launched his first offensive, after receiving heavy troop reinforcements and strong air support. The American-Filipino forces, isolated, without any air support, and on half-rations since early January, continued to fight back.

After two weeks of assault, the Japanese finally broke through Wainwright's lines. They reformed, but two days later, the physically exhausted troops, large numbers of them ill will malaria because their quinine supply was nearly exhausted, again gave way before continuous night-and-day attacks.

On April 9, Bataan fell and some 36,000 American-Filipino troops were killed or captured.

Corregidor and its satellite forts fought on, as did smaller units throughout the other islands. A little motor torpedo boat squadron sunk a Japanese cruiser in the southern islands. A force of American bombers from Australia smashed Japanese bases throughout the islands.

The attacks on the Manila Bay forts seemed to be reaching a climax last night, with the end perhaps in view. But more than 125 million Americans have promised Corregidor's defenders that it was only the "first battle of the Philippines" that might be ending. There will be a second and different battle.

Flier Tells Of Bombing Jap Ships

Washington Bureau of the Chicago Sun

An eye-witness account of the heroic bombings of Japanese shipping and bases in the Far East was given here yesterday by a 27-year-old Wisconsin boy, Capt. William John Bohnaker, who piloted an American Flying fortress on many of these dangerous missions.

BOHNAKER

"We know our equipment is superior to theirs and our bombing more accurate—we just had a little too few planes, but we are a match for them any time," the Army pilot who won the Distinguished Flying Cross for his work in raiding Davao Bay, told newspapermen.

Captain Bohnaker told about one time when a group of eight flying fortresses with him piloting one of them, ran across a 10,000-ton Japanese oil tanker off the Philippines.

"We came down to 7000 feet, gave her everything we had, and she sank in three minutes," he related.

Plane Hit Many Times

He admitted that on several occasions his plane had been shot full of holes, but said he himself hadn't had any particularly narrow escapes.

"Either a bullet hits you, or it doesn't," he declared.

Most of the bombing by flying fortresses is done at around 30,000 feet altitude, and at this height the much-vaunted Jap "Zero" fighters are worthless, he said. Between December 7 and March 1, his squadron lost only five of the four-engined bombers against 50 or 60 Zeros shot down by the flying fortresses, he said.

He told of the two raids on Davao Bay on the south tip of the Philippines.

"We were operating from hidden bases in Borneo and Celebes," he said. "On the first of January with 9 B-17's we came into the bay at 30,000 feet. I guess there were 25 transports in the bay and we made for them. Then, in an arm of water, we saw 10 or 12 warships. We changed our run and went after them. There was quite a bit of antiaircraft fire, but no pursuits. Our leader went right onto a battleship or heavy cruiser, we couldn't tell which, and we landed bombs on it.

Altogether we sank or badly damaged five ships. One destroyer we actually saw go down, the big ship was squarely hit, and three other ships that we know of were hit."

Hit Battleship Again

A few days later, Bohnaker said, three flying fortresses went back to the bay, and in spite of very bad weather, hit the battleship again. On this trip, he said, they saw tugs alongside many other ships trying to repair them—thus proving that the initial raid had inicted heavy damage.

"We couldn't tell whether the battleship went down or not—but she was cocked on one side," he declared.

Bohnaker admitted that the Japs "did a good job" in a noon bombing of Clark Field on the Philippines December 8—on which occasion, he said, air-raid warning wires to the field had been cut, presumably by a fifth columnist. After this initial raid, however, he said, "their bombings have not been very effective."

Jap Landing Attack on Corregidor in Progress; Capital Officials Fear Fall Is Imminent

the way for the assault has been carefully prepared. The island stronghold has been under fire for five months—since the beginning of the war, December 7.

Bombed repeatedly all through the early days of the Battle of the Philippines, the real siege of the "Rock" started March 24. For the last six weeks Corregidor has been under almost constant bombing and artillery fire.

In the last ten days the attack has been greatly intensified. The Japanese moved up large numbers of 9.4-inch guns to vantage points on Bataan peninsula and the southern shores of Manila Bay and pounded the fort relentlessly.

Men Get World's Praise

The fire was particularly centered on Corregidor's beach defenses—the walls of barbed wire barriers, pill-boxes and machine-gun nests—to pave the way for just such an assault as is now under way. Constant fire of the big enemy guns on these exposed points has undoubtedly wiped out many of the barriers against landing attacks.

Valiantly the besieged defenders have fought back. Their guns have repeatedly broken up troop concentrations on Bataan and unquestionably delayed the direct attack, now being made.

But the heavy fire of the 9.4-inch (240-millimeter) guns has made it well-nigh impossible for troops to remain above ground on the exposed surface of the fort to fire at dive-bombers and repair beach defenses.

Weakened by a shortage of food and cut off from reinforcements, Corregidor's defenders have won the admiration of the entire world by their dogged back-to-the-wall fight.

All this the President noted in his message of praise to Wainwright.

"During recent weeks," the President said, "we have been following with growing admiration the day-by-day accounts of your heroic stand against the mounting intensity of bombardment by enemy planes and heavy siege guns.

"In spite of all the handicaps of complete isolation, lack of food and ammunition, you have given the world a shining example of patriotic fortitude and self-sacrifice. The American people ask no finer example of tenacity, resourcefulness and steadfast courage.

"The calm determination of your personal leadership in a desperate situation sets a standard of duty for our soldiers throughout the world. In every camp and on every naval vessel soldiers, sailors and marines are inspired by the gallant struggle of their comrades in the Philippines. The workmen in our shipyards and munitions plants redouble their efforts because of your example.

"You and your devoted followers have become the living symbols of our war aims and the guarantee of victory."

Military men conclude the landing attacks must have been launched against the eastern tip of Corregidor. The tadpole-shaped island is virtually sheer rock rising abruptly on the seaward side, but the "tail of the tadpole" curling into Manila Bay is low, sandy beach.

The big guns of Fort Mills on Corregidor are of little use against the Japanese landing boats. They are for more distant, larger targets. At the nearly point-blank range, smaller field guns, 75 and 105 millimeter weapons would be more effective.

But the long "softening up" process and the heavy barrage that undoubtedly preceded the landing attempt would make it difficult for gun crews to fire on the approaching boats.

Once the boats got close to shore, the enemy artillery barrage would have to be lifted, but the defender then would have to rely on light cannon and machine guns.

The steel landing barges of the Japanese carry machine guns and small cannon and can ward off rifle or machine gun fire.

While the enemy probably will suffer heavy losses in any such assault as this, they outnumber the defenders so greatly that they can wear them down by repeated attacks if necessary.

Small Forts Not as Strong

Should Corregidor fall, it is not likely that Forts Drum, Hughes and Frank could hold out long. They are less strongly defended than the main fort, and once it was in Japanese hands, its batteries could be turned on the others.

But however much longer the Manila Bay islands hold, their defenders have the satisfaction of knowing they fought a good fight. They have been living on borrowed time, for Corregidor was supposed to have fallen before Singapore, Java and other strongholds.

The men of Corregidor, in the words of President Roosevelt, "have become the living symbols of our war aims and the guarantee of victory."

exceeded 50 per cent, but the "undaunted valor of the depleted command made possible the successful withdrawal into Bataan Peninsula."

The South Luzon force: Attacked while in a state of partial mobilization, it inflicted heavy losses upon the enemy until it, too, was forced to withdraw under the sheer weight of Japanese numbers. Threatened with destruction by an attack on its rear, the force threw out a covering force, halted an enemy advance, thus completing an extremely difficult movement into Bataan Peninsula.

The Philippine Department, U. S. Army: Its headquarters under intense air attack, without any sort of protection, all of its agencies not only funcioned with marked efficiency but "by virtue of magnificent devotion to duty under fire, expended their activities in order to further the partially completed mobilization of the Philippine Army."

The 200th Coast Artillery, Antiaircraft: Despite heavy casualties from Jap air attacks, the regiment, "through magnificent courage and devotion to duty," continued to display outstanding technical ability. When Clark Field was uncovered by the withdrawal of the North Luzon force, this regiment, displacing to the rear, successfully covered the retirement into Bataan.

Headquarters, Headquarters Detachment and Army troops, U. S. Army: "Operating under continuous aerial bombardment, these units planned and directed the delaying action that made possible the withdrawal of the North and South Luzon forces into Bataan Peninsula." They also carried out the evacuation of Manila and "through prodigies of labor, working to complete exhaustion of personnel, brought about the movement of supplies and equipment that made possible the prolonged defense of Bataan."

The First Philippine Corps: Attacked by forces superior in number, training and equipment, its units maintained position through sheer tenacity despite penetrations in its front and left rear. Skillfully executed counterattacks, driven home with magnificent courage, isolated four hostile elements which were subsequently annihilated.

The Fifth Intercepter Command: Operating on Bataan and Corregidor, its meager air element constantly carried out hazardous reconnaissance missions and executed numerous surprise attacks against hostile ground, air and naval elements.

The harbor defenses of Manila and Subic bays and Naval and Marine Corps units serving therein: On March 15, approximately 1,000 240-mm projectiles were fired at Forts Frank and Drum, and large number of smaller projectiles struck Forts Hughes and Mills, the latter on Corregidor. During all such attacks, all units maintained their armament at a high degree of efficiency, while seaward defense elements executed effective counter battery action. Antiaircraft batteries firing at extreme ranges exacted a heavy toll of hostile planes by unceasing labor and regardless of enemy activity, essential utilities were restored and the striking power of the command maintained unimpaired.

Posse Seeks Killer Of Wife, 3 Kinfolk And Police Chief

Hamlet, N. C., May 5 (U.P.).—A 50-year-old Negro carpenter who had never been in serious trouble before was a hunted man tonight after he shot and killed his wife and three kinfolk and then killed Chief of Police John Fallaw, 48, today.

A posse of over 250 armed men searched through a swamp where Will Dawkins was believed hiding after he fatally wounded Fallaw when Fallaw and another officer attempted to arrest him for the shooting of Dawkins' wife, two of his sisters-in-law, and a child of one of the women with a shotgun.

Dawkins was separated from his 18-year-old wife, Orenna Quick Dawkins, and Negro neighbors said they believed today's trouble began when the carpenter went to his wife's house to try to persuade her to return to him. Besides the estranged wife, Dawkins killed her two sisters, Howard Quick, 20, and Katie Quick Davis, 21, and J. C. Quick, 2-year-old son of Howard Quick, police reported.

Battleships at Shangri La Base, Roosevelt Confesses

Shangri-La, the paradise which President Roosevelt has borrowed from Author James Hilton so as to bedevil the Axis powers, grew in military importance yesterday.

The President disclosed that Shangri-La not only was an air base—the take-off point for the American planes that bombed Tokyo—but a naval base as well.

The big secret came out at a White House press conference, when the Chief Executive was asked if he would like to help out a Nazi broadcaster who, in a fishing expedition the other day, announced that the American battleships Washington and North Carolina had entered the Mediterranean by way of Gibraltar and left it by way of Suez.

Yes, the President said, the two men o' war were on their way to Shangri-La. Asked what was going on there, the President said that there were dry docks there.

The President first used Shangri-La in an allegory when he was asked about the American bombing of Japan. Eyes alight, he told of having had dinner with a sweet young thing who wanted him to tell her all about the bombing. He said he told her that the planes took off from Shangri-La, and he added that she believed him.

Vichy Won't Take First Step Toward a Break With Washington, Laval Says

Madagascar Note by U. S. Is Rejected

By the Associated Press

Vichy, May 5.—Reacting fiercely to the British attack on Madagascar, the Vichy government violently rejected today a United States warning against putting up a fight and ordered the island's garrison to resist to the death for the "honor of France."

But husky-voiced Pierre Laval, who made known these fateful decisions at a press conference, said Vichy nevertheless would decline to take the first step toward breaking off diplomatic relations with Washington as a result of its backing Britain in the Madagascar "aggression."

With British sea forces, "waves of parachutists" and light armored forces following up an ultimatum in an attack on the strong naval base at Diego Suarez Bay, 86-year-old Marshal Petain, Laval and Admiral Darlan, defense chief, united in denouncing the attack and in urging French air, sea and land forces to resist.

"I have learned of the aggression of which Madagascar has just been the object on the part of British forces," said a message sent by Petain to Governor General Armand Annet in Madagascar.

"An ultimatum demanding the unconditional surrender by the commander of the military forces was answered: 'We will defend ourselves to the very end.'

"That was the only answer he could have made and he made it. Tell him I am behind him in this tragic trial in which he is defending French honor.

"To the civilian population unjustly attacked, to the soldiers, sailors and airmen and to their chiefs I address my greeting and that of France."

Darlan Bitter

Darlan, as commander of all the French armed forces, outdid both Laval and Petain in bitterness in a message to the defending forces.

Calling the British "highway robbers" and flaying "Anglo-Saxons" in general, he declared "the day will come when England will pay."

"Once again the British, instead of fighting their enemies, seek the easiest path of attacking a French colony far from the metropolis," he said.

"Marshal Petain has asked you to defend Madagascar, and I know that you have responded patriotically to his appeal.

"Firmly defend the honor of our flag! Fight to the limit of your possibilities and make the British pay dear for their act of highway robbery.

"The whole of France and its empire are with you at heart. Do not forget that the British betrayed us in Flanders, that they attacked us treacherouly at Dakar and in Syria, that they are murdering civilians in the capital, and that they tried to make the women and children of Jibuti (French Somaliland) die of hunger.

"Defend yourselves. You are defending the honor of France. The day will come when England will pay. Long live France!"

Laval Rejects U. S. Note

Laval personally announced the rejection of a United States note warning that resistance against the occupation of Madagascar would be considered "as an attack directed against the United Nations."

The French note said the Vichy government "rejects as inadmissible the pretense to forbid the French Government to defend its territory" and "raises the most energetic protest against this aggression."

Noting with "regret" that the United States approved Britain's action, the French government said it "cannot but leave to President Roosevelt the part of responsibility which will fall on him in the consequences which would result from this aggression."

Before reading the American and French notes to a press conference, Laval said he had told S. Pinckney Tuck, United States charge d'affaires, in an interview this morning:

"I could add considerations of a sentimental character. I know they are in the hearts of Frenchmen and Americans who remember this history.

"You were present the other day at my interview with Admiral Leahy (departing United States Ambassador). I repeat to you that no definite act between our two countries will come from France."

Leaflets Dropped by Planes

Unidentified planes flew over Vichy and Clermontferrand overnight, dropping flares and propaganda leaflets. Their identity was not announced.

(The Germans contended the British attacked Vichy with incendiary bombs and were answered by antiaircraft fire.

(The speed with which the news of Madagascar spread indicated that the planes may have dropped announcements of that action.)

Council of Ministers Called by Laval for Today

Vichy, May 5 (U.P.).—Pierre Laval called a meeting of the council of ministers at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow to study the Madagascar situation.

Latest dispatches from Madagascar said the French defense forces put up "honorable resistance all day," indicating that both sides suffered casualties. The French were said to have only a small force of obsolete tanks and planes and virtually no gasoline to operate them.

two cruisers, four destroyers, two troop transports and an aircraft carrier, and reported that two British planes were shot down.

Attempting apparently to stand at the shoulder of Vichy, the German radio earlier in the day said a French submarine and tender had been sunk and that there were French casualties.

Diego Suarez was the primary British objective, although it is likely there will be a subsequent move against Tulear on the southwest coast. Tulear has a good airdrome from which the Allied planes could patrol the entrance to Mozambique Channel between Durban and Tulcar, 900 miles apart.

British troops exclusively were conducting the operation, although in the cause of all the United Nations. There were none of the Free French nor dominion forces such as fought in the invasion of Syria.

Distinguished, high-ranking and veteran officers led the occupying forces, Admiral E. N. Syfret commanding the naval escort and Gen. R. G. Sturges of the Royal Marines, who fought at Gallipoli in the last war, leading the troops.

The defending forces were commanded by Gen. Paul Guillemet, a former artilleryman who, Free French here say, carried out the imprisonment recently of all de Gaullist sympathizers in the Madagascar's French population of some 25,000.

Madagascar almost as big as Texas and the world's fourth largest island, commands Mozambique Channel and the southern routes of Allied supplies to the Near East, Russia and India.

Thus was destroyed what an informed source declared was a Japanese plan to seize Diego Suarez with the connivance of Vichy and make it a base for Axis attacks on Allied shipping.

But this same informant conceded the possibility that the Japanese high command might at once send its powerful Indian Ocean battle squadron against Madagascar in a desperate attempt to dislodge the British from the northern tip.

Of necessity, this would involve a straight, swift blow across the Indian Ocean, by-passing such obvious stepping stones as the Seychelles and Amirantes Islands, Mauritius and Reunion. Should the Japanese attempt to build a system of bases on these islands, one informed source said:

"The British will get enough bombers and men o'war into Madagascar to blow them out of the water."

The Allied naval position in the Indian Ocean is of necessity a secret, although Axis reports have claimed that two great United States battleships, the North Carolina and the Washington, have entered those waters.

Tokyo Pops Off

New York, May 5 (AP).—The Tokyo radio, as heard by C. B. S., had this to say tonight on the British landing at Madagascar:

"Radio Tokyo predicted it. We are great prophets."

Midway Repulses 5 Attacks; Nimitz Decorates Defenders

By the Associated Press

Pearl Harbor, May 5.—The repulse of five Japanese attacks on Midway Island, the last on March 10, was revealed officially today. Midway is 1149 miles northwest of Hawaii.

The announcement followed the return of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, from inspections and the awarding of honors to Marine Corps aviators and naval personnel for their heroic defense of the Hawaiian outpost.

Nimitz revealed Midway had been attacked each month since December 7 except April. He personally decorated the Marines for shooting down a four-engined Japanese patrol seaplane making the last attack March 10.

Never Reached Objective

The bomber was destroyed before it reached its objective. Capt. James L. Neefus, leader of the intercepting fliers, was given the Navy Cross. Distinguished Flying Crosses were awarded First Lieut. Charles W. Somers, Second Lieut. Francis P. McCarthy, and Marine Gunner Robert L. Dickey. Dickey, wounded in the arm, is recuperating at the Mare Island (Calif.) Navy Hospital.

In making the awards to the others at Midway, Admiral Nimitz said:

"On the opening day of the war you successfully repelled bombardment attacks by enemy cruisers and destroyers. Since you have been attacked each month save April. Once in January and twice in February you were bombarded by submarines. In each instance your prompt return fire caused the enemy to submerge and withdraw before damage was inflicted. In at least one case, the enemy sustained probable damage. On March 10 aircraft approaching Midway were discovered and one was shot down and destroyed many miles from the objective. None reached the islands."

Defy Adverse Conditions

Neefus' action included taking fighter planes aloft in the face of difficult aerial combat conditions and heavy cloud formations which favored the Japanese.

"Nevertheless," Admiral Nimitz said, "Neefus led his command into action in a determined, aggressive and effective manner which resulted in the destruction of the enemy."

The Americans suffered no losses.

Commander Cyril T. Simard, of the Naval Air Station at Midway, and Lieut. Col. Harold D. Shannon, commanding the Marine Defense Battalion, were awarded letters of commendation.

Three Naval Reserve seamen, First Class, and three Marine Corps enlisted men were cited and advanced one grade for efficient operation of aircraft warnings. They were Robert B. McHunn, Ace B. Callan, Claude A. Webster, Staff Sergt. Donald E. Wambold, Privates Michael Gaydon and Martin Y. Andres.

Madagascar Move Pleases War Council

By the Associated Press

Members of the Pacific War Council met at the White House yesterday, discussed the occupation of Madagascar and applauded it afterward as an essential and highly important strategic step.

The council, on which the seven United Nations fighting in the Pacific war theater are represented, meets weekly to canvass the whole field of war strategy and supply.

Walter Nash, New Zealand Minister, described the taking over of Madagascar as "a good job" which would contribute to the defense of the Indian Ocean. He added that this action was good for France and for the French people.

Pleases Dr. Loudon

Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands Minister, said he thought the occupation was "strategically a highly important move that had to be taken."

Arthur V. S. Smith, secretary of the Australian department of supply, now on a special mission to this country, represented his nation at the war council meeting for the first time. Expressing a personal opinion, he said he though the taking of Madagascar was "a jolly good thing" and, as a commentator said on the radio, "It's not too little and not too late."

The question of supplies for China likewise came up at the council session, Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese foreign minister, indicated after the meeting.

China Will Get Supplies

While he would not discuss the threat to Chinese supply lines in Japan's thrust through Burma he declared:

"As the President said, ways will be found to get supplies to China. With modern inventions of science what was not possible before is easily feasible now. There never will be a question of China's being cut off from supplies."

Loudon later presented to President Roosevelt, Maj. Gen. L. van Oyen, chief of the Dutch East Indies Air Corps, and Rear Admiral G. W. Stoeve, who is in Washington to work with the combined chief of staffs command.

Van Oyen came to this country with a "very considerable number" of Dutch student fliers who are to be trained here. Loudon said they would go back as soon as possible to Australia to get at the Japs.

The general said the Dutch have a considerable air force in Australia now, working under the direction of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Murray Charges Lewis Broke Pledge of Support

Pittsburgh, May 5 (AP).—C. I. O. President Philip Murray today openly charged his former chieftain, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, with failure to give him the support in the C. I. O. which Lewis once pledged.

The charge was delivered during a 90-minute address to a tense audience of 700 delegates attending the opening session of the Pennsylvania Industrial Council (C. I. O.) representing some 500,000 members.

As the gray-haired Scotsman left the convention hall, he saw John J. O'Leary, members of the Miners International Board and close friend of John L. Lewis, punched in the head and shoved about during a brief flurry that barely ruffled the meeting.

O'Leary suffered a cut in the forehead.

O'Leary has been mentioned in labor circles as the man being groomed by Lewis to succeed Murray as vice president of the miners organization.

Hull Warns U. S. Fleet Will Back British At Madagascar; Martinique Watched Closely

By John Elliott

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, in a fresh warning to Vichy, declared yesterday that the American Fleet is prepared to back up the British action in Madagascar by force, if necessary.

Hull also said at his press conference that the United States Government was keeping a close eye on Martinique. Newspapermen drew the inference that American armed forces were prepared to seize this strategic French insland in the Caribbean, if it were deemed necessary to prevent it from becoming a base of Axis activities.

As if to show he was making no idle threat, the Secretary of State immediately afterwards conferred with high ranking Army and Navy officers. The question of eventual American military and naval assistance to the British in Madagascar is understood to have been the subject of the important meeting that Mr. Hull held with such prominent officers as Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations, Vice Admiral Russell Wilson, Chief of Staff to Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and Maj. Gen. George V. Strong.

Secretary Hull was asked about the possibility of United States troops taking over control of Martinique in view of the fact that the strategic Caribbean Island is under the same jurisdiction as Madagascar. He replied that the Martinique situation was receiving attention along with other phases of our relations with the Vichy government which were on a day to day basis. By that, the Secretary went on to explain, the United States determines from day to day what it will do, if anything, for that day.

Hull's earnest declarations were regarded here as a blunt warning to Pierre Laval that if Vichy should render the Axis military aid in retaliation for the British move in Madagascar, the United States will range itself openly against the Petain regime.

Hull, it was felt here, was putting the pro-Nazi French premier on the spot forcing him to choose whether to decide on all-out collaboration with the conquerors and ravishers of his country, or to back down from his pro-Hitler attitude.

Nevertheless, the prevailing impression in the Capital was that the precarious tie that binds Washington to Vichy would not be broken as a result of the Madagascar affair.

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, conferred with President Roosevelt for an hour and a half yesterday. He said later that their discussions principally concerned Madagascar. "It's nice to see that the Axis is not first on the ground everywhere, isn't it?" Lord Halifax told newspapermen as he left the White House. "A very important place, Madagascar."

President Roosevelt, while declining to comment on the Madagascar episode at his press conference, expressed doubt concerning the accuracy of Axis reports that two French cruisers, the Montcalm and Marseillaise, had gone to Madagascar to defend that French island. The President said he understood that the French warships had left their home front in France for one day, but had returned on the same night.

Hirohito's Name Is Deleted From Official Speeches

The State Department has requested the Office of Facts and Figures, which reviews speeches of Federal officials before they are delivered, to delete all references to the Japanese Emperor, Hirohito, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. George W. Taylor, vice chairman of the National War Labor Board, sent a draft of an address to the OFF for clearance a few days ago, and received the reply:

"The reference to Hirohito . . . was cleared with the State Department which requests the substitution of something like 'Japanese war lords' on the grounds that reference to Hirohito might serve to consolidate the will of the Japanese people . . ."

Our New Army: Forms Flying Teams

Crews put together here operate on the basis of mutual confidence. Perfect strangers to each other on their first flight, they get acquainted on the basis of what they can do and gradually, by association, they gain confidence in the ability of the pilots to fly the airplane, of the navigator to get them where they want to go, of the bombardier to hit his target, of the mechanics to keep the fortress going, of the radio operator to maintain communications, of the instrument man to keep his delicate charges in order. On top of that, they are banded together in a society for mutual protection.

For each officer and man of the crew, except the pilots, must be a machine gunner in addition to his other duties. The Flying Fortress bristles with a murderous battery of machine guns. From the tail, belly, sides and nose, these machine guns cover every avenue of approach and the top side is protected by guns in an electrically operated turret.

Every man of the crew, except the pilots, has a machine gun station to which he is assigned. If the ship is attacked by enemy fighters, the skilled specialists of the crew become machine gunners until the danger is past.

Conceived first as a basic training center for pilots, Hendricks Field consisted of a single dirt runway across a dismal sandy flat land when the first pilots arrived last December. Its equipment totaled one airplane and a few buildings already completed among the skeletons of a wooden city rising from the sand. It has come far in the four months since then.

The Fortresses take off from broad concrete runways and classes are held and the men live in a modern cantonment. One class, of necessity a small one, has been graduated and the second class is starting on its 33½-day course of intensive training in teamwork.

Its First Contribution

As its first contribution to America's war effort, Hendricks Field turned out 25 four-engine bomber crews ready to take their places on the firing line. Each crew had flown 145 hours together on every sort of mission a long-range bomber can undertake. Many of those hours were flown over water, out of sight of land. They dropped incredible numbers of dummy bombs, fought off scores of fighter attacks launched upon them by obliging students of pursuit schools. They had got the feel of themselves as a team, working together for a common purpose and individually, and as a team they had been graded daily on their progress.

When it is in full operation, Hendricks will have a capacity of 150 trained four-engine bomber crews every 33½ days. To put those crews together and see that they click are 105 instructors, of whom 51 pilots, five navigators, 14 aerial engineers and 25 radio specialists, all under command of Col. Carl B. McDaniel, veteran four-engine pilot. A pilot instructor makes every flight with every crew, leaving the job of running the ship to them but observing and guiding and counseling as they gain in confidence and handiness. Periodic checks are made by the other instructors flying with their students; every instructor spends most of his time in the air and nobody here knows what a 40-hour or 5-day-week means.

Operated Under Handicaps

The school here has had to operate, of course, under the same handicaps which have beset the Army as a whole since it so suddenly began growing out of its peacetime clothes. Chief among these handicaps has been lack of equipment, not so much here as in the schools where the instructors got their special training. None of the 51 pilots, for instance, had flown a four-engine airplane because there weren't any to fly and all had to be given check flights on the fortresses, conducted by Colonel McDaniel himself.

The engineers, expert mechanics though they were, were strangers to the big bombers. But they all pitched in and learned and when their first students arrived took them promptly in hand and began welding them into competent teams.

Requirements for students are almost as strict as those for instructors. First of all, every student must be a graduate of the Air Force technical school which teaches his specialty, and all except the pilots must be graduates of a flexible gunnery school. The pilots must be graduates of a basic flying school in which they have been selected in advance for four-engine work and have been instructed on modern two-engine equipment. They come here knowing they have been chosen for one of the most important air jobs in the Army, keen and interested in what they're to do.

Confer Before Every Flight

Every flight they make is a training flight for every member of the crew. They fly alone or in formation, over land and water, in night flights and day flights, through good weather and bad. The pilots alternate as pilot and co-pilot; the navigator sets the course and checks it and controls it; the bombardier trains on haphazard targets as he spots them through the observation-tower nose of the ship; the engineer and assistant engineer check engine and plane performance and brandish their machine guns in the slipstream; the radio operator makes and receives routine reports. Every minute it is in the airplane the crew functions as a crew.

Before they take off, the officers and men of the crew meet and confer on the mission they are about to fly. It may be for 2 hours or 12; it may be a tactical job of bombing some distant objective or just a check flight after repairs; whatever the mission, the crew, as a crew, fixes it and the manner in which it is to be performed firmly in their minds. Then they go out and climb into their huge airplane.

Let's go with them on a flight to bomb a target representing an enemy naval concentration out in the Gulf of Mexico. There will be three other bombers on the mission and you will bomb from 400 feet.

You stand with the instructor in the big pilot compartment while the pilot and co-pilot check the formidable bank of instruments and switches with which they are surrounded. The co-pilot reports to the control tower and you hear the tower's clearance in the radio phones you have clapped to your ears.

A Marvel of Efficiency

With a smooth and thunderous surge of power the great Fortress lunges down the runway, lifts its tremendous weight and takes to the air. It circles slowly as it climbs and the earth below becomes dim in the early morning haze. In a few minutes you are in a tight little world of blue mist and then the plane breaks out on top of the clouds and there is nothing under you but thick cotton, bright in the sunlight, piled in high rolling ridges and cleft by bottomless valleys. You go back into the body of the airplane, squeezing through the loaded bomb bay on a narrow catwalk.

Back there the engineer and his assistant are seated on piled-up parachutes, leaning on their machine guns and looking out the windows. The engineer gets a call on the inter-communication telephone and goes up front to fiddle with something under the pilot's seat.

You inspect the airplane closely and find it a marvel of efficient arrangement. It is an expedition which costs you a severely pummeled head as you collide with machinegun handles and other necessary gadgets in your unwary passage through the plane's low and narrow gangways. You find that no space is wasted; everything is carefully put in some allotted niche, its accessibility determined by the likelihood of instant need.

The Gunner's Compartment

You find the gunner's compartment in the tail the most fascinating part of the ship and you sit back there, your feet comfortably elevated, and for the first time in your life see the airplane in which you're flying all at once.

It's quiet back there and through rifts in the clouds you see the land slide past until you swim over a strip of breakers and there's the gulf under you, calm and serene. The low clouds are all behind now, and you are floating in eternity, the deep blue gulf below, the white clouds high above and the dirty gray wisps of scud flying past the wing tips. It is very difficult to believe you are riding through this infinite peacefulness on an angry bird of war bearing death in its belly and deadly venom even in the little compartment where you are so sleepily content.

Somebody crawls back to give you a Mae West jacket and you have to scramble out of your narrow cell to accomplish the intricate maneuver of putting it on. So you go forward to the pilot compartment again and drop down to the roomy little cabin in the nose where the navigator and the bombardier share a solitary sovereignty.

The navigator is busy with a protractor and rule and the bombardier, his shirt off, is hovering over his bombsight. The gulf skims by under the glass nose, freckled with whitecaps, and you have the uneanny sensation of floating unaided in space, nothing under you but the sea and nothing above but the mountainous clouds.

The bombardier nudges you and points and you see that your plane has been joined by the other three, the result of minute calculations worked out by your navigator and theirs, and all four are flying along in formation. You learn the target is only about an hour ahead.

The navigator calls you over to his table and points to a chart which has nothing on it but a network of squares over which he has penciled a lot of lines.

"We're going down here and then come up this way," he says, following the lines with his pencil. "We'll make our bomb runs in line after we straighten out here. We'll probably be intercepted."

You say "yes," and look pleased at the prospect and then go back to the pilot compartment, where you will have a grandstand seat for the fight with the fighters. It is not long in coming.

You do not see the signal, if there is any, but suddenly the engineer is in the forward turret, just behind the pilots; the assistant engineer has opened a hatch in the side and has a gun pointing out of it, and the radio man has done the same on the other side, and you see the stern of the instrument man disappearing down the gangway to the tail. The instructor explains that the assistant engineer ordinarily would be in the belly turret, but they're not using it.

The Fighters Appear

All of a sudden there is a flash of shadow and a fighter whips from under the Fortress in a sharp, climbing turn. The four big ships have tightened their formation and the fighters are playing round them like incredibly swift dolphins round a school of sleepy whales. The fighters come from everywhere at once, and the gunners back in the belly of the ship are very busy, and the turret behind you swings smoothly from right to left and the guns follow the fighters down in their dives, shifting quickly from one to another.

You can see the guns of the other Fortresses converge with yours on one fighter after another and you look at that tremendous fire power and calculate that you would not like to be in one of those fighters if they were really shooting. Fortresses in formation are poison.

After an exhibiton of skillful flying any carnival crowd would give good money and a couple of sunburned tonsils to watch the fighters pull away in the clouds and the bombers fly on toward their target. You go back to the bombardier's office to see how it's going to be done.

Bombs Find Their Mark

You do not see the targets because you do not know where to look for them and the airplane is flying an erratic and wavering course. The bombardier shifts a lever to a position marked "salvo" and puts a finger on a switch. An amber light goes off and a green one comes on, meaning the pilot has started his bomb run, and the bombardier, very intent now, is glued to his sight. Then his finger flips the switch and you feel the airplane bounce just a little and then it swings widely and banks and you can see the bombs falling and now you can spot the targets, white splotches on the water. After an eternity the bombs splash among the targets and bombs from the other Fortresses already are in the air.

On the way back the fighters come out once more and you have a pleasant little brush with them before they swarm away and leave you to the peaceful business of winging home again. Eight hours after you left you are back again and the Fortress swoops down to the runway and taxies up to the line and the crew climbs out and stretches its legs and holds a postmortem on the mission.

All practice bombing is not so involved. Ordinarily, the planes go out to a bombing range loaded with dummy bombs and fly back and forth over the same target while the bombardier drops one bomb at a time. This gives pilots and bombardier the practice they need to make their functions dovetail perfectly and add up to hits.

Administration Training, Too

In ordinary practice bombing, the pilots approach the target on a straight run, fly over it and then turn back and fly over again, their course a series of wide arcs which intersect over the target and describe a four-leaf clover pattern in the sky. This gives them and the bombardier a different approach each time and a bomb run from a different direction.

Besides training in combat flying, the school here gives student officers experience in administration. They and the enlisted students are organized into squadrons with commanders, executives, adjutants and all the other functionaries of military organization. But flying and fighting is the central theme.

Here the Army is building teams to fly and fight the big bombers now going into production in the Nation's new factories. When the planes are ready, the crews will be too.

And these crews, soon to be turned out at the rate of 150 a month, will be trained for the sort of warfare America wants to wage. They will be trained to carry the fight to the enemy.

portation director, declared "every owner of a motor vehicles in public or private service should realize that he holds this vehicle in trust for the national war effort and that it should be used only for purposes of necessity."

This statement of Eastman's applied to the whole country, not merely to the East.

Gasoline consumption in the East and Oregon and Washington already is cut by one-third below normal, by a limitation on supplies to filling stations.

Today's new order made no mention of the Northwestern States, where improved supply conditions have been accompanied by speculation that the restrictions may be lifted.

On May 16, WPB explained yesterday, the Office of Price Administration will place in effect a temporary emergency gasoline card rationing plan in the East, which will remain in effect until July 1, when a more elaborate rationing program will go into operation.

Tires a "National Resource"

Price Administrator Leon Henderson previously had set May 15 as the day for card rationing to begin.

Meanwhile, officials declined to give any hint as to the possible ration allowance for each motorist, under the card system. The final decision presumably will be made on the basis of supply figures given WPA and OPA by Ickes' office.

Eastman, in a statement issued in connection with the creation of a division to administer sweeping new powers over all rubber-tired vehicles, warned that the rubber shortage is a "grave reality."

The director asserted that automobiles and tires now on the road are a "national and not a private resource." He did not amplify his remark, but other Office of Defense Transportation spokesmen said it was "purely rhetorical" and did not imply Federal requisitioning of vehicles, tires or tubes.

Hangar and aircraft on airways were set afire and there were heavy explosions after the pilots had dropped the 500 and 250-pound bombs. Rangoon, which the Japanese occupied March 8, is the seahead and main supply base for the Japanese invasion of Burma.

until items in default have been paid for in full, or have been placed on an installment basis for payment in six months. Such installment payments must not be less than $5 a month or $1.25 a week.

The regulations exempt single payment loans by banks and finance companies which are made for real estate, stocks and bonds, educational, hospital, medical, dental and funeral expenses, credit to dealers, fire and casualty premiums, agricultural production loans, business loans and insurance policy loans.

Installment Buying Shrinks

Extension of credit to the Federal and local governments and to hospitals, schools, colleges and charitable institutions also are exempt. The board said:

"The regulations are extended to cover a comprehensive list of durable and semidurable goods for civilian consumption, and contemplates that the volume of outstanding consumer credit, already substantially diminished, will be further contracted in keeping with the Government's purpose to prevent the rapid bidding up of prices."

Maximum down payments on many articles at present have ranged up to 20 per cent with an 18-month period in which to pay the balance.

Board officials originally had intended to freeze charge accounts at 30 to 60-day periods. After a survey, however, it was found that such drastic limitation would work a hardship on most retail establishments.

During the last two years, installment buying has shrunk at a rapid rate as a result of withdrawal of many articles from the civilian market. In 1940, the Commerce Department reported retail credit sales of seven billion dollars. At the end of last year, this volume had dropped to $5,800,000,000. The volume has been further reduced so far this year.

test there, Gov. Harlan J. Bushfield, candidate for the Vice Presidential nomination in 1940, took a 3-to-2 lead over Olive A. Ringsrud, secretary of state.

With half the precincts reported in the First District Congressional races, Representative Karl Mundt (Republican), who was attacked as having opposed the national Administration foreign policy bills, and former Representative Fred Hildebrandt (Democrat) held leads that virtually assured them victory unless the trend of the vote shifted.

The Republican gubernatorial four-way contest was a close race with none of the candidates able to muster a 35 per cent majority after a third of the precincts had reported.

Bankhead Renominated

In Alabama, the only other State to nominate for Governor, Chauncey Sparks, who ran second for the office four years ago, led four other candidates.

Senator John Bankhead was renominated without opposition in Alabama. Of the State's nine incumbent representatives, six had no opposition and two were leading their opponents on early returns but Representative Luther Patrick trailed John Newsome, Birmingham businessman.

In Indiana, where the 12 incumbent Representatives sought renomination in a delegation cut to 11 by reapportionment, five of the incumbents led their opponents on initial returns. They were Representatives Boehne and Ludlow, Democrats and Grant, Harness and Johnson, Republicans. Six were unopposed.

Green Has 32,970 Votes

Florida, with five Representatives at present, gained a sixth through reapportionment. Three of the State Congressmen appeared headed for renomination while Representative R. A. (Lex) Green of Starke and Earnest Overstreet of Miami were running a nip and tuck race for the State's new sixth seat in the House.

With unofficial returns from 381 precincts out of 1480 tabulated, Green had 32,970 votes, Overstreet 24,877, Wallace Tervin of Bradenton 4194 and Barney Cohen of Orlando 3687.

Returns from 37 out of 260 precincts in the Second District gave Emory P. Rice of Jacksonville 1262 votes, Zach Douglas of Gainesville 1174, James Cary of Jacksonville 1068, James Boyd of Jacksonville 758, T. W. Parsons, jr., of Jacksonville 121 and Helen Hunt West of Jacksonville 118.

Representative Robert F. Sikes of Crestview, incumbent in the Third District; Representative Pat Cannon of Miami of the Fourth District and Representative Joe Hendricks of Daytona Beach in the Fifth District held such wide leads in their races for renomination that it appeared they would not have to go into the run-off primary. Representative J. Hardin Peterson of Lakeland, incumbent in the First District, was unopposed.

44 Days in an Open Boat, 12 Men Escape From Java in Perilous Voyage to Australia

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, May 5.—Twelve air force men have reached Australia after sailing for 44 days across 1500 miles of open sea from Java in a lifeboat, a feat which naval authorities acclaimed as one of the great open-boat voyages of history.

R. A. F. Wing Commander Peudwine was permitted today to tell the story of the navigation feat in which he and his companions, eight Australians and three other Britons, made good their daring escape from the Japanese-occupied Dutch East Indies.

They were becalmed and storm-damaged. They were menaced by a whale. They were seen—but ignored—by a Japanese submarine, and unseen by an Australian flying boat which they hopefully sighted.

When the escape was planned, Peudwine related, only two lifeboats and one motorboat could be found.

When they set out March 6, he said, there were 30 men in each lifeboat and five in the motorboat along with a limited food supply, a sextant, two compasses and one map.

Unfortunately, the motorboat and one lifeboat were wrecked in a narrow passage and all but the chosen dozen had to stay behind.

Jeudwine said the crew of 12 was completed and the refugees set sail again at dusk of March 7, leaving behind an inferno in the town where the Dutch had blown up installations.

After being becalmed through the first night, Jeudwine related, a slight breeze sprang up the next afternoon and the little boatload had just begun to move "when a Japanese submarine surfaced a mile astern of us.

Her conning tower opened and we saw a Japanese officer scrutinizing us through binoculars. She approached within 50 yards, made a half-circle, then sailed away."

The rudder broke during a storm, he said, and three Australians appointed themselves a committee of shipwrights and worked three days to fix it. Again, a violent storm tore the repaired rudder loose once more and the men patched it up with another 36 hours of toil with makeshift tools and bits of wire.

One man was named purser, Jeudwine said, and he fixed a small daily water and food ration. The first water supply became contaminated in a storm and a shortage threatened until another storm provided a new and adequate supply.

"To help maintain morale," he related, "we instituted the navy custom of 'Saturday night at sea.' On Saturday nights we gave all hands an extra ration of beer and opened a bottle of whisky. All had to toast the King's health as well as give the old navy toast to wives and sweethearts.

"Then we ran into a calm and for six days lay on a glasslike sea. The heat was terrific.

"To keep everyone amused and good-tempered during those days we organized a series of games and mental tests like naming the longest list of film stars.

"A month after the start we received our worst fright.

"A mighty whale surfaced 200 yards astern, blew and came right alongside, its powerful tail beneath us. Then its head appeared. I was certain it was not more than 3 feet away.

"All kept perfectly still while the monster stared at us for what seemed a lifetime. Then, suddenly, it submerged."

Jeudwine told how rescuers finally sighted them and flew them to the mainland after they had put ashore on Fraser Island, a tiny sandy mound, which lies only 4 miles off the coast of western Australia.

"After 44 days at sea we were like drunken men," he said. "Our legs would not support us and most of us promptly fell over. But after breakfast we set off again.

"We saw a flying boat and flashed mirrors at it, but it passed on. Later it turned out that the pilot thought we were a pearling lugger.

"The next day we saw another flying boat and raised a pajama jacket as a signal of distress. The boat alighted and the pilot was extremely cautious, but eventually he offered to take six of us aboard. Only three volunteered.

"The rest resumed the boat voyage, but the next day he again appeared and said he had orders that we be taken aboard and flown to Australia.

"Our health was remarkably good. There were some ulcers, abrasions and eye trouble from the exposure.

"We made a point of swimming overside daily."

Skoda Arms Factory and Stuttgart Plants Pounded in Big Raids by British Bombers

By the Associated Press

London, May 5.—Giant new British bombers struck deep into the heart of Germany and her vassal states overnight, hurling bombs on both the Skoda arms works at Pilsen in old Czechoslovakia and on factories at Stuttgart in the Reich's southwest.

Other British planes attacked German airdromes in France and Norway and shipping off Norway and Holland, and fighter squadrons sped across to France again this afternoon on new expeditions.

Zeebrugge, in Belgium, was the target during one of four daylight thrusts across the Channel. The British said that in these forays they lost six planes and destroyed four German craft.

Four bomb-carrying German fighters made a brief attack on a southeast coast town early tonight, inflicting a number of casualties in small homes which were demolished.

Concentrate on Stuttgart

The heavy British bombers, in a force officially described as "strong," concentrated the bulk of last night's attack on Stuttgart, with the prime target the Bosch Works which produces magnetos and other electrical equipment.

Stuttgart is also the home of the great Daimler Benz and Hirth factories which makes engines for planes and tanks.

The long-range, four-motored Stirlings, which carry 8 tons of bombs each, went on to attack the Skoda works in what was Czecho-Slovakia. Before the war it was the second-largest arms plant in Europe, and today it it one of the main sources of the German army's heavy guns and tanks.

Heavy clouds screened most of the targets, so that full observation of results was impossible.

Four Ships Are Bombed

It was the war's seventh raid on Stuttgart and the fourth on Pilsen, which las' was raided by the big stirlings April 25.

In continuing war on Nazi shipping, the most spectacular achievement was the bombing of two ships in Kristiansand harbor, southern Norway, by an Australian who hurled his American-built Hudson into the inlet almost at sea level.

Two other ships were as hit off the Frisian Islands.

The Germans overnight raided the English south coast, and four of their planes were reported destroyed. The Berlin radio said Cowes and Eastbourne were the targets.

End Forecast Soon

London, May 5 (U.P.).—Air Marshal Arthur T. Harris, chief of the R. A. F. bomber command, predicted in an interview with the Sydney Sun's London correspondent that "the day is coming when the United States and ourselves will put over such a (bomber) force that the Germans will scream for mercy," a dispatch from Australia reported.

"If I could send 20,000 bombers to Germany tonight," he added, Germany would not be in the war tomorrow. If I could sent 1000 bombers to Germany every night, it would end the war by autumn."

Famed Orchestra Disbanded, Clinton Seeks Flying Post

Roanoke, Va., May 5 (AP).—"Dipsy Doodler" Larry Clinton, swing band leader, composer and arranger, will be doing his directing in the instructor's seat of an Army training plane soon if his present plans go through, he said here today.

Clinton, who disbanded his orchestra recently after losing many of his musicians because of the draft, will take his examination for a flight instructor's license at Woodrum Field here Thursday. He owns his plane, has a private license and has logged some 250 hours flying time.

A native of Brooklyn, the orchestra leader said he was training here for the examination because flying is not as restricted in this area as along the coast.

D. A. R. Officer Lauds Stalin

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Chicago, May 5.—Delegates to the fifty-first Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution were assured today that communism is "practically nonexistent" in Russia.

The assurance came from one of their officers, Mrs. Tryphesa Bates-Batcheller, author, singer and D. A. R. State regent for France, where she lived for many years before escaping from Nazi-occupied Paris last June.

Mrs. Bates-Batcheller bluntly informed the D. A. R. members, who have directed unremitting attacks on Russia and communism for many years, that the principal hope of saving Europe now rests with Russia.

"Stalin is a university graduate and a man of great studies," she said. "He is a man who, when he sees a great mistake, admits it and corrects it. Today in Russia communism, as it was under his predecessors, is practically nonexistent."

Giving a detailed account of the hardships imposed by the Nazis on the French people, Mrs. Bates-Batcheller asserted that "slowly, surely, relentlessly, the screws of the German order are crushing out the life of France."

She urged the D. A. R. to adopt a policy based on the idea that "we must all help each other for liberty and freedom," noting that "my one object now is to make the people of my country realize the hideous suffering and terrible starvation and torture of the poor French people in Nazi-occupied France."

The congress adopted a resolution today pledging the D. A. R. to support the war through the purchase of war bonds and stamps.

Reds Smash At Nazi Bases

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 5.—Stealing the jump on Hitler, hundreds of thousands of Russian soldiers, tanks and planes smashed head-on today at three key German bases from which it was believed the Nazi dictator was planning his spring or summer drive.

Under command of Marshal Timoshenko, the first Russian general to turn back the German military machine with the recapture of Rostov last November, the Red army struck at Kharkov, Kursk and Taganrog in the strongest Nazi-held section of the long battle line.

Action also stepped up on the northern sectors, particularly the hard-fought Kalinin area northwest of Moscow. The army newspaper Red Star said the Germans were routed from one position in the Kalinin front, leaving 400 dead after a bayonet charge.

The Russians—both new and seasoned troops—were supported everywhere by a full winter's accumulation of British, American and Soviet equipment.

The Nazis are known to have been gathering troops in Kharkov and Taganrog, both of which have been reported within artillery fire of the Soviet lines, for a drive toward the Caucasus.

Sen. Holman Seeks Arnold's Views

Senate Subcommittee May Ask Him To Testify at Labor Bill Hearings

Thurman Arnold, plain-spoken assistant Attorney General, whose testimony on "antiracketeering" legislation last week was denied a House subcommittee, may be called on a similar measure in the Senate, it was learned last night.

Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, said he was "exceedingly anxious" to have Arnold testify on his bill to bring labor organizations under the Federal antiracketeering statute.

"I would like to have Mr. Arnold appear before the subcommittee in person," said Mr. Holman. "I sincerely hope it will not be necessary to ask the committee to subpena him."

No Decision Yet

Mr. Holman said he himself had not approached Arnold but in other quarters it was learned that members of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee have discussed his appearance with both Attorney General Biddle and his assistant, but no decision had been reached.

Senator McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona, chairman of the subcommittee, said he had "no statement to make at this time" on Mr. Holman's request for Arnold's appearance. He said a date for reopening hearings on the bill will shortly be set.

A House Judiciary subcommittee headed by Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, meanwhile prepared to act late this week on the Hobbs antiracketeering measure without any direct testimony by Arnold.

Labor Unions Accused

Mr. Hobbs last week made public an exchange of correspondence with Attorney General Biddle in which Mr. Hobbs asked the "benefit" of Arnold's testimony on his bill and Biddle said he felt he could not accede to the request.

Arnold on March 21 confounded many of his New Deal colleagues by accusing organized labor of coercive and restrictive practices damaging to businessmen, farmers and consumers. The Attorney General, who has similarly struck at the monopolistic practices of big business, was testifying on the Vinson bill to compel registration and accounting by labor organizations and trade associations.

Both the Hobbs and the Holman bills are designed to offset the effect of the recent Supreme Court decision which held that the Federal antiracketeering law did not apply to use of violence against truckers entering areas where union truckers operate under closed-shop agreements.

The same House subcommittee considering the Hobbs bill is expected to vote out in time for full committee action next Tuesday the Monroney bill bringing labor organizations under the antitrust laws. The Hobbs bill is expected to carry an amendment proposed by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, to impose penalties of $5000 or two years imprisonment for any person attempting to use violence to obstruct interstate transportation of war supplies.

The full House Judiciary Committee meanwhile met yesterday on the Vinson bill, requiring registration of labor unions and trade associations. The committee, closely divided on the measure, continued reading the bill and tentatively scheduled action for tomorrow.

In the Senate, Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said subcommittee hearings will open shortly on the Reed bill outlawing closed shop agreements. Van Nuys said war contractors will be heard in the first two weeks of testimony.

stamps, or whether special arrangement would be worked out so that stamps would be non-negotiable until after the war. If the latter is the case, the higher pay would be "sterilized" as an inflationary factor. Even if the payment were made in regular war stamps, however, it is lieved the tendency would be for the workers to retain the increases as savings, rather than turn them in for spendable cash.

Until yesterday, the unions involved in the conference had contended that the President's message a week ago permitted increases compensating for cost of living changes.

Mr. Roosevelt had said, "Existing contracts between employers and employes must, in all fairness, be carried out until the expiration date of those contracts." The shipbuilding agreements have another year to run.

Apparently taking cognizance of this argument, the President wired the conference on Monday:

"I recognize, of course, that under certain of the contracts, the shipyard workers are entitled to an increase in wages. However, since the contracts were negotiated our country has been plunged into war, and the Government has had to formulate a national economic policy to keep the cost of living down . . .

"The situation that now confronts you is that the full percentage increase for which your contracts call, and to which, by the letter of the law, you are entitled, is irreconcilable with the national policy to control the cost of living."

Taking the same tack, the decision on the building trades workers disputes declared:

"There should be no attempt to alter the wage scales more than to stabilize them and to bring into line some wage scales that seemed definitely out of line."

All of the 17 building unions involved had asked for higher wages.

74 Clubs Rotate 250 Cars To Transport U. S. Workers

The "Share Your Car" program developed by the Department of Agriculture during the last two months was outlined to representatives of 50 Federal agencies yesterday in a meeting in the Agriculture Administration Building to further President Roosevelt's appeal for transportation economy among Federal workers.

Ira Price, Agriculture administrative analyst, reported that 74 car clubs involving the rotation of 250 cars are operating in that department. Ruth Prosky of the Office of Price Administration, reported similar progress among OPA workers.

The principle of the Agriculture plan is to have the personnel office to act as a clearing house to group persons living conveniently near each other, who drive cars to work. A neighborhood captain is appointed to try to induce the neighbors to use their cars in rotating order for driving to work.

600 Drivers Necessary

Price said that this plan would not work in a small department. Because of the difficulty in finding workers living near each other in a city this size, a department must have at least 600 car drivers among its employes before starting such a plan, Price said.

The smaller agencies, he added, should combine their forces and make up bi or tri departmental car clubs. A meeting will be held again on May 19 to discuss progress and possibly to submit a report to the President.

The first private industry on record to have started car clubs is the Washington Gas Light Co., which began the idea March 1, and to date has more than 70 groups sharing cars coming to work. One group, driving in from Maryland, reports saving 100 miles of wear on cars and gasoline daily.

Transportation arrangers, similar to Agriculture's neighborhood chiefs, have been appointed in each of the gas company's six locations in the city.

Senator Harold Burton (Republican) of Ohio is the latest speaker announced for the "Share Your Car" rally to be held tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution Avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets. The Police Boys' Club Band will furnish the music.

2 Carloads of Helmets Arrive in Capital

Two carloads of helmets for civilian defense workers were received here late yesterday. Of the first 13,700, 9000 were distributed to air-raid wardens, and the rest distributed among other protective services.

The District has ordered 27,400 helmets, which were sent out from a Detroit factory two weeks ago. Due to transportation congestion, however, and the two cars getting lost for several days, only the first carload was unloaded yesterday.

The auxiliary firemen are slated for 2000 helmets, auxiliary police, 5000; the medical service, 1000; Civilian Defense headquarters, 50; and the rest will be used by the air-raid wardens.

Col. Janeway to Help With Communications

The Chief of Staff of the Third Corps Area, Col. Augustine Janeway, will come over from Baltimore today to help straighten out the snarls in the communications system of the District civilian defense organization.

National Civilian Defense Chief James M. Landis, will meet at 11 a. m. in the District Building, with Janeway; United States Coordinator of Defense for Washington, John Russell Young; F. S. Gay, Atlantic Telephone and Telegraph adviser to the National OCD; Col. E. Goring Bliss of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.; C. Melvin Sharpe, Public Utilities Chief of District Civilian Defense, and District Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles.

Maj. D. W. Paulett, detailed here by Janeway to advise in the communications investigation, will begin his duties at this meeting.

Another meeting called in an effort to strengthen a further weakness in the defense setup will be held tonight in the defense headquarters at Twenty-fourth and F Streets Northwest, when a committee from the Rescue Squad will meet with Fire Chief Shephen Porter and Battalion Chief Joseph Mayhew to discuss the possibilities of getting equipment for this squad.

The Reserve Squad, which does the heaviest work of any defense service, has practically completed its training, but has received no equipment. The meeting is called as a measure to forestall wholesale resignations from the squad as a result of the lack of implements.

Swapping of Food Surpluses Is Urged to Aid Americas

By the Associated Press

The possibility of governments swapping surplus foodstuffs in the Western Hemisphere for the benefit of children was discussed yesterday at the eighth Pan American Child Congress.

Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, told delegates from 21 American republics about present programs of stimulating food consumption and production in the United States.

These programs include, he explained, direct free distribution of surplus products to relief clients, the food-stamp plan, school lunches, "nickel-a-quart" milk programs for relief families and "penny-a-glass" milk for school children.

"Eight million relief clients and six million school children are now having their diets supplemented through these programs," he said.

"There are similar extensive school-lunch programs in Argentina, where over a third of the school children receive some supplemental meal, and in Uruguay, where over one-fifth of all school children are reached. Dental difficulties and skin diseases have declined noticeably since the school lunches were started.

"Uruguay, Chile, Colombia, Brazil, Peru, Venezuela, Mexico, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Paraguay, Cuba and Nicaragua all have breakfast or lunch programs for underpourished children, maintained by public subsidy or private charity.

"As the system of government subsidies for adequate nutrition is extended, it might be made even more effective by trading food surpluses of one country, such as wheat, beef or sugar, for surpluses of other countries, such as cocoa or bananas, to the advantage of the school children in both."

WPB Revives Plan to Permit Small Industries to Survive

A plan to "concentrate" limited production of nonwar items in a few small factories, leaving the rest of each former civilian industry free for war work, is being revived by the War Labor Board and may be instituted in as many as 30 different manufacturing fields, it was reported yesterday.

The "concentration plan," patterned after the British system, has long been discussed in Government production quarters, but the first promising attempt to apply it was not made until last week, when orders were drafted for the curtailment of the electric cooking and heating stove industry.

Under the plan, which is said to have received tentative support by the industry, only the smaller firms with an annual business of less than two million dollars, and located in areas where there is not a labor shortage, would be permitted to continue their regular manufacture. The rest would either go out of business or convert to war production.

Questions still to be decided are whether all the companies which continue to make stoves must make a standardized or "victory" model, whether trade names will be continued, and how to share the produce among all dealers.

The concentration plan is applicable to those civilian or nonmunition industries where some production will be required for the duration of the war, but not enough to warrant full production by all factories.

In these cases, the objective is to place all the continuing manufacture in one or a few factories, which would be allowed to operate at capacity. Other plants, relieved of partial operations, could be converted with maximum efficiency on an all-out munitions basis.

Some industries where the plan may be applied and where an effort may be made for standardized, "victory" model production, are the farm machinery, bicycle, typewriter, fire protection equipment, flashlight case, industrial machinery, lamp, musical instrument, office machinery and railroad equipment industres.

Most of these industries have already been curtailed, with the result that all plants are operating at a rate far below maximum capacity and maximum efficiency. Hitherto, the chief barriers to concentration have been lack of knowledge of the extent of continuing civilian requirements, unwillingness of each concern to forgo even the fractional peacetime production it now enjoys and fear of loss of its dealer organizations and brand name.

House Backs D. C.'s Physical Education Plan

An adaptation of Washington's public school system to wartime problems received the support of the House of Representatives yesterday, as the legislators approved a public school appropriation providing funds to extend physical education and basic aviation training in the school system.

To help "toughen" American youth to meet the requirements of the armed services and the emergency generally, the House approved an extra fund of $90,000 to further the physical training program.

The money, it was explained by the Appropriation Committee, will hire 45 new instructors and enable school officials to step up from two to five periods a week the physical education classes in the senior high schools. Expansion of the program to other grades can come later, it was asserted, since such a step was determined "unwise during 1943."

"With a year's experience behind it," was the committee's judgment, "the program can be adjusted to the junior high and vocational schools and the teachers' colleges during fiscal year 1944."

Praised during debate on the budget bill was the "ground school" aviation curriculum recently introduced into the high schools.

A fund of $3000 was authorized to expand a limited course of the same nature to the vacation school sessions.

Both Representative Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, and Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, lauded the program, asserting that it not only equipped the youngsters for actual flying training, but "fired their imaginations" with potentialities of aviatoin in time of peace.

The curriculum offered in the schools includes aerodynamics, theory of flight, mechanics, engineering, meteorology, air navigation, and related subjects."

Senators to Get Story of D. C. Housing Needs

National Housing Administrator John B. Blandford and other Government officials this morning will endeavor to present the Senate Appropriations Committee with a "complete explanation" of Washington's wartime housing needs.

If they are successful, there is hope the Senate may raise to 50 million dollars the $29,500,000 voted the District last week by the House. Although the 50 million dollars was authorized under a recent amendment to the Lanham Act, a House Deficiency Appropriations Subcommittee recommended the slash because—it was maintained—"insufficient and nebulous information" had been presented on proposed local housing projects.

Scheduled to give testimony to the committee this morning, in addition to Administrator Blandford, are Baird Snyder 2d, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, and a representative of the American Federation of Labor.

Also on hand, to answer questions, will be Commissioner Herbert Emmerich of the Federal Public Housing Authority and Leon Keyserling and Jacob Crane of the NHA staff.

Eliminated from the housing program by the House decision would be 4000 permanent dwelling units intended for families with incomes ranging from $1200 to $2200—although housing officials have said that in addition to these another 6000 units would be needed at an early date to help relieve congestion in the metropolitan area.

Of the $29,500,000 appropriated, 12 million dollars would go for construction of temporary dormitories for single workers and $17,500,000 to community facilities including hospital expansion, streets and sewers.

193,257 Sign for Sugar Rationing, 30,000 More Than First Day, as Kinks Are Ironed Out

Sugar rationing registration went into high gear in Washington yesterday as 193,257 citizens, by official count, filed in and out of their neighborhood public schools to top the first day's total by 30,220 applications.

Of the total registered yesterday, books were issued to 187,097, bringing the total number of successful applicants to date to 336,736, according to Lawson J. Cantrell, District rationing supervisor. The total registrants so far reached 348,952. Cantrell expressed jubilance at the improvement over Monday's registration, which was marred by a larged turnout of applicants than there were teachers and volunteers to take care of.

He attributed the improvement to the additional volunteer workers who answered his call and to the added rest given the teachers due to the schools being closed at noon.

No Complaints for Day

Cantrell said his office had received not a single complaint from persons who registered yesterday. At every one of the 121 schools where applications were taken and books issued, Cantrell said, all persons were registered by shortly after the 9 o'clock closing hour.

The rationing supervisor called particular attention to the "comeback" staged by the staff at John Quincy Adams School, Nineteenth and California Streets Northwest, where registration was held up for nearly an hour Monday because of failure to deliver the ration books. At the Adams school yesterday, Cantrell said, 6172 persons were registered for the largest total in any one school.

Cantrell again urged all persons to register, and assured those who might shy at doing so because they own excess amounts of sugar that they have violated no law so far. He said many people believe they might be fined or imprisoned if they admit to having a large amount of sugar at the time of registration.

Meanhile, grocers reported a brisk business in sugar, which had been banned from sale for more than a week until yesterday. The folded document known as "War Ration Book No. 1" was seen as commonly in the stores as billfolds and purses.

The customers seemed somewhat amused by the necessity of presenting the stamps as an auxiliary to the money which up to now would buy anything purchasable.

"If this rationing keeps up for awhile, though," one grocer said philosophically, "they'll get used to it just like they get used to everything else."

Earlier, many teachers replied to the complaints of persons who claimed they were turned away after lengthy periods of waiting in line with complaints of their own.

One teacher, in a letter to The Post, cited a long list of abuses she underwent during Monday's registration and ended with a demand to know why teachers should be called upon to do this work when there are "plenty of volunteer war worker groups in Washington who don't have to work for a living and would have been glad to do the job.

One Teacher Is Bitter

Another teacher told of a woman who became infuriated because of the questions asked her and deliberately overturned an inkwell, ruining a batch of the ration books. The same teacher cited as an example of the public's lack of consideration for "our purely volunteer effort" a woman who waited until after 8:30 p. m. to register for a family of 16.

"If I never see a spoonful of sugar again," she said bitterly, "it will suit me fine." The teacher added, however, that she would resume her task yesterday and carry on until registration ends.

Volunteer workers added to their complaints against registrants some rather harsh criticism of the officials in charge. One volunteer answered Cantrell's criticism of volunteers who didn't report with the charge that she reported for duty at 3:30 p. m. and after an hour's inquiry, failed to find anyone who knew what she was supposed to do. She said she didn't think any fair-minded person would blame her for going home in disgust.

"M" to "R" Registration Today

Registration for persons with names beginning with the letters "M" to "R" are to register today between 4 and 9 p. m. in any of 121 public schools in every section of the District "S" to "Z" groups are to register tomorrow.

Registrants are required to give accurate information as to their names, addresses, ages, height, weight, color of hair and eyes and the amount of sugar they currently possess, if any.

Registrants are permitted to have on hand a maximum of six pounds per person. If more than six pounds is declared, no ration book will be issued until their supply has dropped to at the most five pounds. At that time they may obtain their ration book by applying to their local rationing board. They may then purchase whatever amount will bring their store again to the six-pound maximum.

New Boy Scout Troop Seeks Equipment

Washington's newly - organized Boy Scout Troop 55 is conducting a drive for scouting equipment, new or used, including uniforms, camping accessories, an American flag and a troop flag, Scoutmaster Albert Greenberg said yesterday.

If donors will call or write the Southeast branch of the Boys Club of Washington, where the troop meets Friday nights, Scouts will collect contributions, Greenberg said.

Religious Clubs Of G. W. U. to Hold Meeting Tonight

The religious clubs of George Washington University will hold their annual spring fellowship meeting at 8:15 p. m. in Columbian House, Twenty-first and G Streets Northwest.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will be the principal speaker. Dr. Raymond John Seeger, associate professor of physics and director of the University Chapel, will deliver the invocation and Jessie Gardner, president of the Religious Council, will give an address of welcome.

Vocal solos, "Evening Prayer" and "There Comes Another Morrow," will be sung by Bill Zeller, a student in the School of Medicine. Following the music and Rabbi Gerstenfeld's address, a Bible quiz will be conducted under the direction of Howard Reese.

Dr. George Winchester Stone, assistant professor of English, and Dr. John Francis Latimer, associate professor of classical languages, will be captains of the two quiz groups.

District Budget Voted by House

"We have cut the cuff off the trousers," Chairman George H. Mahon (Democrat) of Texas, told the House in reporting his subcommittee's work, "but we have added the material somewhere else in the garment."

The allotments to both the Police Department and Fire Department were increased from last year, the latter receiving an addition of $104,665, most of which was earmarked for the hiring of 50 new firemen—20 more than Fire Chief Stephen Porter has asked for.

Also increased, by $117,270, was the water service fund, but the committee's report strongly urged that a study be made of existing water rates with an eye to raising them. It was pointed out that the water department has been forced to dip annually into reserve funds in order to meet expenses.

Construction of new water mains, water tanks and reservoirs to the extent of $1,105,000 were authorized, in order to meet the water demands created by the balooning population growth.

Largest single deletions in the budget made by the committeemen were the slashing of $1,427,695 from the originally requested school appropriation and of $71,102 from money asked by the Board of Public Welfare.

The House not only turned down the latter agency's request for additional personnel, but abolished the job of principal assistant welfare director—now held by Miss Gay B. Shepperson at $6500 a year.

The school construction cut, it was pointed out, was made at the suggestion of the superintendent of schools, since priorities and shortages would make building practically impossible at present. Some of the saving, however, was applied toward the erection of temporary buildings.

House Votes Fine on Unpaid Water Bills

The affairs of two of Washington's public utility services—water and electricity—were given a large share of the attention of the House yesterday, during debate on the passage of the District budget appropriation bill.

A provision designed to put teeth into the collection of delinquent water bills was approved as part of the bill, after it was revealed that local water users currently owe between $300,000 and $400,000 in back bills.

To make matters worse, the department is so understaffed that it doesn't have enough employes to turn off the water on all the delinquent accounts.

Reserve Funds Used

Partly as a result of these nonpayments, the Water Department was forced to draw more than half a million dollars from its reserve fund last year to meet its expenses, officials told a House Appropriations subcommitee during hearings on the budget bill.

As a partial remedy, the House authorized a levy of 10 per cent to be added to all water bills unpaid after a 30-day period. It was estimated that this extra charge would result in the collection of about 75 per cent of the outstanding bills.

The city's electric power rates were questioned by Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California, who urged that the Public Utilities Commission carry through a proposed investigation of the local rate basis.

Voorhis pointed out that a request for funds by P. U. C. Chairman Hankin to conduct such a probe had been rejected by the subcommittee as inadvisable "during this period of unstable conditions." Citing testimony given the committee, however, he asserted that such an investigation seemed unwarranted.

Dividends Soar

He referred to testimony that although rates here were described as among the lowest in the Nation, the Potomac Electric Power Co. dividends had soared to a new high of 65 per cent of stock value two years ago.

He declared that the increased profits had resulted primarily from the large-scale population increase—caused by "social conditions"—and that the people were entitled to a return of some of the boosted revenue.

Representative Stefan (Republican) of Nebraska, a member of the subcommittee, explained that his group had not meant to ban such a probe, but had felt that the P. U. C. could conduct it with present personnel and funds and would not require extra money.

Training Command To Move to Texas

Headquarters of the Army Air Force flying training command is being moved from Washington to Fort Worth, Tex., it was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount is commanding officer.

Although June 30 is the official moving date, advance representatives will leave Washington as early as June 1. The shift will involve approximately 100 officers and civilian employes, and their families. The command at present is located in the Maritime Building here.

35 Nurses, Internes Contract Tuberculosis at Gallinger

Thirty-five nurses and internes contracted tuberculosis while working at Gallinger Hospital last year, it was revealed yesterday in publication of testimony presented recently during hearings on the District appropriation bill before the House Subcommittee.

According to the testimony, the 35 contracted the disease because of overwork in the overcrowded institution, a condition created by the wartime population boom here.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, who gave the testimony, said that the general overcrowding of hospitals here has seriously impaired the health of nurses and internes.

The subcommittee hearings also disclosed other effects of the war on the community as follows:

Juvenile delinquency has increased 25 per cent.

Use of the library has sharply declined, a condition attributed to the unsettled state of mind and lack of leisure time.

There has ben a "substantial" increase in the consumption of beer and spirits, so that the per capita consumption here is the highest in the Nation.

Pickup Order Exempts Only Diamond Cabs

All District cab drivers except those operating the Independent Taxi Owners Association's Diamond Cabs will be ordered immediately to engage in emergency pickup service, the Public Utilities Commission announced last night.

The Diamond company will be allowed to remain out of the service until a public hearing is held on its petition that contractual obligations for the Union Station and certain hotel concessions are sufficient cause why it should not be compelled to enter the service.

At this hearing, the entire question of taxi concessions will be reviewed, said PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin, "to determine if the public is being adequately served, and if it is in the public interest that concessions should continue." Other cab lines which also have concessions will be represented at the hearing.

The Diamond association, which includes over 1000 drivers, had persistantly refused to enter the emergency service, and on May 1 the last day in which they could offer objections to being forced into it, had submitted 20 reasons.

The PUC in its opinion and order, which are due to be issued today, ignored all of these reasons but the argument of contractual obligation—which as a matter of fact the Diamond brief held was reason enough if all of the others should be disallowed.

Affected by the mandatory order were 276 independent drivers and associations. Of these 139 simply did not respond to the show-cause order, 39 gave reasons considered inadequate by the PUC, 30 expressed favor, and 68 merely acknowledged the order.

Vanderbilt Will Names Wife, 2 Children

New York, May 5 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, soldier and financier, left his entire estate—unofficially estimated at several millions—to his wife, Mrs. Grace Vanderbilt; his son, Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., and his daughter, Mrs. Robert Livingston Stevens.

The will, filed for probate today, formally appraised the estate at "more than $10,000."

Has America Anything to Fear From a Victorious Russia?

EDITORIAL

By HERBERT AGAR

There are two questions most commonly asked about Russia by those who seem not unwilling to weaken America's war effort. The first question is:

"Why should we, who dislike Communism, help a Communist state?"

The folly of the question can be suggested by turning it backwards. Suppose a Russian were to ask:

"Why should we, who dislike Capitalism, fight on the same side as the U. S. A.?"

If the questioner were not shot as a saboteur, he would certainly be jailed as a lunatic.

The answer is easy for a Russian. The German armies are battering at Leningrad, Moscow and the Caucasus. A huge area of Russian soil has been taken and plundered. A huge number of Russian citizens have been ravaged and murdered.

Russia is in mortal danger. She has sense to know it. She is, therefore, 10 times happy to fight on the side of any nation which is warring against Hitler. She does not inquire too sensitively into the social or economic credentials of the people who are helping to kill Nazis.

America is also in mortal danger. But lots of Americans don't seem to have sense enough to know it. They regard the war as a kind of club, into which they will admit only such people as would make suitable husbands for their daughters. This is not a sign that they are more discriminating than the rest of us. It is merely a sign that they are more stupid.

They will have to wait, apparently, until we, too, have our millions of dead, our burnt towns and our broken countryside, before they are willing to notice that this is a neck-or-nothing war. They would not worry about the economics or politics of the Russians if they knew that a year from now, if Russia falls, they may be losing their own silly lives; if they knew that the last chance to build a real America might be abolished by Axis victories within the next 12 months.

We are not playing for marbles. We are engaged in a tug of war in which the losers are murdered. Under such conditions, it might seem that we would be glad to have a large and burly fellow join our side, even if he had boils.

The second question, equally irrelevant, is this:

"If Russia has a large part in winning the war, may she not dominate the peace, and thus the world of tomorrow?"

To this there is a simple answer: If our side wins, Russia will only "dominate" the peace in case the U. S. A. plays a coward's and a sloven's part.

If we come home after the war, and creep into bed, and pretend that the fate of mankind means nothing to us, we shall not only have little influence ourselves, but we shall have done our best to destroy the influence of democracies everywhere. If the richest and most fortunate of the democracies behaves like a selfish baby, the prestige of freedom as an institution will naturally be diminished. To whatever extent it is diminished, the prestige of Russia will doubtless be increased.

If our side wins, there will be four great centers of power and of ideas in the post-war world: Russia, China, the British Empire and the U. S. A. Three of the four are committed to the democratic idea. If that idea is as good as we think it is, and if we serve it faithfully, it has nothing to fear from any opposing idea. It seems more reasonable for Communists to fear the "domination" of the democratic dogma than for democrats to fear that an inferior idea, backed by inferior force, will suddenly drive us off the map.

These answers to the two commonest questions about Russia leave out of account the question whether Russia has been a force for good or for bad in modern history. The main point to keep in sight is that an Axis victory means the end of all hope for centuries, that a victory by the United Nations gives a magnificent chance to build a tolerable world, and that a victory by the United Nations becomes infinitely remote if we lose Russia.

Challenge to Hitler Reported in London

War Sidelights

Singing Lady Fights in Her Own Way

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, May 5.—The "Singing Lady" of radio fame stood tensely in a hotel ballroom today and said that perhaps the time had come for departure from soft lullabies for little children.

She seemed so rigid; not the cool, calm Irene Wicker who sings in the afternoon to boys and girls across the land, and tells them stories of truth and make-believe.

Maybe, she said, children should know for what men are dying today, and for what little children may have to lay down their lives on another day.

The "Singing Lady" paused, then went on grimly. Now her eyes were wet, glistening.

"You writers," she told playwrights and authors attending the Institute for Education by Radio, "you writers know what you are talking about. Write . . . write for the children as well as the grown-ups. Write . . ."

The "Singing Lady" sobbed and turned away. Her mystified audience watched the slender, attractive woman walk swiftly from the hall. A man stood up.

"Ireene Wicker received word last night that her 19-year-old son (Flight Sergt. Walter Charles Wicker, jr.) was killed in action with the Royal Canadian Air Force," he said.

'Politeness' in Berlin

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), May 5 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels has begun "a politeness campaign" in Berlin, the German radio said tonight, and Berliners were asked to watch out for the "40 most polite persons."

First and second prizes will be a radio set and theater tickets.

Ring of Flying Forts

Philadelphia, May 5 (AP).—American flying fortress crews used their ancestors' Indian-fighting strategy in one phase of the battle for Java by forming their huge craft into a defensive circle — covered wagon style.

It was night and word came Japanese parachutists had landed near the Americans' base, Lieut. Robert Trinkle told University of Pennsylvania students last night at an Army Air Force rally.

"Since a take-off was then impossible," he said, "our commander ordered us to form the ships into a circle with just their powerful rear guns protruding.

"'Luckily,' for the Japanese, no parachutists attacked. At dawn, the fortresses took off and soon registered heavily on their designated target."

Generals Weighing Abolition of Nazi Order, He Is Told

By the Associated Press

London, May 5.—A group of Adolf Hitler's generals headed by Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch was reported today to have told the Fuehrer bluntly that if his 1942 campaign in Russia fails, they will try to institute for Germany an alternate plan of their own calling for "abolition of the Nazi system."

A responsible source with unusually reliable information about conditions inside Germany said Hitler had accepted this challenge calmly and appointed Von Brauchitsch a member of the supreme command.

Hitler relieved Von Brauchitsch as commander in chief last December 21 and announced that he himself, relying on his "intuition," had assumed direct command of his armies.

Compromises Hinted

The source said the incident might be interpreted in two ways:

1. That Hitler was confident of victory but needed the help of his former commander in chief and Von Brauchitsch's friends and hoped his appointment would win over critics; or

2. That he was beginning to recognize his weakness and was seeking compromises.

Von Brauchitsch was one of the strongest opponents of Hitler's plan for holding the forward positions in Russia through the winter and counseled a fall back from Moscow long before Hitler agreed.

Von Brauchitsch was said to have the confidence and backing of such important military leaders as Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, Col. Gen. Franz Halder and Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, recently appointed commander of the German and occupied coasts of Europe.

Peace Offensive Seen

All three were reported distrustful of Hitler's "intuition" generalship and his extension of greater powers to the Gestapo, with which the army frequently has clashed.

There was no hint in the information reaching London whether the Von Brauchitsch clique threatened Hitler with displacement or promised him some kind of chancellorship in the new order they would institute, if his plans failed, the source said.

The informant added that he believed the dissident generals might want to turn the campaign elsewhere rather than to Russia, and to halt offensive warfare and seek to hold Germany's gains by defensive fighting. The clique might even strive—by the removal of Hitlerism—to gain a negotiated peace favorable to Germany, the source said.

The informant said there had been hints of some kind of certain political friction involving Reichsmarshal Herman Wilhelm Goering.

Guerillas Raid Shanghai, Start Nanking Fires

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, May 5.—The biggest coordinated Chinese guerilla swoop of the war has been going on for the last two weeks, the fighters raiding 15 Japanese-occupied cities and causing vast destruction, the Chinese Central News Agency reported today.

The guerillas long had been operating on the fringe of these towns, but to no such extent as that reported by the agency, which said they crept into Shanghai, Nanking, Hangchow, Nanchang, Ninpo, Wuhu, Amoy and other places and set off numerous explosions.

Japanese naval headquarters, the electric power plant and the puppet Nanking regime's federal reserve bank in Shanghai were reported bombed while land and water communications were blocked.

Huge fires were set raging in Nanking, the agency said, and stretches of the Nanking-Wuhu railway were destroyed and highway bridges and telegraph poles blown up.

Loyal Chinese inside the cities cooperated with the guerillas by starting fires and throwing bombs.

On the night of April 20 when the raids began, Chinese troops preceded by plainsclothesmen entered Hangchow and so alarmed the Japanese that they locked the city gates, arrested several hundred Chinese civilians and began a house-to-house search after proclaiming martial law.

In spite of these precautions, the guerillas were reported to have started many fires and to have blown up bridges outside the city. Later in a fight with 2000 Chinese puppet troops, supported by 18 Japanese planes, the guerillas were said to have killed half their enemy forces.

The guerillas, who maintain an elaborate espionage system, apparently took advantage of the fact that Japanese garrisons in the raided cities have been reduced by withdrawals of some 400,000 troops from China to other battlefronts.

Army Escapes Ban on Civilian Commissions

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A move to prevent the Army from commissioning civilians as officers despite their lack of military training collapsed yesterday in the House Military Affairs Committee as that body bowed to War Department insistence that such a restriction would "sabotage" plans for building up the Army to a force of six million men.

The committee, in an executive session, reversed itself by striking out a previously approved civilian commission-banning amendment from a bill raising Army pay scales, after Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson indicated that the Army has its sights on a force 2,400,000 men stronger than this year's announced goal of 3,600,000.

The amendment, drafted by Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, would "sabotage the whole effort by putting us in a strait-jacket," Patterson declared in a public committee hearing.

In place of the Faddis amendment, the committee accepted language which would give the War Department full authority to bring into its officer personnel civilians possessing special knowledge, skills training or experience.

The new amendment, however, carried a provision requiring the Secretary of War to report to Congress every 60 days the names and qualifications of all persons commissioned from civilian life who lack prior commissioned military experience.

Committee Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, said the new amendment was satisfactory to the War Department and was approved unanimously after Faddis had agreed to withdraw his original amendment.

Faddis stated that the new language should remove the War Department's objection that his original amendment would "hamstring" development of a powerful, well-rounded Army, while at the same time giving Congress its first opportunity to check up on Army commission policies.

Faddis told the committee that he had received many complaints of unqualified civilians obtaining commissions, and declared that the War Department's officer-making policies were damaging the Army.

Bill to Be Reported Today

"There are bound to be some unworthy ones (officers)," the legislator told reporters, "but under the present system there were too many of them."

Its commissions controversy settled, the committee moved to report the bill, similar to a measure already passed by the Senate, to the House today. May said he would ask the Rules Committee for a rule later this week with the expectation that the bill may be called up for House action Monday or Tuesday.

The bill, providing increased pay for enlisted grades in all of the armed services, would double the starting pay of privates now receiving $21 a month.

In pleading with the committee to give the War Department full opportunity to avail itself of special skills abundant in civilian life but scarce in a peacetime Army, Patterson revealed that the Army "had in mind a commission" for Sergt. Alvin C. York, storied hero of the A. E. F. Under the original Faddis amendment, Patterson observed, Sergt. York "couldn't be commissioned because he held no commission in the last war."

The Signal Corps and the aircraft detection service are particularly in need of specialists, while the Army ferry command, undertaking the biggest airplane transport job the world has ever seen, would "utterly collapse" if the Faddis amendment became law.

Brig. Gen. John H. Hilldring, in charge of Army personnel, told the committee that officers and men for two automobile maintenance units, needed for overseas duty by July 1, were recruited from the auto industry while it was being converted to war production.

Patterson asked the committee to "trust the Army leaders," explaining that the present policy is to give commissions in the combat branches and for other strictly military functions, only from the ranks, through officer-candidate schools.

French Citizens Aided Raiders At St. Nazaire

By the Associated Press

London, May 5.—A battle raged for three and a half days after Commandos landed at the Nazi U-boat base at St. Nazaire March 27, and two British officers died heroically to assure destruction of the port dock gate by the explosive-laden destroyer Campeltown, the Free French press service said today.

The French population fought beside the blackened British raiders while intermittent explosions rocked the occupied French port, the news service said.

After the destroyer, one of those transferred in 1940 by United States to Britain, was firmly wedged like a massive time bomb against the gate, the Germans demanded that the two captured British officers accompany them on an inspection tour to prove no explosives were aboard.

"The British officers immediately agreed," the news agency said, "they accompanied a party of high German naval officers and engineers on board.

"No sooner were they aboard than the Campbelton blew up. The heroic British officers and all the Germans who were aboard were killed instantly."

The account said the Germans seemed stunned when the British began landing.

"The French population spontaneously left their houses and attacked the Germans in the streets," said the correspondent's account.

Free French quarters previously have said that about 500 Frenchmen were killed, including some executed by the Germans as a reprisal.

"The Germans showed signs of panic," the correspondent added. "They then were expecting a full-scale British invasion and 2000 of their sailors were immediately ordere to evacuate to the interior."

By 8 a. m. on March 28 a temporary calm had been restored, he said, and the Germans had succeeded in retaking the submarine base.

"But at 7 p. m., the old entrance to the submarine base at which two delayed-action torpedoes had been fired the previous night blew up with a violent explosion. As though by prearranged signal, fighting immediately broke out between the Germans, who had completely lost their nerve, and the French population and Commandos. A series of small but furious battles were fought in the streets, cafes and private houses."

The hostilities continued over the weekend and only ended on Tuesday, March 31.

Neitzey, jr., son of a Fort Belvoir civilian employe, shot himself through the head Monday afternoon and died late that night at the post hospital, Fairfax County police reported yesterday.

The child's mother was upstairs at the time of the tragedy, which was witnessed by two other Neitzey children.

Temple Baptists Call New Pastor, Plan New Church

Officials of the century-old Temple Baptist congregation, Tenth and N Streets Northwest, yesterday revealed plans for calling a new pastor and for moving to a new location.

The Rev. Luther Jenkins Holcomb, former pastor of First Baptist Church, Durant, Okla., and executive secretary-treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, has accepted a unanimous call, effective May 31, it was said.

Following his arrival, the congregation will break ground for a chapel at Sixteenth and Juniper Streets Northwest. A larger structure will be erected when building materials are available, according to church officials.

Dr Holcomb will succeed the Rev. Randolph Gregory, who entered the Army Chaplains Corps recently. The new pastor is the son of Dr. and Mrs. T. L. Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn. He is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Bethune Back For Sedition Probe

Missing Witness Reappears, Says She Was Working on a Book and a Play

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Ann Bethune, missing witness who arranged distribution of Representative Clare E. Hoffman's "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech, reappeared, yesterday and declared she was willing to go before the special grand jurors on Axis agents when their session is resumed Friday.

A Nation-wide search for Mrs. Bethune was ordered several days ago.

Attorney General Biddle's squad of special prosecutors investigating sedition here said they believed Mrs. Bethune could give valuable information about the financing and control of some of the widely scattered defeatist publications under suspicion.

Deputy United States marshals had tried in vain to reach Mrs. Bethune at her apartment at the LaSalle. She had left no forwarding address, the staff said, and her mail was accumulating. It was suggested that she had come to harm.

Working on Play and Book

"I wanted to be undisturbed," Mrs. Bethune told The Post yesterday. "I have been working on a play which has a national aspect, as well as on a book. I find it impossible to concentrate on such work if I am disturbed by telephones and mail and such things.

"So I went to New York. My friend, Mrs. Julia Wheelock, of the American Legion national board, had planed to stay in my apartment, but did not arrive. Had she done so she would have been able to give my New York address.

"As it was, I knew nothing of what was happening here, until another friend wrote me that it was reported in The Post that I was 'wanted.' I was on the train in 30 minutes, and got back Saturday, but did not receive a subpena until yesterday.

"Certainly I know Mr. Hoffman, as I know many of our fine Congressmen, and I arranged for distribution of his speech against 'Union Now.' I am against 'Union Now,' my ancestors fought in the Revolution.

Decided Against Seeing Hoffman

"I don't want to talk about it. This grand jury may ask me about distribution of the speech, and I don't want to talk about it to anyone else. I was going up to the Capitol to see Mr. Hoffman, but I decided against it."

Among those who distributed the "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech and were being questioned before the grand jurors about the time Mrs. Bethune was subpenaed were Gerald B. Winrod, publisher of The Defender magazine in Wichita, Kans., and E. J. Garner, 78, editor of the weekly paper, Publicity, in Wichita. Garner and his son, James F. Garner, were indicted Saturday for criminal conspiracy and 10 counts of sedition.

"I don't know them," said Mrs. Bethune, "and I don't know how anybody could have gotten the idea that I was in Wichita when I was in New York."

The special prosecutors—William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N. (j.g.) and John T. M. Reddan—will resume the sedition investigation of Social Justice magazine Friday, as well as question Mrs. Bethune. The Attorney General conferred at length yesterday with Maloney, Hickey and the chief of the criminal division, Wendell Berge, who is guiding the Nation-wide sedition inquiry.

Called to testify Friday are E. Perrin Schwartz, nominal editor of Social Justice—although Charles E. Coughlin has admitted "full responsibility"—two employes of the magazine, Frank Traznick and Bernard O'Connor, and two women who work in Coughlin's offices in the Church of the Little Flower, where he is pastor, Miss Marie Rhodes and Miss Eugenia Burke.

Accused of sedition by Attorney General Biddle, Social Justice gave up its second-class mail franchise without a fight Monday, but the prosecutors declared the investigation would go on in the courts until the last guilty man was dealt with.

German Language Paper 'Cleaned Up'

Accused of sedition last Thursday and ordered to show cause on May 14 why it should not be barred from the mails was the German-language newspaper Herold, of Philadelphia.

Harold Ambrose, executive assistant to Postmaster General Walker, announced yesterday that the May 2 issue of the Herold would be carried by the Postoffice Department. Ambrose said the department solicitor, Vincent M. Miles, had reviewed this issue and had found it much subdued and chastened. The seditious features previously noted, the solicitor ruled, have been cleaned out.

However, Miles emphasized that the May 14 hearing still would be held and that no future issue might be mailed until it was reviewed.

Nelson Assails State Legislation

Numerous State laws and regulations are hamstringing the war effort and their prompt abolition is vital, Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, told the Federal-State Conference on War Restrictions yesterday.

He cited case after case of interference with production.

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, expressed a similar warning, calling on the various States to eliminate obstacles to the free flow of interstate commerce.

The three-day conference, which began yesterday, will be continued with morning and afternoon sessions today in the Commerce auditorium.

28 Jap Planes Blasted as D. C. Officer Leads Pacific Raid

By the United Press

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne, May 5.—Allied planes, one flight of them led by 52-year-old Brig. Gen. Martin F. Scanlon of Washington, D. C., have damaged or destroyed at least 28 more Japanese planes and spread fiery destruction among two of Japan's largest invasion bases, it was announced today.

The assaults were made yesterday by American flying fortresses, Catalina-Consolidated medium bombers and new cannon-firing fighters against Rabaul on New Britain Island, and Lae, in New Guinea.

At least 23 planes were accounted for in those raids, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's fifteenth communique said, and another five were shot down by Allied fliers in beating off an unsuccessful attempt by 19 Japanese fighters and bombers to raid Port Moresby.

The Rabaul raid, the second since Saturday, was led by Scanlon, a veteran of two wars with the United States Army Air Corps. At the controls of a flying fortress, he led his men through what was described as "some of the worst weather ever encountered since the Allied air offensive started." The raid was described as "most successful." Big fires were started at the airdrome and in military buildings and all planes returned safely.

MacArthur's communique said supply dumps were blown up, big fires were left eating their way through airdrome installations and runways and troops were bombed and machine-gunned.

It said three enemy planes on the ground at Rabaul were blasted by direct hits and that an airdrome area on which 20 planes were dispersed was plastered with bombs.

The Lae raid was made by new fighter planes, and an unspecified number of enemy planes on the ground were damaged bringing the day's total to more than 28 planes, the communique revealed.

American fighter planes damaged four Japanese bombers and one navy "Zero" fighter of a formation of nine heavy bombers and 10 "Zeroes" which tried to attack the Allied base at Port Moresby. The enemy fleet did not even reach the airdrome.

2 Navy Pilots Get D. F. C. for Rescue of 17

By the Associated Press

Two naval pilots were awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses yesterday for their daring rescue March 9 of 17 survivors of a torpedoed United States merchantman who were afloat on a raft near San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Distinguished Flying Crosses were awarded by Vice Admiral Royal Ingersoll, commander of the Atlantic fleet, to Ensign Francis E. Pinter, Naval Reserve cadet, 28, of Bethlehem, Pa., who was serving as pilot of the rescue plane, and Lewis McKinley Thompson, 42-year-old chief petty officer of San Diego, Calif.

Pinter, with Thompson giving expert assistance in controlling the motors, set his ship down on a rough sea, and the plane crew removed 16 men and 1 woman from a life raft. Then, although his seven-place plane was overloaded by 18 persons, Pinter took off and successfully completed his journey.

The Navy's previous report of the incident said that Pinter did not even throw away his depth charges in order to lighten the plane and make the job easier because he hoped that he might sight a submarine raider on the way to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where the survivors were set down.

The third officer in the plane, who was commended, was Ensign Isaac Glenn Shively, 27-year-old naval reservist of Fayetteville, Pa.

Enlisted men commended were: Stanley Burton Bezanson, aviation machinist's mate first class, 24, Wollaston, Mass.

COMES A WIRE.

"Thought you would like to know that Luise Rainer, stage and screen star, just appeared for the United States Treasury Department Special Events Division of the War Savings Staff at the Toledo bond rally and made appearances at several plants, making short talks, and also spoke at the Civic Auditorium in the evening.

LUISE RAINER

"Miss Rainer's visit was responsible for the sale of over four million dollars in War Bonds, this being the largest individual sale of any stage or screen star, to date. Miss Rainer made one of the finest talks yet delivered at a bond rally and was complimentated very highly by all the officials of Toledo. Regards. CARLTON DUFFUS, in charge Motion Pictures & Special Events Division, United States War Savings Staff, Treasury Department."

One wonders, on the strength of this emphatic testimony, if the motion picture moguls might be overlooking a valuable asset in ignoring such a grip on popular interest. Miss Rainer, a two-time Academy Award winner, has not been seen on the screen since shortly after the bestowal of her second "Oscar." It is doubtful that her recent Broadway appearance in the revival of Sir James Matthew Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella" had any appreciable bearing upon her appeal to the residents of Toledo. Yet she was the instrument of a four-million-dollar bond sale. An odd sort of eclipse that Miss Rainer has gone into!

Good News for Our Desk Phone

To forestall public anxiety and save wear and tear on the telephone company and our good ear, it is pleasant to announce that both the Olney and Roadside theaters will have downtown boxoffices to serve the straw-hatters during the steaming-pavements-and-wilted-collars season.

Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the Olney makes known that beginning with his opening attraction—which is by way of being Eddie Dowling in "George Washington Slept Here," on May 18—and thereafter, tickets for his operas will be available to all and sundry at the Homer L. Kitt ticket wicket at 1330 G Street. The sale will open there next Monday, May 11.

As in the recent past, the Roadside pasteboards will be on sale at Mrs. Dorsey's Bureau, in Droop's, Thirteenth and G Streets. But that will only become important as June 15 creeps a little closer.

Anyhow, call them, don't call us—if it's all the same.

Not planned, so far as we know—Steve seemed as surprised by it as we were—but a genuine coincidence, is the opening of the Olney on May 18. That was the precise date, back in 1925, that the Cochran broke out the first edition of his National Theater Players, destined to become the foremost stock company in the United States over a period of a decade. In that original troupe were Edward Arnold, Minor Watson, Romaine Callender and others whose names now are breathed with awe in Hollywood and scrambled for by the autograph albums.

Merrymaking in Maryland

It may be a little late to mention it, but Happy Johnny and His Combined Show, from Station WBAL, in Baltimore, is the special attraction haunting the Sidney Lust theaters on the outskirts of the Capital this week. At the Milo, in Rockville, for the last times today, and at the Hyattsville, in Hyattsville, Md., and Cameo, in Mount Rainier, Friday and Saturday, in conjunction with new screen bills each day.

With the new spring musical, "Count Me In," coming along Sunday for an eight-day run at Catholic University, it is well to bend an eye to the achievements of Ann Ronell; who has supplied the music and lyrics for the Walter Kerr-Leo Brady topical revue. Not forgetting such song hits as "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?", "Rain on the Roof," "Love and I," "Willow Weep for Me," "Baby's Birthday Party," "There's Magic in Music" and many others, Miss Ronell also has contrived a complete new version of the opera "Martha" and the libretto and lyrics for an original opera, "Ship South," to be performed in Carnegie Hall in the fall. Her songs have been featured in such pictures as "The Big Broadcast of 1935," "Champagne Waltz," "Algiers" and the Deanna Durbin starrers. In between times, Miss Ronell has found opportunity to collaborate with Alice Duer Miller on "Roberta" and "The White Cliffs of Dover;" with Vicki Baum, on "Grand Hotel," and with Samson Raphaelson on both "Jason" and "Skylark." So count me in on "Count Me In!"

A Lake for a Creek!

Hollywood, Calif., May 5—Wonder why Paramount wants Katie Hepburn for "Frenchman's Creek" when they've got Veronica Lake under contract. After all, David Selznick took a chance on Joan Fontaine in "Rebecca," and Veronica has proven her worth not only in "Wings" but several other pictures. She's the perfect type for it.

KATHARINE HEPBURN

Incidentally, Freddie March, in "I Married a Witch," costarring with Veronica, looks like a million. I saw some of his rushes, and he's got all the dash and go he had when we first saw him on the screen. He gives entire credit to Teddie Tetzlaff's photography.

At last I have an idea why Garbo wants to be alone. She doesn't like to comb her hair. She dined at Dave Chasen's the other night with a wind-blown bob, apparently done by an egg beater. Which reminds me of Van Heflin dashing onto the set the other day with his hair all blown, and asking men sitting around for a comb. The only one who could produce one was Donald Meek, who's virtually bald!

Dottie Lamour, liking people on tour to call her "Dottie" instead of "Miss Lamour," worked out a scheme with Edith Head, designer, to have her initials, D. L., or her whole name "Dottie" embroidered on all her clothes which she had specially made for the trip. The boys can't complain that Dottie's going to look like a widow in mourning. She's going to be bright as a bluebird, thank goodness.

Now that our Hollywood Victory Caravan of stars is hitting the big cities, wonder why somebody didn't think to send two or three stars ahead to auction off the seats, as we did in the last war, for the Red Cross. The auctioneers were De Wolf Hopper, David Warfield and Raymond Hitchcock. Some of the boxes in the various cities sold for $5000 apiece. It was the largest advance sale ever known.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, May 5—Because the Saturday Evening Post still feels the repercussions of the Milton Mayer article about Jews, the new editors of the magazine invited Justices Frankfurter and Stone to write an article of reply. The jurists stated that they couldn't write such an article before June, when the Supreme Court adjourns . . . They recommended that the article be written by Wendell Willkie, whose offer to write such a piece had been rejected. In addition, many of the protest letters sent to the magazine suggested that Willkie write the reply. And so Willkie now has agreed to write the article —which will be in defense of all minorities.

Individual Income Taxes Up for Study

The House Ways and Means Committee today will turn its tax lens on individual incomes after falling $589,000,000 short of the Treasury's revenue mark for corporations.

Advocates of a sales tax, who predicted the loss will be more than offset by last minute resort to a sales levy, suggested the committee may not go to the steeply increased individual rates recommended by the Treasury.

The Treasury has asked that another three billion dollars be raised from individuals, with resort to a withholding tax if necessary to collect income taxes in many cases more than doubling present levies. Supplementing that program, the Treasury will present schedules designed to carry out the President's request for a $25,000 net limit on individual incomes.

"Nest Egg" Proposed

Committee action meanwhile was postponed on varying proposals to allow corporations a post war "nest egg" to be reserved for their account out of the proposed 94 per cent flat excess profits tax.

Colin F. Stam, Congressional staff expert, yesterday outlined the British postwar plan, which will pay back to companies after the war 20 per cent of the 100 per cent excess profits tax exacted. The committee this morning will hold another brief session on the refund proposals before turning to individual income taxes. It was tentatively decided to wait for some reaction from the country before a vote on any of the refund proposals.

Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia said that British experience showed that "from the standpoint of increased incentive and efficiency, increased revenue and increased employment after the war, provision for postwar reserves is of vital concern to the country."

Robertson Backs Plan

Robertson, who urged a 95 per cent flat excess profits tax, a combined 40 per cent normal and surtax and a 20 per cent postwar refund in recent testimony before the House Naval Committee, is leading the fight for adoption of the so-called "Davidson" plan in the committee.

The committee agreed to a 94 per cent flat rate on excess profits, and held normal taxes to 40 per cent, but appeared far from a vote on the "nest egg" proposal. Against the 20 per cent reserve, in use by the British, the Treasury is suggesting that 10 per cent of excess profits be held to each corporation's credit, and remain tax free after the war. There was strong committe sentiment to raise the reserve another 10 per cent, but make it all subjct to taxes when paid back after the war.

Committeemen predicted there would be little more than "preliminary discussion" of proposed individual income tax increases today. If the Treasury's individual income schedules are trimmed to a par with action taken on corporations, the bill will fall more than one billion short of the Treasury's total seven-billion-dollar revenue goal. Some members expressed the private view that the Administration may accept a sales tax supplement, once the inflationary movement of prices is halted by the forthcoming general price ceiling.

Reading Room Specializing in War Material Dedicated at Public Library by Charles Taft

EX LIBRIS: Commissioner Guy Mason, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, member of the District Public Library's board of trustees, and Charles P. Taft, assistant director of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, shown at the dedication yesterday of the war reading room of the library at Seventh and K Streets Northwest

A war reading room, containing a collection of books, maps, pamphlets and other material concerning war, was dedicated at the District Public Library yesterday by Charles P. Taft, assistant director of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, who described it as "one of the great services that the library renders."

Taft, introduced by District Commissioner Guy Mason, said the room would be of particular interest to service men, helping to make them "better rounded people and better fighters."

Its books on the causes of war, traditions of democracy, the American way of life and postwar planning provide "something to chew on" for everybody and are of inestimable value in giving the reader "a sense of proportion," he said.

Technical information available in Office of Civilian Defense material at the reading room, he added, is of utmost value to civilians here.

Commissioner Mason, presented by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, member of the library's board of trustees, said the collection would provide an outlet for "disturbed emotions" of wartime.

Thanks to the board of trustees and to Miss Clara W. Herbert, chief librarian and her staff were expressed by Mrs. Meyer.

Establishment of the room, she said, is an indication that Miss Herbert and her staff "want to make all of their great resources more effective and more useful for Government officials and for the citizens of Washington."

The dedication ceremonies were followed by a reception.

23 Men Lost In 3 Sinkings Off East Coast

By the Associated Press

Toms River, N. J., May 5.—A small Norwegian freighter was sunk off the Atlantic Coast April 30 by an enemy submarine that was sighted on the surface just before the attack, the Fourth Naval District announced today.

The ship's entire crew of 36 was rescued after drifting about 14 hours in lifeboats.

Three crewmen were injured slightly by fragments of the ship's hull which fell into one of the lifeboats.

23 Lost in 2 Other Sinkings

Cocoa, Fla., May 5 (AP).—Eighty-eight survivors from two torpedoed freighters—one British and one of the United Nations—have reached safety with spectacular stories of a heroic naval rescue at sea and of a gun crew that risked death to keep firing upon an Axis submarine.

The Navy revealed today that the two vessels fell victim to torpedoes off the Eastern United States Coast early on the morning of May 3. Twenty-three lost their lives in the sinkings.

Seventeen of them died when a torpedo struck their lifeboat as it was being lowered over the port side of the medium-sized United Nations freighter. Another of the ship's crew was killed, and 46 survivors were brought to an East Coast naval air station.

The other five were killed in the engine room of the medium-sized British freighter, from which 42 survivors were brought to the naval station.

Two Navy men, Ensign John F. Gray of Champaign, Ill., and Radioman James Wesley White of Jacksonville, Fla., were heroes in rescuing Thomas Jones, 27-year-old able-bodied seaman of Birkenhead, England.

For most of the United Nations' ship's crew, it was the second torpedoing in three weeks. They were aboard a British ship sunk earlier, but volunteered for service after having been landed at an East Coast port.

When the British ship was torpedoed and began to sink, John Park, senior pilot of Vancouver, B. C., gave orders for the ship to be abandoned.

Hearing on Legislation to Exempt Teachers, Brings Demands for Repeal of Hatch Act

By the Associated Press

A Senate hearing on legislation to exempt teachers from the Hatch Act brought demands yesterday for repeal of the law, which curbs political activities of many persons paid from Government funds.

"This is a monstrosity in a free country," declared Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, after representatives of teachers' organizations had testified that under the law faculty members of institutions receiving any kind of Federal funds were barred from participating in even local elections.

When Senator Green (Democrat), Rhode Island, chairman of the Elections Committee conducting the hearing, reminded Smith that the Hatch Act was not before the committee, but only an amendment, the South Carolinian retorted:

"Well, it ought to be."

"I hope we have an opportunity some day to get rid of it," said another committee member, Senator Murdock (Democrat), Utah.

Beneficial Eelement

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, author of the amendment to exempt teachers, told the committee that under the Hatch Act members of the faculty of the University of Michigan were prohibited from participating in local elections in Ann Arbor when party labels were used.

"This is most unfortunate," he said. "It is wrong to take out of political life one of the most beneficial elements."

Donald Du Shane, secretary of the committee for defense of democracy, National Education Association, declared the act already applied to "hundreds of thousands of teachers" and added "it is perfectly conceivable that it will apply to two-thirds of the teachers in the country when they get through interpreting it."

Appearing as a representative of the friends of public schools, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, said this organization opposed Brown's amendment. He said techers should be subject to the same restrictions as everyone else under the Hatch Act.

Further Restrictions Forecast

With a considerable extension of public funds going to colleges and universities, and even to private universities, said Prof. James K. Pollock of the University of Michigan, further restrictions on the activities of teachers may follow.

"You shouldn't put teachers in the same class as highway employes," he declared.

Another witness, Miss Mabel Studebaker, of Erie, Pa., representing the classroom teachers of the NEA, said that teachers were taking "the line of least resistance" and veering away from political discussions in order not to run afoul of the Hatch Act.

Prof. Alonzo Myers of New York University told the committee that the "kick back" system was followed in some cases in hiring teachers in Clinton County, N. Y., and other small rural areas.

He explained that under this system the local school trustee or trustees hire the teachers who then are required to "kick back" part of their salary.

"I am glad to say, however," he added, "that is not the rule."

Dr. Prado

Dr. Manuel Prado, President of the Republic of Peru, who arrives in Washington this afternoon, is a doubly welcome visitor to the Nation's Capital.

He is welcome, first of all, as the Chief Executive of a sister American republic which, without fear or equivocation, demonstrated its solidarity with the United States at the recent Rio conference. There was no hesitation on the grounds of Peru's exposed seaboard. Indeed, she severed diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan, even before the conference came to an end. At Rio, also, Peru demonstrated her firm belief in the principles of hemisphere solidarity by agreeing to a peaceful settlement of her boundary dispute with Ecuador. More recently, the deep and abiding friendship which exists between Peru and the United States has been manifested in the economic sphere by the signing of an agreement under which this country is to purchase 200,000 bales of Peruvian cotton during the war.

Dr. Prado is also welcome here on his own account. He is a man of great distinction and considerable accomplishments. In the full vigor of middle age, he can look back upon a notable career as soldier, scholar, businessman and statesman. His country has an enviable record of advanced social legislation, and Dr. Prado, a true liberal, has had much to do with it. In the two years since he became President of Peru he has rendered yeoman service to his nation and to the Americas. We hope he finds us as hospitable as he and his fellow countrymen are to us.

Nazis Fight Inflation

When most of the things that people want to buy are rationed or nonexistent, savings may accumulate for lack of consumption outlets even in the poorest of countries. That, no doubt, largely explains why the German savings banks report an increase in public savings deposits of between 55 and 65 per cent during 1941. Since these idle funds constitute a potential inflationary menace, the German Government has taken steps to immobilize or freeze them, at least in part. According to a report in the current issue of Foreign Commerce Weekly, published by the Department of Commerce, a decree of last October set up so-called "iron savings accounts" for German wage and salary earners. Special tax inducements are offered workers to participate in the plan, which calls for deposit of a designated amount of earnings in special accounts that cannot be touched until a year after the end of the war.

As an anti-inflationary expedient this plan is interesting. But it is also significant for another reason: it indicates that even an all-powerful totalitarian government hesitates to tax out of existence or "freeze" by mandatory decree the people's savings. Perhaps it would be more correct to say that an increase of purchasing power resulting from colossal government outlays inevitably outstrips the efforts of the tax collector to mop up that excess.

Germany is likewise struggling with the problem of how to control prices and limit industrial profits without destroying productive efficiency by removing the incentive to reduce production costs. Her approach to this knotty problem is unique. It is certainly not a solution that would appeal to Americans, who wish to preserve and maintain the hold on life of smaller, relatively high-cost business establishments. Briefly, the Germans have classified war producers in accordance with their cost of production records. Representative prices, uniform for each group, are set on war materials supplied by them. And woe betide the manufacturer who is so unfortunate as to be assigned a low rating. He is compelled to fill orders at the set price, though at a loss, until he has been reclassified. For those producers in the lowest-cost group, however, there are special rewards. They are exempt from excess profits taxation. Furthermore, they are given priority in labor and materials.

The higher-cost establishments, on the other hand, have to pay excess profits taxes, and they are the first to suffer from a contraction of orders. Here is no spreading of war work and war contracts, but a deliberate effort to concentrate such work in establishments having the best facilities for low-cost operations. With German industrial capacity handicapped by manpower shortages and material scarcities, such a concentration serves a double purpose. It not only lowers costs but also makes for better utilization of productive resources in men and goods. Our problem so far has been a different one: that of bringing into use the idle facilities that, given our abundant resources in men and materials, can be used to advantage in speeding up war output.

Getting There First

The United Nations have been caught napping so many times in this war that there will be wide satisfaction that they have got there "fustest" in French Madagascar. The northern tip has been occupied by British troops. But the enterprise is Anglo-American. And the State Department has warned the Vichy French that the United States will take action against any opposition to the occupying force. That warning underlines the distrust of the Laval regime which the State Department expressed in blistering terms in the communication of April 13.

Few more brutal documents between nations in peaceful relations have been written in the history of diplomacy. Laval and his fellows were described as "that handful of Frenchmen, who, in contempt for the high tradition of liberty and individual freedom which has made France great, have sordidly and abjectly, under the guise of 'collaboration,' attempted to prostitute their country to that very regime in Germany which is bent upon nothing less than the permanent enslavement of France." In these circumstances only the worst construction was possible of recent Japanese comings and goings in Vichy.

Vichy's collaboration with Japan, as a matter of fact, has been as sordid and abject as its collaboration with Germany. The Franco-Japanese pact of September 22, 1940, provided for the landing of Japanese troops and the establishment of air bases in Indo-China. In that way Indo-China became the springboard for Japan's amazing career of conquest. On the basis of this precedent alone, there could be only one purpose in Japanese visits in Vichy—namely, a sell-out of Madagascar. It was to prevent just such a sell-out that the United Nations have taken action.

Any other course would have been suicidal as well as foolish. Madagascar occupies too vital a position in the complex of the war strategy to be allowed to pass into enemy hands without a struggle. Madagascar on one side and northern Australia on the other form opposite angles of the huge watery triangle of the upper Indian Ocean. The apex of the triangle is the tip of the Hindustan Peninsula. Japan, with her new success in Burma, threatens India. Part of her fleet is now operating in the Indian Ocean. If she were able to add Madagascar to Singapore, Sumatra, Java and Northern Australia, her control of the ocean would be complete. This accomplished, access to India via the Cape of Good Hope would be closed along with the Mediterranean. India, in other words, would be isolated and ripe for the plucking. That is the stake which called upon the United Nations to take the initiative at Madagascar.

Possibly the hairline which keeps up the pretense of our relations with Vichy will be snapped as a result of French resistance at Madagascar. That would be merely a matter of form which it might be wiser to leave to Laval. The fact is that a complete rupture has been discounted since Laval became Hitler's viceroy in France. The only thing that now counts is our war strategy.

In this connection it is of the utmost importance that elsewhere as at Madagascar we must keep a step ahead of Laval. President Roosevelt made this clear in the references to France in his last radio address when he said that the United Nations would take whatever moves are necessary to prevent the Axis from using Vichy territory as bases. The time is at hand to apply that policy to North Africa and to French possessions in this continent. A strong suspicion exists—and it is fortified from South America in connection with recent sinkings—that Axis submarine bases exist in both areas. We must get there first, too. And we must get there in enough strength.

Pulitzer Prizes

Recognition of Miss Ellen Glasgow in the latest distribution of Pulitzer Prize honors, though somewhat belated, is nevertheless gratifying. In the department of fiction the judgments of the board have not been invariably happy. This time, however, there will be little quarrel with their judgment, though most critics probably will agree that Miss Glasgow's latest novel, "In This Our Life," is scarcely up to the quality of "Barren Ground." That book, it will be recalled, was passed over in 1926 in favor of Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith," thereby affording Mr. Lewis the opportunity for his theatrical refusal of the prize.

This year the task of the judges was rendered fairly easy by the relative scarcity of distinguished books in the field of letters coming within the rather narrow terms of the Pulitzer bequest. Revolutionary times like these operate in favor of journalism rather than literature or scholarship. Thus it was in the several categories of journalistic performance that the judges were presented with an embarrassment of opportunities. This was especially the case in the department of war correspondence. For never perhaps has an assignment been more ably managed than by the American reporters who are covering this war.

All will agree that Mr. Larry Allen of the Associated Press has fully deserved the honor awarded him, though there may be some who think that the committee might have found a way to mention a few other correspondents whose work has been almost remarkable and whose adventures have been almost as exciting as Mr. Allen's. The award to Mr. Louis Stark, labor reporter of the New York Times, is rather a recognition of able and conscientious work, not merely during 1941, but for many years. The same may be said about the prize given to Mr. Geoffrey Parsons of the New York Herald Tribune, whose influence is daily perceptible in one of the most capably managed and written newspaper editorial pages in the world.

We Can Eat

Some months ago Secretary Wickard proclaimed that the war would be kept out of the kitchen. Those were not his exact words, but his intention was to assure the public that there would be plenty of food for all of us. The Secretary, of course, was speaking in terms of production. And in this respect his thesis is still valid, for there is a superabundance of many domestic staple foods. But we know now, with the imposition of sugar rationing, that he reckoned without the transportation factor. For this reason we shall probably have to get along for a long time on short rations of sugar. Yet continental sugar growers have been given the go-ahead sign, and within the next year at least a start will have been made toward a greater domestic production. This is but one of several reasons why the present sugar ration of half-a-pound a week should not be considered a permanent allotment.

Rationing officials are clearly determined not to make overoptimistic estimates of the sugar situation. This is proved by the fact that the present ration is somewhat less than that first imposed in Britain and Germany shortly after the war started. If supplies available to us prove to be greater than originally estimated, it may be that the weekly ration will be increased. But, regardless of the experimental nature of sugar rationing, the thing to bear in mind is that for all the developing impact of a war economy Americans will unquestionably continue to have enough to eat. Most of us take this so much for granted that we never stop to think what it would be like to exist on the short rations available to the peoples of the other countries at war.

Thorwald Stauning

Sturdily independent most of his life, Thorwald Stauning ended it as Germany's captive Prime Minister of Denmark. It must have been a sad end for Stauning. He had hoped that his epitaph would describe him as Denmark's Grand Old Man. The judgment of him now will be mixed. Of course, there was never any possibility that little Denmark could resist the Nazi invader. But Stauning, who first became Premier in 1924, had been so awed by the Nazi threat that even before the war he constantly turned his back on feelers for a Scandinavian alliance or federation. "If there is any trouble," he once said, "we don't want any help from Sweden, nor would we go to Sweden's aid." Berlin patted Stauning on the back for that speech, and called him a realpolitiker. So Denmark lay alone and helpless till the time came for Germany to take over the country and despoil it of its larder. The next order after Germany is beaten will see an end of the independence of the narrow Stauning type. Survival for the small nations, in the absence of collective security, can be insured only by federation.

THE PLANES GO OVER

In the hollow of clear sky the throb of thunder.
All day the planes come over, distant and lonely;
Their shadows fall like moths down the wooded slopes,
Sink and rise to sight again, and run
Rippling and soft over the rolling plains.
All day the wings and the burrowing snouts in the sun,
The shadows rippling and rushing over,
Like shadows of minnows on sandy bottom
In clear streams of light.

Midway between the hills, the level farmlands,
The earth being turned, the tractor's blade deep-slicing,
The farmer sitting and watching the fresh soil curl away.
Toughened and calm his face, his eyes grown quiet
With inner voice of the fields and the skies of long winters.
The fields stretch far; he bends and watches the soil
The planes go over, the shadows flicker across him;
He does not look, he does not hear their thunder;
Hand on wheel, and the tractor's roar and the curling earth;
Acres that lie ahead, and the seed that will flower.

Dump Truck Bottleneck

As a daily commuter from Arlington to Washington I am brought twice a day into irritating contact with one of wartime Washington's minor harrassments, the clogging effect of the dump trucks from the approaches to the new War Department Building on the already swollen traffic of Arlington Ridge Road.

Granting that the swift completion of this project is of the first importance, there is still no reason why thousands of workers going to and from their war jobs should be so delayed. A laborer with a red flag, who is clearly no expert on traffic control, stands where the trucks emerge onto the road and halts lines of traffic half a mile long before a truck is even in sight. And when finally it appears there is only one. Half a minute later the process is repeated a little farther down the road.

The solution, obviously, is for the men controlling traffic to wait before they halt traffic until eight or ten trucks are ready to leave. If this were done, the tempers and arteries of those who must use this road might be saved for future use.

Aliens

I wish to call your attention to an error of fact that appeared in your "Letters to the Editor" department on May 2. In a letter signed by J. Anthony Marcus it is stated that "15 millions of aliens have lived here for years and failed to become American citizens."

We wish to advise that there are approximately 4,500,000 aliens in the United States. This figure represents less than 3½ per cent of our total population.

It might be of interest to note that of the total number af aliens in the United States, approximately 2,500,000 are eligible for citizenship. Of that number approximately one million have already taken steps to become naturalized.

Leaders' Fights

Down here on the primary and elementary levels in the great American scene one doesn't have to be expert in the mechanics of rhetorical analyses to fully get it that the increasingly bitter controversies between personages of the executive and legislative branches of the Federal Government don't make "unity sense" in this conduct of all-out, and all-over war, now the one and only business of the American people—each and all!

The rights of Government headmen to disagree with conviction and to defend their positions vigorously are not challenged by the crowds. In the latest flare-up owing to differences between a United States Senator and one of the chiefs in the executive office of the President, the merit of accusation and the duty of "defense" are conceded. What hurts is, airing of these disputes publicly in the newspapers; inasmuch as the crowds follow the leaders, and split into noisy, differing groups, each seeking to talk loudest. National unity, like individual obligation in this war, calls for sacrifice, and the least the Government leaders could do would be to sacrifice publicity and reach accord in meetings behind closed doors. It would be difficult to apprehend in what way the enemy could get less aid and comfort from the public airings of discord among the leaders of Government in this democracy than from publishing of military information that is kept secret.

"Support of the President" in leading this war on our account carries an obligation on the part of the heads of Government to afford us no opportunity of dividing support by taking sides in their publicly aired wranglings. "We are the mules; not the drivers!" The Government leaders must get together.

Indian Attitude

Perhaps it would help America to understand the policy of India if we knew something of the complex causes underlying the new "nonviolent, noncooperation policy." I was a member of a missionary family in India in 1919 and heard first-hand accounts of the crisis of that year which precipitated India's attitude today. During World War I, India cooperated to the fullest with the British Empire, sent over a million troops and gave whole-heartedly not only of her time but money, in the belief that England would guarantee India's freedom after the Versailles Treaty. We all know what happened at that treaty; India was denied everything she asked for. England's answer to her plea for equal rights of democracy was—Amritsar.

In 1919, protesting against English taxes, a large gathering of unarmed Indian men, women and children were mercilessly machine-gunned by British General Dyer. He marched his soldiers off the field and refused to let relatives get to help the wounded and dying. India never forgave the British for this; rose as one man in unified revolt—but not with violence. All India, at that time, listened to the voice of one man who could lead them: Gandhi Every man, woman and child at once resigned from English civil posts, barred British goods and went back to native spinning-wheels and Khaddar. Gandhi counseled India well at this crisis. Four hundred million people obeyed him, allowed themselves to be beaten, ill-treated, thrown in jail, etc. Born in the blood of Amritsar, India's policy today is a direct outcome of this tragedy. Let us, then, not be too harsh in our judgment of India. India has precisely the same psychosis in regard to England's promises as has—shall we say—Ireland. It is a knowledge derived from first-hand experience.

Perhaps we of the Western world need to fundamentally alter our mental concepts of the picture in Asia. The real roots of World War II are found in the complex situations in India and China. After the first World War, France and England failed absolutely to live up to their "democracy" slogan and decide the vital issue between colonial imperialism and democracy. The whole scheme of "ruler" people fighting for control of "subject" people is archaic and should have no place in a twentieth century blue-print for the coming age of world freedom.

The old laissez-faire imperialism is as dead as the militant Fascist and Nazi imperialism employed so revoltingly today by Italy and Germany and Japan. We are fighting a global war, but let us not confuse the issues. When we think of the "slave-masses" and "slave labor" of Europe, let us also think of the masses in India, held in bondage for 180 years by laissez-faire imperialist policies which refuse to admit the dynamic implications of the stirring nationalism of the great mass of Indian peoples, under their leaders, Gandhi and Nehru. What America and the whole world is really fighting for now is a complete cooperative world democracy. Let England give India her freedom. She will be the first to cooperate in assisting the United Nations against the hateful Axis.

$25,000 Income Exceptions

In fairness alike to meritorious hospitals, homes, social service organizations, educational institutions, and other enterprises operated on a nonprofit basis in behalf of the public welfare which depends mainly upon the support of people of large income and generosity, I suggest a means by which the President's proposed limitation of the annual net income of every individual, after payment of taxes, to $25,000, with the spirit of which I am generally in sympathy, and may be put into effect was as little injustice as possible.

My suggestion, briefly, is that every person having an income in excess of $25,000 a year shall be privileged to file with the Government evidence of his or her contributions toward the support of worthy nonprofit institutions within each of a designated number of years (perhaps ten) and that the average per year for such period shall indicate the sum that it shall be his or her privilege to bestow annually, during the emergency, upon such institutions, exclusive of the $25,000 provided for by the proposed ceiling on income.

While it is probable that most such benefactors would prefer to continue their donations to the same institutions and in about the same proportions as in previous years, it might well be permissible to make revisions in such a contribution list, perhaps under certain safeguards, possibly including consultation with an advisory committee or other body representing the Government.

Experience through many years in public welfare work has revealed to me that persons of large income differ as widely in their degrees of generosity as do persons of small income. Some rich men may have professed to assist substantially numerous worthy enterprises while in fact helping few if any and those few if any very meagerly, but many a person of large means, actuated by purely philanthropic motives, has been known to "give till its hurts."

The plan that I suggest would reward the liberal contributor in the past to meritorious nonprofit enterprises by permitting him to continue his worthy work, even in the duration.

There, too, is the question of commitments for insurance and other purposes, which, in the case of a man of very large income, might easily equal or exceed the proposed $25,000 maximum. A sense of justice would seem to dictate that, upon presentation of ample proof, such commitments, entered into prior to a specified date, should be permitted to remain in force.

The Post Impressionist

Sic Transit Gloria

It might have been an Italian Renaissance Palace if it weren't for the Fifth Avenue buses outside the window. And it was labeled a preshowing before a New York auction sale, when the wind from the tall windows came in and moved the black-numbered orange ovals on everything from the faded seventeenth century Genoese red velvet window hangings to the walnut wainscoting in the long gallery. It was the bay-windowed brownstone front at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street which belonged to Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney before her death on April 18 last.

In a Louis XV carved gilt chair I sat down on some tapestried animals from La Fontaine's Fables and I leaned my back against cartouches of figures of the Enfants Jardiniers after Huet. And from that chair in the grand ballroom of the house, I watched coming through the door, the ladies who had known Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney before her death. They had known her from dinner parties, from newspapers and magazines, and from lines along the sidewalks. And I knew her as "a" Mrs. Whitney . . . a long thin woman with a large mouth, pleasant perfume and a nice speaking voice, who sat two seats in front of me in a Short Story Class until the week before she died. She wrote stories of the Restoration Comedy variety about lovers who came to the back doors of ladies houses . . . stories funny and very unpublishable in the Ladies Home Journal . . . while I struggled with the plots of my moral tales of the little people of the world. And then she died and fairy tale fashion the newspapers and the students in the class turned the long thin woman into "the" Mrs. Whitney.

In my chair for a moment I was moody with a sic transit gloria melancholy because I had drunk deeply of the past in the rooms of the house. I had walked over imported marble floors, stared at a succession of Italian mantels, stained glass windows, and curves of twisted gold bedstead. My eyes had wandered through the ancient Aprils of Gobelin tapestries with Bacchic nymphs and infant satyrs, and along carving banks of tapestried seashore with a Fontainebleau Diana. The spirit-me had rested with a Beauvais tapestried Aphrodite seated on a cloud and my spirit-ears had listed to the musical putti who were always ready to play elfin music but never played it. And then I moved on and was lost in the masses of threaded people of the Brussels tapestries.

So I came out of the tapestries and began to talk to some of the ladies who had known Gertrude Vanderbilt. There was one who knew her from lines along sidewalks. She was in a red velvet chair when I came at 2 o'clock and she was there in the same chair when the slants of sun were long on the marble floors. "Ain't it grand?" she said. "I've been here since it opened at 10 o'clock. I've been dreaming things."

"Dreaming things," I said after her.

"Thinking I was young and dancing here in the ballroom," she said. And I saw her dreams rise around her like a mist. Her leathery skin was pink like the painted French ladies down in the music room. Her dancing dress was the red of the wall hangings and her heavy hips and ankles were suddenly molded to the stream-lined curves of a Gibson girl. Then she put one of her calloused hands on my arm. "You'd never know I sold hot dogs at Coney . . . sitting here like I am," she said. "And it only cost 50 cents . . . it's like in the movies."

"You'd never know," I said, and I knew that Gertrude Vanderbilt would have been glad that she was there.

Then I spoke to a lady who had known Mrs. Whitney from the pages of newspapers and magazines. She was a motherly woman with a moderately flowered hat, the traditional D. A. R. bosom, and cheeks flushed with excitement. "It's nice, I guess," she said, "for Europeans and people who are used to living in palaces, but the only room that's homey is the little music room downstairs. I don't see how Mrs. Whitney could stand it." And she forgot that the small things which make a home homey had been removed and its last owner had moved away from the high-ceilinged heaviness of the house as soon as she could.

"And that's just what I need for Tim," said an Irish lady, staring at the gold swirls of an Italian bedpost. "We had an old-fashioned bed once with slats . . . and when one of the slats would fall it would always stop him snoring . . . ." I knew that "a" Mrs. Whitney who was in my Short Story Class would have welcomed these ladies who had known her from the pages of newspapers and magazines.

And then I spoke to a woman who might have known Mrs. Whitney across the dinner table . . .

"Of course, of course," she said. "Everything is imported. They wouldn't put anything American in the house. It's Europe that has real culture. Now when I was keeping house in Paris I bought . . ."

And when she finished speaking, I said, "Maybe it is American . . . this house. It is America frantically gathering up the strings of her past left in her old house and bringing them to her new house."

"But it isn't," she said in an annoyed voice, while I saw Americans marching through the gilded age and through the period right after buying the marble floors from Italian palaces and buying the carved wood of the walls of monasteries and whole French chateaus, and I saw these things moving in boats across the water and into the bay windowed brownstone houses like this . . . they were buying up their own past for their new house. And if it didn't fit?

Then I saw the little lady who sold hot dogs at Coney going out and I knew it was closing time. Some of the ladies still lingered pinching the satin cushions of chaise lounges, sitting in the tapestried chairs, fingering the worn draperies, running their hands over the painted panels and the leaf-carved covers of an Italian chest. A breeze moved the black-numbered orange ovals . . . and I went out into the sunset of the street.

Ceilings On Wages

By Ernest Lindley

Not Enough To Prevent Inflation

THE OFFICE of Price Administration is considering subsidies for manufacturers who cannot operate under the general price ceiling order. OPA officials are determined to hold fast to the retail price ceilings already fixed: the highest price at which an article was sold in March. In some cases the March level simply does not permit enough spread between the retail price and the manufacturing cost. That is, retailers were selling goods bought earlier when costs were lower.

LINDLEY

In such cases, if retail ceilings are now kept rigid, some one along the line will lose money and perhaps go out of business. If the retailer and the wholesaler are permitted enough margin to stay in business, the manufacturer will lose. And if the manufacturer holds to his prices, the wholesaler and the retailer will lose. So, in some cases, subsidies may be necessary.

The question of subsidies is delicate and complicated. If a subsidy is granted to one maufacturer, or one industry, others will feel entitled to help.

IT WOULD seem far easier and more equitable to readjust the retail ceilings sufficiently to take care of these cases of hardship. But here again, officials are afraid of the pressure for readjustments all along the line if any exceptions are made.

And they also fear renewed pressure for wage increases, which would reinvigorate the inflationary spiral. "Renewed pressure" for wage increases may be an incorrect phrase. It is not clear that the pressure for wage increases has faded, or what the War Labor Board will do about the demands for higher wages now before it. Chairman William H. Davis has given his personal interpretation of the President's plan as it applies to wages. Mr. Davis thought it means no more increases in "standard" wages. He indicated that standard wages meant wages fixed in recent contracts by collective bargaining or Labor Board awards. Inequalities and substandard wages will be adjusted.

The Labor Board's jurisdiction is limited. It does not extend outside the war industries. However, the price ceilings will prevent wage increases in most civilian industries. There are cases in which the producer can afford to pay higher wages, but, indirectly, the price ceilings are a ceiling on wages also in industries producing for civilian consumption.

THERE IS much to be said for the Administration's cautious approach to the whole question of wage ceilings. Certainly it is preferable to obtain and to hold the active cooperation of responsible union leaders. They have been able to make good, to a remarkably high percentage, their pledge of no strikes. Some of the union leaders are not having an easy time. The war caught many major industries in a primitive stage of labor relations, with green unions and green managers. In the C. I. O., Philip Murray and his adherents have to keep an eye on John L. Lewis and his followers. Murray is an all-out supporter of the war effort, as he was of the President's foreign policy before Pearl Harbor. Murray told the Steel Workers Organizing Committee Sunday: "I would lose my shirt today to help the President win the war."

Labor leaders of Murray's patriotism and wisdom are vitally important to the war production effort. But if Murray and others of his type are pressed too hard by the Administration, less responsible and less patriotic leaders may come to the front.

MURRAY, like William Green, A. F. of L., president, has expressed "unalterable" opposition to wage freezing. But neither he nor Green has publicly criticized the President's cost-of-living message or fireside talk of last week. Both know that workingmen would be hurt by a sharp rise in living costs. The Administration's aim is to get organized labor to accept, with understanding, not a wage-freeze but more or less the present ceilings on "standard" wages.

But such a ceiling is not enough to prevent inflation. A substantial part of the wages which already are being paid out must be siphoned off in taxes or savings, to bring the volume of purchasing power down somewhere near to the dollar value of the goods and services which will be available for civilian consumption. It begins to look again as if the sales tax would have to be resorted to—to be followed later by compulsory savings, if the Treasury's voluntary sales of war bonds to wage earners and others with small incomes do not suddenly jump.

The President has bluntly warned that the American standard of living must come down. It cannot be supported during this war. But this indisputable fact has not been driven home. The national leaders of labor are not delivering this message to their followers. And most spokesmen for the Government prefer to avoid mention of the topic. Yet until this fact, and the reasons for it, are understood throughout the country, the Government cannot deal effectively with wages. And until it can control wage income, or the uses to which it is put, it cannot check the danger of serious risings in living costs.

Lee Accuses 2 of Discouraging State Scrap Collection Drives

By the Associated Press

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, yesterday accused two conservation officials of the War Production Board of "discouraging State-wide campaigns to collect scrap metal" at the same time they were shutting down production of vital civilian goods made from iron and steel. Both heatedly denied the charges.

Paul C. Cabot, deputy chief of the division of industrial conservation, who appeared before a Senate committee along with Lessing J. Rosenwald, chief of the division, at one point suggested that Fred C. McDuff, Seminole, Okla., witness waiting to tell about rejection of his plan for an Oklahoma scrap collection drive, would "be a damn sight more helpful" if McDuff would volunteer his services to the Governor of Oklahoma rather "than coming up here to criticize."

Lee, pointing out that a shortage of steel and iron was "shutting off important things like a pipeline to bring oil to the Eastern Coast" asked Cabot and Rosenwald where the bottleneck was in steel and iron production.

Cabot said that steel mills recently had been operating at better than 98 per cent of capacity and that it was impossible to operate at 100 per cent—even if they had all the scrap in the country—because furnaces had to be shut down for overhaul and repairs now and then.

"Your attitude seems to be to defend the slow process or to absolutely block new ideas," Lee told Cabot, adding that scrap collection campaigns had been discouraged at a time when the public was aching to do something for the war effort."

Cabot said that the Budget Bureau had allowed Rosenwald's division only one or two employes in each State and so most of the work must be carried on by volunteers.

"Have you put any steam behind these State-wide scrap programs?" Lee asked.

"All we can," Cabot replied.

"Then you haven't much steam," Lee retorted.

Under questioning of Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont, Rosenwald said that his agency had received thousands of plans for collecting scrap and had been forced to eliminate most of them.

Finally Chairman Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, asked if the WPA officials had testified that use of all scrap would add only 1 or 2 per cent to the Nation's metal production. Both witnesses said that was true and that the WPB now was seeking to expand production of both steel and iron.

McDuff, a dealer in used oil well equipment, told the committee the campaign he organized to collect scrap iron for Britain, and later for America, had been rejected by the WPB's predecessor, the Office of Production Management, as "premature" and for the added reason that the scrap was not needed. He said his offer of a personal donation of 100 tons also was rejected.

Japs Lose Race For Oil

Burma Burned Out

By Daniel De Luce

Associated Press Staff Writer

WITH BRITISH Forces in Burma, April 17 (Delayed).—Yenangyaung's million-dollar electricity generating plant, which powered 85 per cent of Burma's oil production, crashed in flames at the stroke of midnight last night as Japanese cavalry and heavily armed infantry outflanked the scorched town and temporarily cut the British army's road of retreat.

The Japanese thus lost a desperate race to capture intact a plant which in wartime is irreplaceable.

The demolition of the powerhouse by two Britons hidden in a dugout 100 yards from the three-story structure brought to a climax a lengthy program of destruction which made an inferno of Yenangyaung's 10-mile-long oil field.

In that campaign of ruin 3500 derricks were destroyed and some 24 million gallons of crude oil went raging skyward in smoke and fire.

A HANDFUL of Gloucester regiment riflemen received the warning from a quiet-voiced lieutenant that if the Japanese advance guard attacked the plant before the zero hour "it will be blown up immediately while we fight them off—and we'll be blown up with it."

They guarded the walls from 10 p. m. last night until 11:55 p. m. and then moved 500 yards away for safety at the signal of a pistol shot.

On the other side of the Irrawaddy River, flowing one-third of a mile westward from the plant's entrance, the enemy's cavalry was reported striking.

Due east of Yenangyaung Japanese mortar crews and machine-gunners had just slipped through broken desert badlands and continued northward where they were preparing an ambush along the highway to Mandalay.

A CAPTAIN of the Royal Engineers and the British government's official oilfield wrecker, Walter L. Forster, crouched in a sandbagged battery hideaway as the seconds ticked away.

The batteries which would supply the juice to set off the sticks of gelignite and wads of guncotton tied in bands around the huge transformers and turbines in the 20-year-old station could only be guaranteed for three days—and two days already had passed, Forster told the army command earlier in the evening.

I was standing in a hilltop garden less than a half mile away as they fired one shot—the five-minute signal; two shots—the three-minute signal, and then three—the signal that the blast would go in one minute.

THERE WERE moments of stifling suspense and then a big roar.

The entire wall of the plant facing the Mandalay road spewed out in gushing flames as steel fragments punctured drums above the transformers which contained 6900 gallons of oil.

There was another explosion and the adjoining machine shop and garage crumpled into fiery wreckage.

Previously laid pipes sprayed the interior of the power station with oil to a depth of 3 inches and long tongues of flames shot out of the roof and the windows, framing the walls still standing in a desolate silhouette.

Throughout the Yenangyaung oil fields ten big substations and 20 transformer stations already had been blasted.

NOW WITH the main plant gone, production was snuffed out not only in Yenangyaung but in the equally important oil fields 44 miles northward around Singu and Yenangyat which were still in British hands. There was no more electricity to run the well pumps.

The demolition of the power house was the most ominous incident since the fall of Rangoon because it had been delayed to the last minute possible by British officers hoping against hope that the enemy might be held off.

As Japanese bombers raided British columns arriving on the outskirts of Yenangyaung, demolition men went to the smoking, twisted shops where two million dollars in oil tools and equipment were wrecked beyond ever a chance of the Japanese using them.

GASOLINE WAS poured over six sections of pressure hose which had been overlooked and they were set on fire.

Next to a burning power substation there were stored 40,000 gallons of gasoline, the last emergency supply in Yenangyaung. When the tank crews filled their machines, the valve was opened and the tank was transformed into a torch.

Five minutes after midnight, with the power house a shambles, we headed northward.

Altmeyer Named Manpower Board's Executive Officer

Appointment of Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, as executive officer of the War Manpower Commission was announced yesterday by Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt.

At the same time, McNutt announced that Fowler V. Harper, professor of law at Indiana University and associate member of the War Labor Board, would serve as deputy chairman.

The commission's first meeting will be held today.

Altmeyer, 50-year-old native of De Pere, Wis., has headed the Social Security Board since 1937 and will continue in that post, in addition to handling administrative and liaison operations of the Manpower Commission.

Harper was general counsel of the Federal Security Administration, which McNutt heads, in 1939-40 and is a well-known author of legal books. Recently, he has served as chairman of the joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation.

Why We Must Forgo Keyrings

THE CITIZEN notices a headline saying that some 400 common articles made of iron or steel are to be barred from civilian use. If he looks through the list, he finds such items as keyrings, fountain pens, hair curlers. He (or she) reflects, amiably, that he will have to endure some inconvenience. He may reflect that the War Production Board must be hard pressed, if it cannot spare such tiny items as these. But hardly one reader in a thousand has even a glimmer of the immense and intricate blueprint of industry which dictates the necessity of these civilian deprivations. The truth is, we are hard-pressed, for steel and iron. And there is one point at which the need for this metal is newly-realized and very urgent.

SULLIVAN

Our war production as a whole, is, in volume, more than satisfactory. The cheering statements about it which the public receives by newspaper or radio, are fully justified. For obvious reasons, figures cannot be given. But it can be said that production is going on at a pace which will produce, this year, more planes, tanks, and other war goods than the goals President Roosevelt set up many months ago—goals which, at the time, were regarded as almost fantastic. It is pace that counts—pace is the secret of the miracle which American mass production is. Once mass production gets under way, as it now is, the ultimate output in volume, some months or a year from now, is likely to be beyond what even the most optimistic imagination now expects.

Our volume of war production is satisfactory, in practically every important detail except one. But we are now at the point where we must give thought to something besides volume—we must consider proportions, the relation of each item of war goods to all the others.

WINNING the war means hurling upon the enemy a mass of metal and chemical products. But these products must be put out in certain proportions. And determining the right proportions is a more intricate process than merely getting volume under way. In the beginning, quite properly, we gave all manufacturers a "go" sign, told each to produce as fast and as much as he could. This is under way. We are now at the point where we must coordinate the items of war goods into proper relations to each other.

We are also obliged to realize that even in a country so rich in raw materials as America, there is, after all, a limit. The limit is not at all one which threatens the success of our war effort. But it is a limit which dictates that we cannot be recklessly prodigal about each and every item of war output. We are now at the point, fundamentally agreeable to realize, where we must restrain some lines, stimulate others—having in mind the most effective use of our raw materials.

OF ALL our raw materials, the most essential is iron, steel. Much as we have, far greater though our capacity is than that of any other nation, it is not great enough to permit continued use of much of it for civilian uses. Hence the recent order.

In our war output as a whole, the one item in which there is—let us not say a lag, but an insufficiency—is ships, cargo ships. These are indispensable because they are the means by which all our other war materials must be carried to the points where they are of use. Any point at which we can effectively fight Japan is a minimum of some 5000 miles—in the case of Germany some 3000 miles. Every kind of war goods we make, except some types of planes, is impotent unless we can carry it over several thousand miles of water.

Our shipbuilding program does not lag—it, like the rest of the program, is going on at a pace which would come up to the goal set several months ago. What we now realize is that we did not set the goal high enough.

WE ERRED in our thinking because we let our minds be influenced by the experience of the great war. We thought it would be enough if we kept new construction in advance of sinkings by submarines. We thought it would be enough if we and Britain together maintained as much cargo shipping as in the great war. But to be guided too rigidly by precedent is to do that which would have been right the last time.

This is a new time, with utterly different conditions, especially as regards shipping. In the great war, we and Britain needed only to maintain one major waterlane, the one across the Atlantic. In the present war we must maintain a second lane, even longer, across the Pacific. There are other conditions which make it not extreme to say that we and Britain should have, in this war, almost twice the quantity of shipping that was enough in the great war.

We know now that we must greatly increase our ship building. More ships means more steel—it is steel that is the bottleneck. Hence, among other things, the recent order—which will give the citizen the satisfaction of knowing that the key ring he does without will be a tiny atom in the hull of an indispensable cargo ship.

The Gallup Poll

70% of U. S. Agriculturists Found Cool To Lewis Move to Organize Dairy Farmers

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 5.—John L. Lewis' plan to organize farmers into his United Mine Workers Union does not strike a very sympathetic chord with the dirt farmers of America. Of all groups, farmers are the least sympathetic to the labor union movement.

Moreover, at the present time the majority of farmers appear to be satisfied with the prices they are receiving.

Some indication of the reaction of the farm population to Lewis' union drive is shown in the views expressed to Institute interviewers by farmers included in a recent Nation-wide public opinion study.

The question asked farmers was this:

"John L. Lewis is planning to organize the dairy farmers of the country into a branch of the C. I. O. union. Do you favor or oppose this movement to organize farmers into labor unions?"

VOTE OF FARMERS

Favor	11%
Oppose	70
Undecided	19

Mr Lewis has shown sagacity, however, in picking dairy farmers as the group for his present organizing drive.

They are economically the least happy. Throughout the country the Institute has found in recent studies that 57 per cent of all farmers are satisfied with the price of their chief farm product, 27 per cent are dissatisfied and 16 per cent are undecided. But of all farm groups interviewed in recent months, the ones least satisfied, considering cost of production, are the dairy farmers.

By and large, the farm population of the country has been the most strongly opposed to labor unions of any major group. This attitude has been of long standing. More than 25,000 people have been interviewed by the Institute in recent years on the question: "Are you in favor of labor unions?"

The most recent results showed that only 52 per cent of all farmers—a bare majority—believe in having labor unions in the United States at all. In fact, farmers are more inclined to challenge the principle of unionism than businessmen are.

Following is a comparison of the attitude of farmers with that of other groups.

"Are you in favor of labor unions?"

	Yes.	No.
Farmers	52%	48%
Businessmen	60	34
White collar	69	31
Professional	77	23
Skilled workers	75	25

Obliterate Germany

WE HEAR much about appeasement, defeatism, and disruptiveness, but I discount most of the complaints because the actual traitors among us are all marked men whose influence is negligible and disruption, or disunification, is a charge which any one person may honestly lay against any other who disagrees with him. If everyone agreed with my thoroughly correct position on all matters we would all be unified and those who don't agree with me are as disruptive as they say I am, and are, therefore, fifth, sixth, or seventh columnists.

I suggest, however, that those who are now planning a postwar world in which there will be neither reprisals against the German nation nor restraints on this warlike and lunatic breed are guilty of serious, if well-meant mischief. Anyone who insists now that the minute the Germans quit again and again repudiate their leaders the victors must promptly help them up, brush them off, feed them and lend them the money to do it all over again tends to undermine the determination of the American people.

Is it for this that another generation, the second in succession, has been called out of the normal ways of a very peaceful and unmilitary country to fight off a challenge of a nation calling itself a super-race and claiming the right to possess everything which it can steal by arms and to live by the slave-labor of all lesser breeds, including ours?

Is that the security which is to be bought by the sacrifice of the American standard of living, and three, five or eight years of struggle in which probably all nonmilitary males and possibly many of our women will surrender to the state their individual freedom as workers to toil as conscript labor?

There was some excuse for the first mistake. The leaders of this super-race, this chosen people of the German soil-god, had set bolshevism in motion in Russia in order to liquidate a fighting front and release troops for the final attack on civilization in the West. Bolshevism was a German creation deliberately released with no regard for the consequences to the world and when the last German assault failed the victors were called upon to save the German people, drive bolshevism back and confine it to Russia.

Now the new situation ripens for repetition. Again, in defeat, the super-race will threaten to destroy itself and create a pestilential stench on civilization's doorstep as the Russians move in from the east. And again the whole world of victims will be asked to save Germany, lest the infection spread to our own houses.

But what possible good could that do? Saved from bolshevism the last time, the Germans dressed bolshevism in a brown shirt. Would they be any more dangerous as red bolsheviki than they are in brown? Are they to be permitted again to beg off with a threat to turn on civilization and Christianity when they have been fighting civilization and Christianity for years?

Possibly when Germany goes down this time and Hitler jumps off his mountain or cuts his throat, the civilized peoples will not be in a military position either to punish or help the Germans, with the Russians moving in to take charge. It is impossible to foresee. If that is the way of things, then it is nonsense to speak now of a postwar world of peace, forgiveness and understanding with the Germans. But if the civilized countries do have some freedom of action with regard to the German people they would be as stupid as Hitler says they are to repeat the mistake of rebuilding the German nation and the German country.

Beyond provoking two world wars, what do the German people have to do, these chosen people who think God is a corpuscle peculiar to their blood and theirs alone, to prove to the intelligent men of the world that they are mentally inferior and morally bad? Like the German sheepdog, handsome, alert and outwardly ingratiating, they have shown that they will turn, on the instant, at the prompting of some vicious trait in their national, or, as they call it, their racial character, and with a savage snarl rip the throat of any friend.

It is no inspiration to say that the object of this war is to enable them to do it a third time. Twice should be sufficient to prove that as a nation Germany is suffered to exist only at the peril of civilization itself. The obliteration of Germany as thoroughly as Hitler has boasted that he obliterated Poland would be a drastic way of preserving civilization, but the only question is whether the real war aim of the United States justifies the only positive means of securing that aim.

The British Occupy Madagascar

THE BRITISH occupation of Madagascar is welcome proof that the vital battle for the control of communications in the Indian Ocean will not be lost to Japan by default.

NOVER

That battle has been going badly for the Allies. With the exception of the west coast of Australia, all the regions fronting the Indian Ocean on the east are now in enemy hands. The Japanese are in possession of Burma, Malaya, Sumatra, Java and the Andaman Islands. They are within striking distance by air of Ceylon. They have naval superiority in the eastern end of the Indian Ocean. In the meantime their military forces in Burma are menacing both China and India.

All Burma is now practically lost. If India is to be saved the communications to India from Great Britain and the United States must be kept open. That is why Madagascar had to be kept out of Japan's grip at almost any cost.

MADAGASCAR is French territory and since the summer of 1940 has been in the control of elements that took their orders from Vichy.

That did not matter as long as Japan was not in the war. It made all the difference in the world to the Allies when Japan pushed her way into the Indian Ocean. For no one can forget the craven manner in which Vichy surrendered Indo-China to the Japanese and in that way helped pave the way for all that has since happened in the southwestern Pacific.

There was no assurance, even before Piere Laval was elevated to supreme power at Vichy, that the history of what had happened in Indo-China would not be repeated in Madagascar. Since Laval came back the likelihood was great that when and if the Japanese demanded Madagascar they would be handed it on a silver platter. For Laval is the creature of Hitler and it is to Hitler's interests as well as to those of Japan that Allied communications in the Indian Ocean be cut.

The question which the Allies have had to answer, therefore, was not whether Vichy should be allowed to remain in undisturbed control of Madagascar but whether that strategically important island should be taken over by the United Nations or allowed to fall into Japanese hands.

There could be only one answer to that question. That answer has now been given. We could no longer, without risking the very gravest consequences, continue that elaborate game of patience we have for so long been playing with Vichy. The cards have run out. Since the elevation of Laval, Vichy has become, de facto if not de jure, an enemy regime since Laval himself in his radio broadcast of April 20 announced his intentions of carrying out a program of "entente and reconciliation" with Germany, in other words placing the tricolor under the swastika.

The only thing that has held Laval back from moving faster and further on the road to complete subservience to Hitler than he has done has been the fear of the consequences at home. The people of France are in a state of rebellion against Hitler and it is only Hitler's bayonets that keeps Laval in power.

THE PEOPLE of France will understand the meaning of the latest developments at Madagascar.

It is very significant and very revealing in this connection that at his press conference in which he made public his reply to President Roosevelt's note demanding that Vichy do nothing to interfere with the British occupation of Madagascar, Laval declared that Vichy will under no circumstances make the first move toward a rupture with the United States.

In other words, the link with this country, tenuous as it has become with Ambassador Leahy recalled home, is still sufficiently important in the eyes of the men of Vichy to be worth preserving.

It is not yet clear how large a force the British employed in their landing operations on Madagascar or how much resistance they have encountered.

Judging by Laval's reference to the "numerical inferiority" of the "defenders of Madagascar" it would seem that resistance was of the token variety but that remains to be seen. In view of the fiasco at Dakar, however, it must be assumed that the British did not, in planning this venture, take it for granted that the local garrison would meet them with open arms and took pains to make sure that they were strong enough to take care of all eventualities.

In any event it is refreshing to see the Allies getting the jump on their enemies. All too long have they waited on events. All too long have they allowed Hitler and the Japanese to take the initiative. That led to repeated disaster.

This time it is our side that has acted first although with not too much time to spare. It was an ominous circumstance that only the other day Laval met with the Japanese Ambassadors from Axis capitals who had assembled at Vichy for some undisclosed reasons. One very strong possibility was that Laval was plotting with them for the open or covert cession of Madagascar to Hitler's Asiatic ally. Such a move has now been thwarted.

There remains the question of what the Laval regime may be planning for French North and West Africa, French Guiana and Martinique. It is to be hoped that the precedent set with respect to Madagascar, will, should it become necessary, be followed with equal vigor in those other cases.

Justice Urged for Mexicans in U. S.

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., May 5.—Pan-Americanism must begin at home, Prof. George I. Sanchez of the University of Texas delared today, asserting that "unjust treatment of Spanish-speaking children," in some Southwestern schools does "more harm to Pan-Americanism than a shipload of Nazi agents."

Sanchez, professor of Latin-American education, told the National Congress of Parents and Tteachers:

"If we are interested in the Mexican across the border but not in the one across the tracks, then I don't know what we are talking about."

He said "the social and economic problems of a democracy and between democracies are not solved by the application of the concentration camp idea, and the segregation of children of Latin-American descent in some schools of the Southwest cannot be regarded as other than the infusion of an undemocratic 'ism' to educational policy.

"Most of these schools simply inbreed the evils resulting from the socio-economic insufficiency of their patrons and often serve to foster and promote the caste system and an un-Americanism originally created by a wage scale."

Sanchez, who is currently conducting a survey of higher education in Mexico for the Carnegie Endowment, was optimistic that remedial measures would be applied.

The first requirement of any remedy is an understanding of the three million Spanish-speaking people in the United States who trace their origins largely to Mexico, he said.

Mary Haworth's Mail

'What Does One Do,' Asks Man, 'When, After Years Of Exceedingly Happy and Satisfactory Marriage, Wife Enforces Policy of Neutral Companionship?'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What does one do when, after years of exceedingly happy and satisfying marriage, one's wife,—at first gradually and then entirely,—shuts the door on love, retaining only the most routine social amenities, and seems perfectly content with a completely unemotional companionship? Should a man reconcile himself to continence for the future, warming his heart with memories of the past? Or would an evocation of jealousy restore to marriage that spark without which the relationship is a joyless thing?

I do not ask that a new shoot be grafted on the old trunk; only that the tree be not cut down; that it be allowed to bloom a few autumnal flowers, until finally it gives way to winter's natural and expected death. My wife is in perfect health and I am sure if I should die is entirely capable of playing Mrs. Sheppard to some man's Tom Connally.

Perhaps the situation is not so strange, for in most marriages, it is the wife who first ceases to love (or who never has); and the man later strays. But I am not loking for an excuse to stray. I would prefer to cling fast to all that has been good in my marriage. In other words, I am seking the cure of my wife's indifference. Would the application of jealousy bring about the cure? MAN READER.

Issue Must Be Faced, With View to Action

DEAR M. R.: A supposedly tantalizing display of loverlike interest in another woman would undoubtedly worsen your standing with your wife. Although her detached attitude plainly conveys that she is no longer in love with you, the gentle diplomacy she has brought to bear, in conditioning you to a "completely unemotional companionship," suggests a continuing respect for your character worth, and a willingness to "carry on," if possible, on the basis of an impersonally loyal exchange of kindly consideration — which status your erstwhile steady devotion to her has seemed to make feasible.

Since her disinterested regard for you is compounded of (1) respect for your presumably stable qualities, and (2) affectionate concern for your social welfare, you cannot afford to flirt or philander, in the hope of reviving her love. Because that kind of performance would, in all probability, alienate her entirely. The result, I daresay, would be to change her present attitude of amiable indifference to one of hostile mockery or ironic contempt. Should you give her reason to lose faith in your sense of honor and strength of character, the chances of your salvaging some permanent good in the marriage would go by the board.

If the problem cannot be solved within the framework of scrupulous fidelity, there is no cure. So my advice to you is to put to your wife the question of why she no longer loves you, and whether there is any possibility of the former harmony being restored. You might say to her, in effect: "Nan, what's happened to our marriage? And what can we do to save the pieces? I love you as much as ever; more, in fact, than the day I married you. But something has changed your feeling for me. Let's not try to fool ourselves on that point. Have I been to blame? If so, is it too late now to undo the damage? We can't go on this way, you know. I feel I have lost you. A stranger looks out of your eyes at me now. Can I find you again, so that we may go the rest of the way together? Or is the sentence final? Am I exiled forever from your heart? Have you shoved me out and barred the door?"

Some such approach should pave the way to a seriously analytical, yet kindly discussion of your wife's point of view. If she admits she no longer loves you, without knowing why, without hope of caring again, and without poignant regret at the change—then the next step is up to her. She should enlist the counsellor services of a psychologist or psychiatrist, and explore the subjective and social history of the marriage, for the purpose of determining the hidden import of her courteously inflexible coldness to you. You are entitled to know whether the situation is remediable; and if it is not, I should say divorce is preferable to the unnatural arrangement.

Thus, whether or not the inquiry is effective in restoring conjugal solidarity, it must inevitably lead to decisions beneficial to both. For regardless of what else it may reveal, it will show your wife that she is cheating herself, quite as much as you, in withering away in a relationship dead at the roots. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Mahogany Goes to War; Still Has Furniture Uses

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

ONE of the nice people behind the scenes in the furniture world is George N. Lamb of the Mahogany Association who gave us an interesting picture of mahobany in the war. For this luxurious cabinet wood has gone to war! At first thought, one might think that mahogany is something beautiful which we can get along without for the duration—what with the fact that ships to import it from the tropics are scarce. But actually, mahogany is going into war industries in ever-increasing quantities, and the demand so far may well be only a small beginning of the eventual use of mahogany in the war.

"In the last war," said Mr. Lamb, "the prinipal use of mahogany was for airplane propellers. Today, except for modest amounts shipped to England for propellers, its use for this purpose is negligible. The largest use of mahogany in war work is for plywood, used in aircraft, and to some less extent in boats. Boat-building is taking a great deal of mahogany lumber, but to an even greater extent it is being used by defense industries for making patterns for foundry castings.

Used for Patterns

"With mahogany going all out for war, the furniture industry won't be in such bad shape. There are millions of feet of veneer and lumber in inventories that were cut to peace-time specifications. Much of this stock is unsuited for war work. Only run-of-the-forest logs can be imported, and nobody can tell what is inside by looking at the outside of a log. War specifications are very exacting, and a substantial amount of log run outturn will not meet these specifications and so will be available for civilian use. War work particularly demands plain, straight-grained veneers.

War Grades

"The cabinet trade has always preferred mahogany with the irregular grain that produces figures such as stripe, fiddleback or mottle. War demand for mahogany lumber is largely for the grades with long and wide and clear boards. The furniture industry has always preferred and purchased grades that come in small pieces, thus defects such as knots, splits or worm holes, can be eliminated with a minimum amount of waste. To a surprising degree, war demands and civilian preferences do not overlap in mahogany requirements in lumber and veneer. The civilian use of rejected qualities, or scraps from cuttings, greatly reduces the cost of mahogany for war work.

"Mahogany lumber for years has been used in boat work and for patterns, but its use in resin-bonded plywood for airplane construction is a recent development. When war is over, it is likely that such plywood will find a place in cabinet-making to a far greater extent than in previous years."

Good Circulation Is Best Aid To Complexion, Says Expert

Hollywood, Calif. — The most pertinent beauty hint Perc Westmore, Warner Brothers' make-up expert, gives for summer is to get off to a clean start.

"I needn't mention ordinary habits of cleanliness, such as bathing," said Mr. Westmore. "But I do have this suggestion to make. If you customarily take your daily bath before going to bed, I wish you would try a morning shower instead. A shower in the morning can do more for waking the blood cells and stimulating circulation. And, believe it or not, circulation has much more to do with a person's beauty than clever make-up. Make-up will lose its freshness after several hours of use, but if your circulation is good, you still manage to retain that look of unscathed bloom.

"Hair should demand a great share of your attention. I don't care how perfect all other points of grooming are, if your hair goes untended, the whole effect is ruined. It is usually a case of oiliness that brings on an unkempt look to the hair. A tip to those who can't possibly visit the beauty parlor as often as they would like is to massage the scalp with fingers dipped in a light eau de cologne. This not only helps to correct oiliness, but it is a good, active stimulant to the scalp.

"Hands naturally need more frequent care because of their constant contact with things. Much washing is drying; so be sure to apply a good hand lotion after every cleaning.

Large Teeth Demand Special Makeup

Hollywood, Calif.—Ann Sheridan, movie actress, offers this excellent beauty tip for girls with large teeth. She has learned through years of make-up that balance and harmony of features are the things to seek when applying your make-up. Consequently, if a person has large teeth, a thin line of a mouth would serve as emphasis to the size of the teeth. It follows, then, that if you make a mouth up larger, it will give the illusion of your teeth being absolutely normal in size.

Tokens of Appreciation for Mother

Gifts to mother on that day especially devoted to her may include many a beautiful tribute. The mother pictured here is not only pleased because of the Early American Old Spice Token Box filled with toilet articles, but also because with it came a picture of her service son in a matching picture frame—a gift especially appropriate this Mother's Day.

Old Favorites Will Feature Mother's Day

By Martha Ellyn

THE 1942 mother is sharing her day of days next Sunday with the many sons who are now in service. Being the mother of sons who are in service takes great courage, as well as love, sympathy, spirituality, tolerance and understanding—those attributes that typify the American mother.

Gifts will come from far-away places—and may of necessity be cards, letters or telegrams, since shopping in the usual manner is not possible. But many mothers will be remembered in the traditional way with the things that will show appreciation. If mother is the type that likes to grow flowers, perhaps geraniums, petunias and vines, which she can watch grow in porch boxes may be the best expression. I know one mother who receives each year for her flower garden a fine rose bush or some other plant in which she has shown great interest.

Send By Telegraph

But corsages, cut flowers and potted flowering plants can also be telegraphed to mother by flower telegraphic service. All you have to do is tell the local florist the kind of flower you want delivered and the order is carried out. Of course, if you want your personal card enclosed you will have to think far enough ahead so that it can be mailed to the florist delivering the flowers.

Then if mother has a weakness for lovely kerchiefs, a Mary Chess hand-quilted handkerchief envelope sachet would be just the thing to tuck a selection of fine kerchiefs into, while it is the white lilac sachet that completely fascinates me, yet this handkerchief cover may also be had in other fragrances—tapestry, gardenia and carnation, all matching the freshness of spring.

Other Mary Chess scented delights, too, will please mother, such as a powder-filled puff combined with a bottle of toilet water in matching fragrance; bath sachets, finger sachets and delightful perfumes.

If mother likes feminine ruffles and laces, give her fragrant toiletries with a light floral scent like Friendship's Garden. The Friendship Garden Band Box is filled with floral toilet water and atomizer, talcum and soap. The box itself, delicately decorated with pink and blue pastels, has a ribbon handle for hanging in the bathroom or dressing closet.

Snapshots Are Favorites

For more practical mothers, the Old Spice fragrance of roses and spice carries with it a romantic atmosphere of early American days. Besides appreciating the sentiment of the Old Spice Token Box, filled with a group of spicy toiletries, mother will like the pretty padded picture frame for a snapshot of you.

The name "It's You" is a sentiment that mother will like. Elizabeth Arden has recently introduced a flower mist named "It's You." Definitely longer lasting than a bouquet would be any one of the toiletries by this name—perfume, toilet water, dusting powder or the little harmony box which contains lipstick, rouge and bleu lavande eye sha-do.

Lentheric's "Folk-dance" bouquet trio, will trip its way straight into the affections of mother too. Tucked into a quaint box decorated with gaily-garbed peasant figures, is 4 ounce flacons of Tweed, Miracle and Confetti bouquets.

Elene of Vienna has also captured the subtle fragrance of white lilacs in her perfume which she presents in a violin-like bottle. If mother likes the fragrance of white lilacs this will be the very gift for her.

To Calm Nerves

Hollywood, Calif.—"Don't stop drinking milk just because you're grown up," said Bette Davis, on the set of Warner Bros.' "Now, Voyager," Bette was resting between scenes, and sipping a tall glass of milk. "It is not only the best nerve calmer I know of, but is definitely beneficial to the skin and really necessary for the teeth," she said.

Give Yourself the Mirror Test To Improve Carriage, Posture

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW LONG has it been since you stood before the mirror and looked yourself over—without a stitch on? If you will do that a couple of times a year, a physiotherapist I know says you are not as likely to have the aches and pains, neuritis, neuralgia and rheumatism that so many women have.

This authority is convinced a large percentage of these troubles are purely postural in their origin. The habit of sitting and standing with all your body segments out of kilter puts strain on the various joints and ligaments and sooner or later you will feel the pain.

Stand sideways to the mirror to get the full effect of poor posture—sagging abdomen, a spare tire, a cave-in at the small of the back, jutting hips, and rounded shoulders. Of course, you are not that bad. But that is what could happen, and in not too many years.

Sway Back Exercise

Begin by lining up your body segments. Pull up with the lower abdominal muscles and at the same time pull the hips down and under. If you do this correctly you will straighten out that sway back. Keep extending the up-pull of the abdominal wall until the chest is lifted and the chin held level with the line at the back of the neck straight.

You are now in position for a very effective exercise. Keep an eye on your reflection to see that you do it correctly. Stretch your arms overhead without disturbing the alignment of your body—chin level, hips under you and back straight—then bring both arms straight out in front, shoulder level and parallel with the floor. Do this without hunching your shoulders. Now, keep heels on the floor and bend your knees. Slowly does it! The instant your body gets out of line or your heels come off the floor, stop! Go down as far as you can with your knee-bend, pause for a second, and make an exercise of rising to starting position. Finish by moving your arms up overhead, then separate hands and bring arms slowly down at sides.

Strengten Muscles

Your object in that exercise is to put your muscles through their paces while you maintain good posture. It is not as easy as you might imagine. Your muscles may require a lot of strengthening before you can do it without error. When that time comes, you will also notice an improvement in your posture habits.

You may have had posture dinned into you for so long that it has lost its meaning and you are inclined to think of it as something almost impersonal. But posture is part of you. It is worth doing something about.

How Make-up Reflects Moods

Hollywood, Calif. — Geraldine Fitzgerald, whose next film is "The Gay Sisters," never fails to think of the two drama masks on a theater's proscenium arch when she applies her makeup. "I don't want to be bothered with it," she says, "or maybe I'm in a blue mood and wish I didn't have to even put on lipstick. But I conjure up the vision of those two masks—one of tragedy and one of comedy. All the lines of the tragis one are drooping, curve down. Those of the comedy mask are rounded, curve upward. Then I think to myself that no matter how I feel, I must make others feel that I am happy.

"That old comedy mask denotes fun, happiness and joy. Lines go up! On goes the makeup. I give my mouth line a little upward twist at the corners. Mascara goes on my upper lashes toward the outer corners, and a fine pencil line lifts the eyes. I have the eyebrow line follow the contour of my eyes when they are open and smiling.

The Gentler Sex — By Malvina Lindsay

The Masculine Trend

A CALL to men to help keep up the wartime morale of the women of the Nation was issued yesterday by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"It is high time men were doing something about the feminine morale situation," declared the president of the Do Something about It League at her press conference. "All I have been hearing the last six months is that women must wear the right shade of lipstick, women must keep their stocking seams straight, women must be feminine and seductive, or the spirit of our fighting men will weaken so that the Japs may be at Denver by August."

"Now what about the poor women trying to carry on at home and in offices, stores and munition factories? Who is keeping up their morale? How do they feel about the country they are working for, when they see men going around in dragging socks and messy summer suits with dandruff on their coat collars?

Women's Morale Needs a Boost

"Consider the case of the poor girl who gives her all in a Government office at a typewriter or filing case, and at the same time shops around at night and on her noon hour to keep groomed to the Grade A glamour standards of office bosses. Just when she needs the sight of some collar ad or life guard type of man to lift her spirits and give life meaning, what does she see? Flabby paunchy men colleagues shuffling around in three-day shirts, unpressed pants and unshined shoes. Is it any wonder she ask herself, "Is it all worth fighting for?"'

"Or consider the volunteer war worker who spends her days making bandages or speeches; what does she see the minute she emerges from her feminine sanctum? Why masses of unkempt men hurrying along with bent shoulders and outthrust noses. Squads of men in shiny suits and greasy hatbands with hair on the back of their necks. Men with crooked neckties and frayed collars. Men chewing sen-sen, men using toothpicks publicly, men eating their cigars, men cleaning their finger nails with their knives—men doing all sorts of things that offend the sensibilities or esthetic patriotic women."

More Tarzans, Gables Needed

Mrs. DeGoofey then launched into an appeal for "more masculinity" on the part of men. "We are constantly hearing that women must be feminine at this time," she said, "that men want them this way. Well in wartime women want men to be masculine. And yet how many Tarzans, how many Clark Gables do you see on the streets?"

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a little girl reporter, "Aren't all the Tarzans and Clark Gables in service?"

"I haven't noticed any multitude in uniform," was the reply. "However, I maintain it is the duty of the men behind the lines to be especially masculine at this time since there is already a dearth of men. Let them get out their Indian clubs, their dumbbells and their walking shoes. Now every woman I know is down on the floor in all her spare moments trying to remove her spare tire—so she may be sylphlike enough to please the men. However—what's the use to become a Cleopatra if there's no fellow in a tiger skin anywhere near to notice you?"

Mrs. DeGoofey announced that in pursuance of her masculinity for men movement she would inaugurate at once her annual bathing beauty contests for men and to promote better wartime grooming would start a service of best dressed men contests throughout the Nation.

Keep Ankles Trim For Low-Heeled Shoes, Advises Joan

Hollywood, Calif.—John Fontaine, movie actress, uses moments of her spare time in exercising her ankles. Standing behind a chair, she places her hands on the back for support, then very slowly rises up on her toes and settles back again. She repeats this several times.

Charles Boyer, noting Joan's slim ankles, asked her why she contiued this practice. "There is such a thing as keeping your good points good," answered Joan. "Besides, it keeps my ankles very flexible. I find no difficulty at all in rapid changes from low heels to high heels. Some women get so used to one type of heel that when they make a change they feel as if they've broken an arch or ankle or sprained an ankle."

A very good tip from Miss Fontaine and well worth noting, what with the influx of lower-heeled shoes for daytime wear.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

OFFICIAL ENTERTAINING will go into high gear today with the arrival in Washington of the first President of a South American country ever to visit this country during his term of office.

For weeks, the forthcoming trip to this Nation's Capital of Dr. Manuel Prado y Ugarteche of Peru has been heralded with the usual fanfare reserved for chief executives of important nations. Speculation has run rife as to exactly where he would stay, by whom he would be entertained, and how long he would linger. A number of local columnists have centered their daily stints around Dr. Prado; his visit; its significance, and the fact that for part of his sojourn, anyway, his "official Washington residence" would be historic Blair House, across the street from the Executive Mansion.

ARRIVING IN Miami on Sunday, Dr. Prado is now en route to Washington and is scheduled to be here at 4:15 this afternoon. State Department releases indicate that an official reception committee will greet the Peruvian President with military honors, and that the visitor will arrive at the White House at 5:30 p. m.

Official confirmation that Dr. Prado would spend at least one night at the White House bears out a prediction appearing only in this column (if my readers will pardon my momentary self-congratulation in a manner frequently indulged in by a few other local columnists). The Peruvian President will be feted at a State dinner at the Executive Mansion this evening and will stay overnight, before moving bag and baggage over to Blair House for the remainder of his Washington visit.

At 10:30 a. m. tomorrow President Prado is scheduled to shift over to Blair House, and an hour later he will be at the Capitol, to be received by the House of Representatives and the Senate in session, separately.

HAND-SHAKING on Capitol Hill will have to be negotiated rapidly; for at 1:30 the visitor is to be feted at a luncheon at the Pan American Union. At 5 p. m., there is to be a reception for chiefs of foreign missions, in honor of the Peruvian President, and an hour later, Dr. Prado will—according to engraved invitations—"be most pleased to meet the members of the United States press in Washington at his official residence, Blair House."

At 11:30 a. m. on Friday, Dr. Prado will leave by motor for Annapolis, where a luncheon at the United States Naval Academy is planned in his honor for 1 o'clock. The next item on his official Capital calendar is the stag dinner at which he will be entertained by Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, at the latter's home, at Oxon Hill, Md.

President Prado will visit Mount Vernon and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery on Saturday morning and a luncheon at Blair House is on his schedule for the same day. Most important social item on his calendar, however, is the dinner at the Peruvian Embassy that evening, and the reception later, when several hundred members of official and residential society will have an opportunity to shake hands with the distinguished visitor.

THE ASSISTANT Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, will be luncheon hosts in honor of President Prado on Sunday at 1 o'clock, and that afternoon, he will be off to Detroit for a visit. A trip around, and through, the war industries units in the Michigan city will make up Dr. Prado's schedule on Monday and Tuesday, and on Wednesday, May 13 at 2:55 a. m., he will be off to Buffalo to visit the Curtiss-Wright airplane plant and to see that great American wonder, Niagara Falls. Wednesday evening, he will leave for Boston, where on Thursday, he will visit Harvard University and a few other landmarks.

Late that evening, he will board the train for New York, where for the first time after arriving in the United States, he will be off-the-record for a brief period of time. He is expected to stay there for four or five days; will visit West Point, during his sojourn, and will take a bow, and probably make a brief speech at the farewell dinner that the Pan American Society is planning in his honor. According to the present schedule President Prado will leave for South America on Wednesday, May 20.

Mexican Envoy Honors Countrymen On National Holiday

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera entertained last evening at a late informal reception at the Embassy, honoring Dr. Luis Sandi, the Mexican delegates to the Pan-American Child Conference, and also in honor of a Mexican national holiday, the anniversary of the Battle of Pueblo, when, in 1862, the Mexicans freed themselves from their French conquerors.

Receiving at the door of the conservatory, Senora de Castillo Najera was gowned in navy blue, fashioned with long sleeves and with passementerie at the neckline and shoulders. Guests gathered in the conservatory and later in the dining room, where an elaborate buffet supper was served just before midnight.

Dr. Sandi, who had lectured earlier in the evening at the Mexican program of the conference at the Pan American Building, is the director of music of the department of education of Mexico.

Other guests included the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Julian R. Caceres; Doctora Marilde Rodriguez-Cabo, Doctora Enelda G. Fox, Dr. Federico Gomez, Dr. Hermiro Castenada, Dr. Gustavo Diniegra, Dr. Francisco P. Notables To Attend Festival

As has been customary ever since the National Folk Festivals were held in Washington, beginning in 1938, Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt heads the list as honorary chairman of the sponsoring committee for Washington for the Ninth National Folk Festival, which opens this afternoon with a matinee scheduled for 1 o'clock and continues twice daily at Constitution Hall through Saturday evening.

Mrs. Roosevelt also, for the first time in the history of the festivals, has found it possible to attend a performance. She plans to be at the matinee tomorrow. Several members of the Diplomatic Corps also are planning to attend performances to witness the singing and dancing of groups that come either direct from their countries or American groups who present folk music native to their homelands. For instance, Lord Halifax expects to attend Friday night particularly because he wants to see the boys of the School for Organic Education in Fairhope, Ala., do the famous old English sword dance—Kirkby Malzeard—which originated in the tiny town of West Riding in Yorkshire, the county in which Lord Halifax was born and bred and which he represented in Parliament. This dance is very old and is done in Yorkshire's West Riding in the Yuletide each year.

The Canadian Minister and other members of the staff of the Canadian Legation plan to attend performances of the festival to hear their compatriots—Le Quatuor Alouette—a group of singers of French-Canadian folk songs sent officially by the government of the Province of Quebec as a good will gesture to our national festival. This group has made tours of Europe and this country previously and was chosen as one of the few groups to perform for the King and Queen of England when they visited Canada in 1939. Queen Elizabeth is said to have been especially enthusiastic over their singing and asked for encores.

Princess Elizabeth's Dolls Presented to War Relief

By Martha McLean

Showing no signs of wear or fatigue after a long, arduous trip from England, five small misses were the center of attention yesterday afternoon at the British Embassy, much to the jealous envy of Lady Halifax's little long, dachshund, Frankie.

They were only dolls, of course, for otherwise two of them would have been guilty of gross overdressing for the occasion. One was gowned in very bouffant ball dress, fashioned after the besequined gown the Queen of England wore at the White House dinner here, and the other was in an equally bouffant gown which Her Majesty wore for a garden reception, also in Washington.

The dolls were sent here by the two British princesses, Elizabeth, who is 16 and getting too old to care for such things anyway, and Margaret Rose, only 12. In a brief ceremony Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, presented them to the British War Relief Society, represented by its president, Robert R. Appleby.

The latter, who flew down from New York earlier in the day, was unabashed at the prospect of five feminine charges. For as he mentioned, in his official capacity he deals indirectly with probably a million and a half women already.

Mrs. Rex Benson, wife of the British Military Attache, was on hand early to help arrange the dolls on the steps of the embassy's south veranda for their portraits, and Mrs. Childs, wife of the counselor, was also among the early comers. A bit later, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, president of the Washington branch of the British War Relief, arrived.

In addition to being presents from princesses, these were no ordinary dolls, for gowns were designed by two outstanding couturiers, Captain Molyneux and Norman Hartnell—who, incidentally, gave them to the princesses in the first place.

And as the guests arrived there were some who with delighted little exclamations of surprise commented on remembering two of the dresses as being exactly those the Queen wore during her Washington visit. And some one even went so far as to lift the dainty skirts of the garden party gown and count the petticoats—six in number. Both dresses were Mr. Hartnell's creations.

The dolls' travels are far from over for after exhibition at war relief headquarters here they will tour the country and perhaps eventually be auctioned off. The money, at the behest of the princesses, is to go to the project of making a home for refugee children from the continent now in England.

Gathered at the embassy for the occasion, to name but a few, were Lady Broderick, Countess de Limur, Mrs. Roy E. Lowe, Mrs. James Edward Schwab, Mrs. H. W. Heslop, Mrs. J. H. Breaks, Mrs. Eric Tatham, Mrs. M. F. Scanlon, wife of General Scanlon.

Mrs. Gower Gives Dinner For the Arlens

When there is a young lady but 22 years old who has returned from Tobruk within the week at a dinner party, the talk is sure to turn to that thrilling journey.

And so it did last night when Mrs. William Levenson Gower entertained at dinner for the visiting author, Michael Arlen, and Mrs. Arlen. Mrs. Gower's daughter, Miss Cynthia Toulmin, joined her mother here five days ago for a much deserved rest from war work abroad.

The first winter of the war she spent in London, where she drove an ambulance during the fearful seige of air raids that were then being visited upon the British capital. From there she went to Syria, where she worked from a hospital base and also drove her own ambulance.

Two days of the trip from Tobruk were made in an army plane, on which Eve Curie was also a passenger. The trip was completed by clipper. At the same time she gained a daughter, however, Mrs. Gower lost a husband. Mr. Gower left last week for London on a mission for the Red Cross. Mr. and Mrs. Gower, who lived in Paris and London before being bombed out, have been here a bit over a year and have taken an old house just over the Maryland border in Chevy Chase.

Also in last night's dinner party were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, who have been the Arlens' hosts during the latter's several days stay here. Mr. and Mrs. Arlens plan to return to New York today.

Mexican Women Are Overcoming Prejudice to Take Part in Social Movements, Latin-American Child Welfare Expert Declares

PROGRESSIVE Mexican women rapidly are becoming leaders in their country. No greater proof can be found than in petite Dr. Mathilda Rodriquez-Cabo, who heads a delegation of 14 from Mexico to the eighth Pan American Child Conference now in session here.

Back in Mexico City, the soft-spoken visitor is director of modern child welfare. She reports that the organization is stepping up its program to a wartime tempo. "About two months ago a special program was presented to arrange a commission to train volunteers for war work," she said. "This commission is just forming, but already has definite plans to care for mothers and children in danger zones."

Special classes are held for mothers. Many of these are in conjunction with the Mothers' Clubs of Mexico City, which number approximately 12,000 members, according to Dr. Rodriguez-Cabo. Special emphasis is placed on teaching the mothers proper diets, how to purchase and prepare low-cost foods. Also, they are taught to use the material at hand to make their homes attractive.

Not only are the mothers educated in diet, prenatal and hygenic care, but are shown how to improve their economic status to make these things possible, explained Dr. Rodriguez-Cabo. She pointed out that indigent mothers are are trained to earn their living by sewing, knitting or rug-making.

This modern child health service that has such a good start in Mexico City is expanding rapidly into rural sections. Plans are being made to have committees from private organizations work with the existing branches. "Hot lunches and milk for children is the immediate goal," Dr. Rodriquez-Cabo said. "After that comes medical care and recreation."

"Mexican women in general are knee-deep in war work," stated the physician who is the outstanding woman doctor in her country." They are doing Red Cross work and other wartime tasks."

English is now compulsory in the Mexican high schools, according to the doctor. But she thinks Spanish should be a "must" in the schools of the United States.

The fact that a woman is chief of the Mexican delegation of the Pan-American Child's Conference for the first time is itself an achievement for the Latin-American woman. "We are convincing our populace that we can stay a woman and work at the same time," she said smilingly. "However, we still are fighting many prejudice against our sex."

MRS. M. D. SELDEN

Mother of 3 Service Men, She Sticks to Her Guns

No. 6 in a series

Two sons in the Marines, another in the Army. That's Mrs. M. D. Selden, as proud a service mother as Washington has.

Mrs. Selden was living in Memphis, Tenn., when her husband died seven years ago. To her sons' surprise, and against their wishes, she decided to go to Washington and enroll in a training school preparatory to going to work.

For the last six years she has been manager of the linen department at Children's Hospital. That is no small job, with 5000 pieces of linen to be laundered each day. The sons—George and Sam of the Marines and Metellus of the Army—still haven't got over their mother going to work so late in life, but she would not change places with anyone on earth.

George Seldon is on duty in Trinidad, Sam is at Huntsville, Ala., and Metellus, the eldest, is stationed at Camp Forrest in Tennessee.

Their mother wears a Marine pin as an ornament, explaining:

"If my Army son has any objection, I'll just remind him that he's outnumbered 2 to 1."

During the last war, Mrs. Selden did considerable knitting, but not in this war.

"I don't think anyone could wear any of the socks I made the last time," she laughed.

When her sons tried to talk her out of going to work, for the first time in her life, following their father's death, Mrs. Seldon firmly told them, "I'm the boss of this family yet, even if you are all over six feet."

"If I fail," she said, "I'll admit it. But until I do, I'm sticking to my guns."

And that is what she has been doing ever since—like a good soldier.

Folk Festival: Curtain Rises Today on Ninth Annual Performance

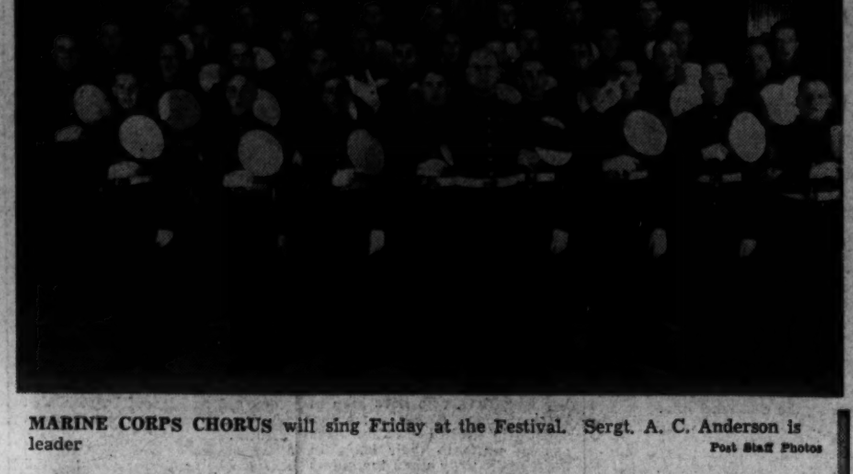
NAVY BAND CHORUS, under leadership of First Musician John Reachmack, sings at the Folk Festival tomorrow



MARINE CORPS CHORUS will sing Friday at the Festival. Sergt. A. C. Anderson is leader

The Ninth Annual Washington National Folk Festival bringing unforgettable music and dancing from the melting pot of America will open at 1 p. m. today at Constitution Hall.

Amos Kubic of Provincetown, Mass., dressed in somber Puritan clothes and releasing an impish grin that curls from his lips to his eyes, likeably, will stride down the aisle ringing his bell—a town crier of the New England tradition ringing the Festival in.

What he rings in has in past years been one of the Capital's top educational and enjoyment events, combining on one stage and before cross-section audiences the music and other folk expressions which have gone into the building of America's strength.

In matinee and evening performances running through Saturday, Indians, cowboys, the Scotch, English and Irish of America, the Negroes, highlanders, lowlanders, soldiers, sailors, lumberjacks, men who know the sea chanties and the nuances of the ancient dances will sing, fiddle and pound their feet before a background of pine trees on the big stage—all for probable record-breaking audiences.

The audiences will see the Festival pattern widened this time. The boundaries on folk culture, eased back slightly in the past few years by admittance of the newer Americans from the middle European countries, this time have taken a two-handed shove.

Russia, China and East India with their bed-rock songs and strange dances, will be represented in recognition of world-wide ties. A group from the Province of Quebec arrived under official Canadian suspices yesterday by automobile.

A troop of Irish children from Chicago named Maloney, McArdle, Gaul, Kane, O'Mally, Duffin and the like, at the moment rehearsed some Irish folk dances, "Stack of Barley" to mention one, ripping the floor seams, making charmed sounds with their cleats, to the swinging of an accordion played by James Margonelli. The children, led by Mae Kennedy Kane, the youngest 9, the oldest 16, held a series of festivals back home until they had raised $1000 to come here. They wore safron kilts and octagonal tams and tossed their musical brogue when the feet weren't pounding.

Some 40 groups comprising approximately 600 individuals from 25 States, the largest number the Festival ever has presented, will appear in each of the eight performances. The echoes of Kubic's big bell at 1 p. m. today will bring on:

Kiowa Indians of Anadarko, Okla., in snake, shield and horsethief dances, and Jemez Indians of Pueblo, N. Mex., in Buffalo, eagle, hoop and war dances. Following, in order, will be Philippine dances by Filipino students from Ann Arbor, Mich., sponsored by J. M. Elizalde, Philippines Resident Commissioner. They will do the Rice Planting Dance first, describing farm life and the Filipino's ability to accept sorrow, hardship and toil with fortitude, a dance in which a greater triumph of spirit and courage can now be injected.

Following will be English Folk Dances by boys from the School of Organic Education, Fairhope, Ala., fiddle and band tunes by the Riverton Rough Riders of Arlington and Fauquier Counties, Va., and Irish Folk dances by the Mae Kennedy Kane Dancers of Chicago.

Traditional ballads with dulcimer accompaniment will be given by Zilphia Horton, Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn. The Flora MacDonald Dancers, Fayetteville, N. C., sponsored by Fayetteville citizens, will present Scottish dances.

Other events and performers include: running set, dancers and musicians of Albermarle County, Va.; echoes of India by the East Indian Group of New York City and Ukrainian and Czecho-Slovakian dancers of Cleveland.

Negro Spirituals will be sung by the Hampton Institute Choir. The Pioneer Promenaders, University of Denver, will give dances from Colorado. A detachment of the 176th Infantry, stationed at Anacostia Park, will present soldier songs.

The evening program, starting at 8:15 p. m., will include the afternoon performers and the Palestinian Jewish Pioneers, representing American Zionist Youth Groups of Washington and Banjo Medley Tunes, by Oscar Mann of Washington.

THE ARMY CHORUS, directed by Capt. Albert C. Batty, will take the stage at Constitution Hall as part of the Folk Festival's program Saturday. The specially organized 60-voice chorus will render songs the soldiers are singing in Army camps today

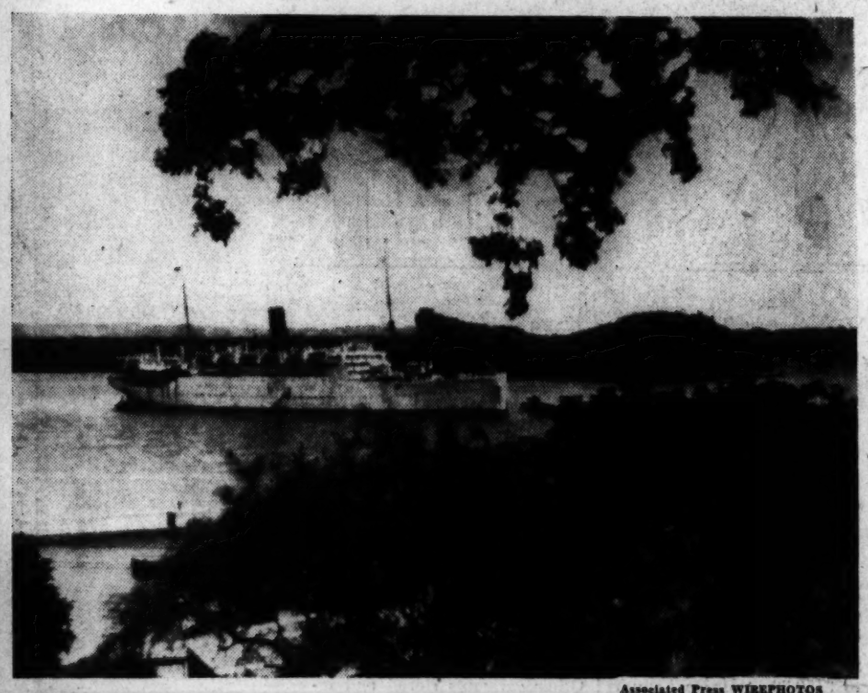
Madagascar, Occupied by British, Commands Important War Shipping Routes



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Diego Suarez—This port town of Madagascar has one of the finest natural harbors in the world. The inner harbor is shown above, a street scene below

World's 4th Largest Island, It Has Natural Naval Base

Madagascar, seized from the Vichy French by the British, is the key to the western Indian Ocean, says the National Geographic Society. It controls the trade routes around Africa's Cape of Good Hope to India and Suez. In the hands of an enemy, it could harass shipping from the British Isles to Australia by way of the Capetown route.

Diego Suarez, on the north tip of the island, has one of the finest natural harbors in the world. There the French had established a naval base, with a 656-foot drydock and machine shops, and an air field.

Another important air field is at Tananarive, the capital. Short lengths of railroad and motor roads have been built by the French to serve the population centers chiefly in the southern half of the island.

Madagascar's area is 228,900 square miles—larger than France—almost as large as Texas. It is the world's fourth largest island, 1000 miles long, and 360 miles wide at its broadest point. Only Greenland, New Guinea and Borneo exceed it. Africa is only 240 miles across the Mozambique Channel.

The coasts are swampy and hot; the interior is a cool plateau rising almost to 10,000 feet at the highest. There are extinct volcanoes, crater lakes and hot springs.

The island is rich in war-important graphite. In addition, gold, mica, corundam and phosphates are mined. Vanilla, cocoa and spices are among its exports. France, by tariffs, has taken three-fourths of its trade.

There are four million people on the island. The natives are a mixture of Malayan, Polynesian and Melanesian. Their ancestors are believed to have come from the South Seas in outrigger canoes. In addition, there have been Arabic and African slave infiltrations.

The Portuguese discovered the island in the early 1500's. For a long time it flourished as a pirate haven. French buccaneers established colonies there.

Grand Jurors Absolve Flynn Of Any Graft

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5.—A Bronx County Grand Jury tonight absolved Edward J. Flynn, National Democratic chairman, after an investigation into charges that city materials and city labor were used in paving a courtyard at Flynn's Lake Mahopac estate.

The jury cleared Flynn of having had knowledge that city employes and materials were used on the job, declaring:

"The evidence adduced showed that Edward J. Flynn had never expressed any desire that this work be done under city auspices or by city employes and without expense to him, but that, to the contrary, he had asked and expected that the work would be done by a private contractor to be properly charged for and paid by him."

Flynn Paid For Work

The presentment said the work was done by employes of the office of the Bronx Borough president and that Flynn eventually paid the laborers at their regular city wages and returned paving blocks and gasoline to the city.

Touched off by charges from Paul J. Kern, ousted municipal civil service commissioner, the inquiry produced a parade of more than 80 witnesses, including Flynn, his wife, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and a score of high city officials.

The grand jury also declared that Kern's allegation of a conspiracy between Flynn, Mayor LaGuardia and Commissioner of Investigation William B. Herlands to suppress Kern's investigation were "entirely without foundation."

Free of Corruption

Discussing Kern's charges that there was widespread corruption in the Bronx, the presentment declared that the county is "singularly free of fraud and corruption." It added, however, that "there were many irregularities revealed, that records kept were insufficient, and that insufficient administration opened the door to abuse."

The grand jurors said they believed assertions by James J. Lyons, Bronx borough president, that he was ignorant of the Lake Mahopac incident but "strongly condemn that ignorance. The borough president cannot avoid any responsibility for the manner in which any subordinate conducts his department."

Kern, who was ousted by La Guardia for "insubordination," was criticized in the presentment for his private investigation which "hampered the orderly progress by an experienced and competent investigator, and made extremely difficult the task of determining the truth with respect to all phases of this investigation."

Bear Seen in Md. Hills

Hagerstown, Md., May 5.—A black bear weighing at least 300 pounds was reported to be roaming South Mountain in the vicinity of Smithsburg. The bear was spotted by Harry Morrow, of Cavetown, and Brent Bowers on the Cavetown-Foxville Road.

Repeal Laws, Slowing Work, Nelson Urges

By Paul B. McGee
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

State laws and regulations in any way impeding the movement of war materials must be repealed or suspended for the duration, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson declared yesterday.

Speaking to representatives of 48 States gathered in Washington for a three-day Federal-State conference on interstate trade barriers, Nelson warned that nonessential State and local laws are obstructing efforts to save vital materials.

"A State law unduly limiting the load which can be carried in a truck may mean that some American soldier on a distant battlefield won't get the equipment he needs at the time he needs it," he said.

"A needless retraction in a building code may delay our production of certain weapons just enough to cause some of our boys to lose a battle they could have won," he added.

"The copper or chromium or steel wasted through one city ordinance may rob of us of the guns or the tanks needed in a critical struggle.

Codes Delay Work

"The skilled labor wasted by a 'make work' code may be just the handicap that makes us fail to meet a vital war production schedule."

The conference was formally opened when Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones read a message from President Roosevelt.

"The hard and cruel fight ahead of us demands complete mobility and complete marshalling of all our resources of man power, materials and equipment," the President wrote.

"In this mobilization for total war the Federal Government, the States, and individuals all must serve," he warned. "Only through unselfish cooperation by Government and citizens can we make sure of our survival as a nation of free men.

"Legal obstacles arising from a desire for regional and local advantage in a country so vast, with industry and interests so diverse, tend to defeat the requirements of free commerc and free enterprise among the States.

States Block Efforts

"In recent months, as the Nation has geared its economy to war, other State and local laws which in peace-time were designed to meet local conditions, have, through their very rigidity, imposed a heavy toll on national efforts to utilize our resources of land, manpower and materials most effectively."

The President explained that it was for the purpose of eliminating all legal restrictions to the war effort, that he called the conference.

Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman told the conference that many restrictions which have been placed upon both highway and rail transportation by State and local governments throughout the Nation, are interfering directly with efforts to conserve passenger and freight transportation facilities.

Eastman asserted that there is an imposing volume of evidence that trucks engaged in handling both commercial shipments and shipments made under seal by the Army and Navy "and of the most urgent character," have been seriously obstructed in movements across State lines.

Taft Offers Measure to End Draft Dependency Deferments

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, called on Congress yesterday to abandon financial dependency as a basis for draft deferment and substitute for it a system of induction classes based on age and marital status.

The Senator embodied his proposal for sweeping selective service reform in a bill intended to end the lack of uniformity with which local draft boards have been gauging the degree of financial responsibility of draft-age men to their families before granting deferments.

Voicing growing dissatisfaction with the present system—a dissatisfaction shared by Congress and Selective Service headquarters—Taft called attention to the "great discrimination throughout the United States with reference to the question of dependency."

Some local draft boards, he said, have been "very strict," while others have given 3-A classification to practically every man who is married."

Some boards, the Senator continued, do not consider a wife dependent if "she is working or has ever worked," while other boards deny dependency if it is believed the wife could work, "even though she never has." The result, Senator Taft pointed out, is that "today many men are in the Army who actually have dependents unable to support themselves."

Seven Classes Proposed

Senator Taft's bill would provide that all draft-age men should be called from seven classes, each class to be exhausted before the next class is called. The measure would establish these classes:

1. Men under 35, unmarried and childless, or married since December 1, 1940, date the Draft Act became law.
2. Men between 35 and 45 who are unmarried and childless, or married since December 20, 1941, when the Draft Act was extended to take in men above 35 years of age.
3. Married men under 35 and without children.
4. Married men over 35 and without children.
5. Men under 28, married before the draft, with children.
6. Men between 28 and 35, married before the draft, with children.
7. Men over 35, married before December 20, 1941, with children.

The system of classes, Senator Taft declared, would have the advantage of giving every man under 45 exact knowledge of when and under what family circumstances he can expect to be called for military service.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

British Shipping Unit Gets Commerce Dept. Space

The British Shipping Ministry will be assigned space in the Commerce Department so it can keep in close touch with the War Shipping Board. Board of Economic Warfare will be moved out . . . Blackwell Smith is slated to be named general counsel of the War Labor Board. He formerly was general counsel of NRA and more recently he was on the legal staff at WPB . . . Assistant Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman made a trip to his home State of Colorado to look over the political picture. He wants to run for the Senate . . . Dave Bryant is due to be made executive officer of Federal Works.

David Vaughan, executive officer of BEW, is reported to have retained one of the most conservative and respected law firms here to sue Representative Dies, who accused Vaughan of membership in what Dies said were subversive organizations . . . Paul McNutt's Man Power Commission will hold its first meeting this afternoon. As predicted here, Fowler Harper was named vice chairman, and Arthur Altmeyer was appointed executive officer. Insiders now believe that Bob Barnett will be appointed secretary, and Jack Tate will be named general counsel. It was orginally planned to make Harper both vice chairman and general counsel.

The President says he has no intention of withdrawing the nomination of Earl Harrison as commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization . . . Les Evans is Federal Works' new classification chief. Elbert Smith succeeds him at PWA . . . Works Projects my get a short lease on life. Latest report is that the President is considering a four-month budget for the agency instead of the usual 12-month budget. However, its abolition is being pushed. The agency will do its own accounting work after July 1. Treasury has been doing it. . . . Henry W. Riley, personnel director of FDIC, will also be personnel director of Alien Property and he'll divide his time between Washington and Chicago.

Specialist Corps Shaping

The Army Specialist Corps is beginning to take form. Applicants are being interviewed in Room 2200 n Temporary Building M near Twenty-sixth and C Streets Northwest. The Civil Service Commission will do the recruiting but the commission is waiting for the War Department to let it know the number and kinds of people to recruit. However, if you are in the draft age, 20-35, and in good physical condition, you are wasting your time to apply. War Department has an understanding that it will not request deferment for corps members. The corps will not be used as a device for draft dodgers.

Corps members will be uniformed, they will be given ranks, but they'll be subject to Civil Service regulations rather than those of the Army. Army line officers now on desk duty will gradually be replaced by corps members. Civilian technicians at Army outposts also will be brought into the corps. The corps will be composed largely of technicians, professional, scientific and administrative people.

William Batt, chief of WPB's materials division, is becoming the butt of more and more cracks by the New Dealers . . . Interior promises that it will give its Parks Service, Indian Bureau and Fish and Wildlife Service employes ample moving notice. The building in Chicago where they are to go is being renovated. The move will be made despite contrary reports . . . The bill that would create a Women's Auxiliary Army Corps has been held up in the Senate because the Army changed its mind on the framework of the corps after the bill passed the House. Representative Rogers of Massachusetts, put the bill over in the House but the Army failed to let her knew about the change.

Employes who have war service appointments will be subject to the Civil Service Retirement Act . . . Comptroller General Lindsey Warren yesterday cracked down on Congress for borrowing personnel from executive departments. He warned that no more salary checks would be approved for employes who are loaned hereafter. His decision involved the lending of two National Housing clerks and an attorney to Congressional committees. What about lending personnel between departments? This is frequently done. In fact, the White House often borrows personnel from the agencies.

Daughter is Airminded

Seattle, May 5 (A.P.).—Chief Storekeeper W. F. Burnett is the public relations officer for the Navy Recruiting Station, where rivalry with other services is friendly but none the less keen. That's why Burnett was very unhappy when he saw a picture of two boys and a pretty University of Washington coed displaying an Army recruiting poster. The girl was Burnett's daughter.

Big Day for Mother

Camp Forrest, Tenn., May 5 (A.P.).—Some mother will get more than just a reception here Sunday during Mother's Day activities. The troops asked that the State's oldest mother with a son in the Army be their "Mother" for the day. Officers obliged and started looking around. A businessman offered a $1000 war bond to the mother selected and a plane to bring her here.

Mice Revealed Spreading Disease in D. C.

Public health officials here are fighting a recently discovered disease which is carried by mice, it was disclosed last night by Dr. Charles Armstrong, chief of the division of infectious diseases, U. S. Public Health Service, in a paper he delivered upon accepting the Kober certificate and $500 award at Georgetown University.

The award was made upon recommendation of the Association of Military Surgeons for Dr. Armstrong's scientific research of lymphocytic chorio-meningitis, a virulent nervous disease, and was presented by the Rev. David V. McCauley, dean of medicine at the university. The award is given annually through an endowment left by Dr. George M. Kober, late dean of medicine at Georgetown University.

Discovered in 1934

Dr. Armstrong discovered the mouse-carried disease in 1934 and has since continued his research. Last night he told how the National Institute of Health had traced the spread of the disease here.

Of 389 mice trapped in 78 houses, he said, one of every five was found to be an active carrier of chorio-meningitis virus. The infected mice came from 35 per cent of the houses investigated. In houses where the infection was found, he said, one out of every two mice was diseased.

Earlier experiments, Dr. Armstrong said, had determined that the disease was not carried from person to person. Human contact with the virus, he said, was responsible for three recent deaths among laboratory workers. There have been about 20 proven cases here, and the District area is a heavily contaminated section.

Some Cases Elsewhere

While the disease has been studied in various sections, Dr. Armstrong said two-fifths of the cases identified by satisfactory laboratory tests have come from Washington and nearby. This, he said, would indicate that the disease is probably more common than has been realized.

"The fact that we have found Washington to be heavily contaminated," he said, "is probably because most of our experiments have been conducted here. Most of the victims have been young adults."

"There seems to be little hope," he said, "that the menace of this disease will soon pass. On the contrary, it would seem the virus, as time passes, would spread more widely through the mouse population and the menace of the disease would increase for mice apparently are an effective reservoir for man's infection."

Luis Sandi Is Presented In Lecture

By Ray C. B. Brown

Pan-American Union presents Luis Sandi on Tuesday night in a lecture on "The Music of Mexico" in Spanish, with illustrative recordings of folk songs and popular compositions.

Under the sponsorship of Dr. Francisco Castilla Najera, Ambassador of Meico, Luis Sandi, director of the section of music in the Mexican department of education, gave an informal and informative talk on "The Music of Mexico" last evening in the Pan-American Union. Speaking to an invited audience that filled the west balcony of the patio, he outlined briefly the historical development of music in our neighboring republic, and explained the various influences which have resulted in the typical Mexican music of today.

BROWN

First of the influences grafted upon the native Indian music was ecclesiastical liturgy, and next the Spanish romanceros sung by the Conquistodores and the early colonists. For a time the aboriginal elements were almost submerged by the domination of European modes, but they eventually modified and colored the music of the entire people. A later influence, which can be noted in many popular songs, was that of Italian opera which had and still maintains a wide vogue. In recent years, through the work of Chavez, Revueltas and other composers, the Indian elements are coming more to the fore.

The inculcation of European musical culture began in Mexico before it did in the United States. Almost a century before the colonization of Virginia and the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in Massachusetts, a printing press was set up in Mexico City as early as 1539, and the first American printed book containing music was published there in 1556. The famous "Bay Psalm Book" of New England was issued in 1640, but music was not added to it until the ninth edition in 1698.

Senor Sandi outlined the contemporary state of musical education in the public schools where instruction encourages both the native and the Spanish strands. His talk was illustrated by recordings of typical music made in various parts of the country. These included Yaqui songs, popular tunes and compositions by school students.

D. C. Baptist Convention Opens Today

The responsibility of Washington's churches toward thousands of newcomers here will be among discussion themes at the semiannual meeting of the District Baptist Convention opening today at Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, Naylor Road and Q Street Southeast.

At the afternoon gathering, Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention of Churches, will review the 65-year history of the organization, and stress the need of Baptist expansion here.

Principal speaker at the meeting will be Dr. Charles Maddry of Richmond, Va., foreign mission secretary of the Southern Baptist Convention, who was in Honolulu when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor December 7. He was there to study the mission situation in the Hawaiian Islands. He will speak at 8 p. m.

Other speakers on the day's calendar will be Miss Janet S. McKay of New York City, home base secretary of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Mission Society, and the Rev. M. Chandler Stith, pastor of Brookland Baptist Church.

Police Arrest Festival Bound Quebec Singers

The Canadian Quartet sent to Washington by the Dominion of Quebec to sing at the ninth annual National Folk Festival quite naturally expected a cordial reception when they drove into the District late yesterday.

They didn't anticipate a police escort, however, so when Motorcycle Patrolman Harrell Reagan waved them to stop as they drove into the city along Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, they didn't know whether to be pleased or not.

As it turned out, they had no occasion for pleasure, for Reagan said they were driving 44 miles an hour, somewhat faster than the law allows.

The quartet and a companion, Oscar O'Brien, accordingly were hauled into the Eighth Precinct Station, where Roger Filiatrault, the driver, was charged with fast driving. They made a pot of $15 for collateral and were released in time to make it to the National Press Club for a personal appearance as guests of the Canadian Minister, who invited them to represent Canada in the festival.

The singers, in addition to Filiatrault, are Andre Trottier, Jules Jacob and Emil Lamarre. They will appear at all performances of the folk festival, which has its opening today at 1 p. m. at Constitution Hall.

Sheridan's Goodby Took 3 Minutes, Cab Board Hears

Representative John E. Sheridan (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, took "less than 3 minutes," not 14, to bid goodnight to Miss Adeline Maggio, of 128 D Street Southwest, February 19.

She testified so yesterday before the Hacker's Board of Revocation and Review when called as a witness in the case of Harold G. Strickland, 34, of 11 Nicholson Street Northwest, accused of overcharging the Congressman.

Miss Maggio corroborated Representative Sheridan's statement that he held the cab in front of Miss Maggio's home only a few minutes "definitely not more than 5." Cabbie Strickland told the board he charged Sheridan 10 cents for each 5-minute wait.

The hackers' board took the case under advisement.

Rep. Starnes to Address Fishbourne Graduates

Special Dispatch to The Post

Waynesboro, Va., May 5.—Joe Starnes of Alabama will address graduates at Fishburne Military School's sixty-third commencement on Saturday evening, May 30, according to Col. Morgan H. Hudgins, superintendent.

The Rev. Edgar A. Potts of Staunton will preach the sermon to the graduates on May 31.

Fishburne's commencement will open on Friday evening, May 29, and will conclude with awarding of diplomas and singing of "Auld Lang Syne" following the baccalaureate service on May 31.

First Lady Sees Passage of Bills Creating Auxiliary

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt yesterday predicted eventual passage of bills now before the Senate to establish women auxiliary units for the Army and Navy—but declared "anything new takes time."

Previously the First Lady has said she thought the proposed Women's Army Auxiliary Corps might function better inside the Army than as a group serving in conjunction with it, as the bill was written originally and passed by the House. The Senate Military Affairs Committee on Friday will consider an amendment that would make this change in the corps' status.

Speaking at her press conference, Mrs. Roosevent made it apparent she hopes American women will register for war work, although she said she agreed with the President's postponement of the registration until the need becomes more urgent.

3 New Members Named To Mount Vernon Board

Richmond, Va., May 5 (AP).—Governor Darden today appointed Edward Moyler of Franklin, Vernon Rice of Richmond and State Senator Thomas B. Glascock of Upperville to the board of visitors of the Mount Vernon Memorial Association.

Reappointed to the board were Norman Call of Richmond and Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria. All are for terms of one year. The board will hold its annual meeting at Mount Vernon May 18.

Restrain Subverters, Bishop Urges

Disloyal Elements Must Be Treated As Traitorous to U. S., Convention Told

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Subversive elements in our country must be restrained, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, warned last night at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest.

In an address that signaled today's formal opening of the forty-seventh annual Washington Diocesan Convention in that historic church, which marked its centennial, the prelate said:

"While it is not the function of the Church to be a partner of the state in instigating or promoting a war economy or of planning a war strategy, it is the function of the Church to give loyal and unqualified support to the State where great principles are involved or the Nation is in jeopardy.

"We believe that our Church is deeply loyal to the course the Government has taken. There are in this country today, secret and subversive and disloyal elements that must be restrained and treated as traitorous to the Gocernment that gives them shelter. Where liberty becomes license it must be denied the rights and privileges which are the just prerogatives of a free people."

250th Year for Eight Parishes

Bishop Freeman, speaking from the pulpit he occupied as rector from 1921 to 1924, said that this year marks the 250th birthday of the founding of eight Washington Diocese parishes, all in Maryland. They are King George's, Broad Creek; St. Paul's, Baden; Durham, Ironsides; Port Tobacco, La Plata; William and Mary, Wayside; All Faith, Mechanicsville; King and Queen, Chaptico, and William and Mary, Valley Lee.

"These venerable spiritual foundations," he said, "have been as beacon lights through many generations to those who shared their ministry. They antedate the founding of the Republic itself, and the contribution they have made to our country through the men and women who worshiped in them, has proved of incalculable value in giving permanence and stability to the State and Nation."

Discussing the exacting demands made upon the church today, thhe bishop asked:

"Are we as a Christian people ready to make sacrifices commensurate with those our men in the service are making? Are we approaching a new age when the followers of Jesus Christ are ready, if need be, to go to martyrdom for their faith? Others have already done so in lands beyond the sea.

Bishop Cites Niemoeller

"Heroic Niemoeller, in a concentration camp, will do more to restore the spiritual life of his nation than all the hosts of blood and iron. The courageous clergy of Norway will inspire their countrymen with new hope as they stand steadfast against the demands of an unholy and traitorous Quisling. Our brethren in England have given a demonstration of fidelity to their trust, that is worthy of emulation and high praise.

"It is my deep conviction that if the Christian church fails now, God will remove her candlestick and a new generation of consecrated men will take our place and exercise our office."

The service began with a colorful procession of diocesan clergy, lay delegates to the convention, vestrymen, officers of diocesan and parochial organizations and others. An informal reception followed in the parish hall.

The convention will open formally today at 8 a. m. with corporate communion for delegates, followed by breakfast. Business sessions will begin at 10 a. m. The annual convention dinner is set for 6:30 p. m. Reports from diocesan institutions and city missions will be heard at 4 p. m.

'American Mother of 1942' Finds She's Forgotten Sugar

AMERICAN BEAUTIES FOR AMERICAN MOTHER OF '42—Frank Berry presents his mother, Mrs. William N. Berry, American Mother of 1942, with a bouquet of roses. She has 13 children

Mrs. William N. Berry, platinum-haired, dark-eyed "American Mother of 1942," arrived in Washington last night to see three of her 13 children and discovered she had failed to make any arrangements to register for sugar rationing.

The question came up as she received the press at her Mayflower Hotel room, but she took it in her stride as she has countless other crises in raising "my lucky 13," as she calls her children.

"I'll register when I get back home"—to Greensboro, N. C., she said, unruffled. Reminded that she couldn't do that, she decided, still calmly, to send her husband a telegram, because otherwise "he'd never think of it."

On Way to New York

The woman chosen by the Golden Rule Foundation as 1942's representative of "the best there is in all motherhood" is en route to New York for her induction as "the American Mother of 1942" on Friday. She was greeted at the Mayflower by her son, Frank, 26, bearing a box of American Mother roses. A Naval Reserve ensign, he will be graduated May 25 from Georgetown Medical School. Today she hopes to see her daughter, Sister Margaret Mary, 23, of the Immaculate Conception Academy here, and another son, Joseph, 20, a midshipman at the Naval Academy.

The other ten children are John, 30, division manager of their coal company in Greensboro, who'll soon go into the Navy. Mary Elizabeth, 29, a Sister of Charity in a Buffalo hospital; William N., jr., 27, who will be ordained May 30 as a Passionist priest in Newark, N. J.; James, 25, a captain in the Air Corps; Katherine, 22, now Mrs. Richard Fuller of Greensboro; Anne, 19, a junior at St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; Teresa, 17, a freshman at Nazareth College, Louisville, Ky.; Benedict, 16, high school junior at Belmont Abbey, Belmont, N. C.; Thomas, 13, and Stephen, 9 in school at Greensboro.

Wrote Letter to President

Her husband was a moderate-salaried railroad employe when the fifth child was born, and they decided something had to be done, so they founded a retail coal company and the financial problem was solved. Mr. Berry is president and Mrs. Berry is secretary-treasurer.

Still she found time to serve as president of the Altrusa Club, women's business and professional service organization, as a member of the Y. W. C. A. board and as an active member of the Woman's Club, to mention a few of her extra-curricular occupations.

It was Mrs. Berry's letter to President Roosevelt last August that helped create a surge of sentiment throughout the Nation in favor of broader defense legislation. She wrote that she was willing to have her sons fight in a just war.

Today, before going on to New York, Mrs. Berry will be guest of honor at a luncheon by the National Catholic Community Service at the Mayflower.

Mistrial Move Fails In Theft Case

Proceedings Over Alleged Pilfering Of Civil Service Data Continue

A witness' use of the word "reprehensible" in testimony concerning the alleged theft of Civil Service Commission records temporarily halted trial of the case in District Court yesterday as defense counsel motioned for mistrial on ground that the word would permanently prejudice the jury.

Justice James W. Morris overruled the motion, however, for reason that use of the word by the witness, William E. Lehman, chief of the Inter-departmental Placement Service of the Civil Service Commission, was part of an address to subordinates in the commission and an expression of opinion.

The motion for mistrial was by James A. O'Shea, attorney for Harlan G. Crandall, former Civil Service Commission employe and one of five defendants on trial. Justice Morris instructed the jury to discount the word insofar as it was "opinion."

Lehman told Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray, prosecutor, that he used the word in telling a group of employes, including Crandall, that information on commission records was apparently being given to the public press.

Motion for mistrial was prefaced by repeated defense contention that the allegedly stolen records were not confidential, that no specific legal order had been issued making them so.

O'Shea and William H. Collins, attorneys for Defendants Walter A. C. Camp and Werner J. Orbach, president and vice president of Vita-Health Food Co., rose to contend this point in questioning a Government witness, Harry R. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission.

Prosecutor Murray contended that the commission could order the records confidential within its jurisdiction and such an order was not made by whim but through official action.

Also on trial is Miss Katherine Kay, former Government worker, and Lawrence L. Haynes, office manager of the Standard Business Service.

Your Daily Health Quiz
How Many Quarts of Blood Has the Average Person?

It is an accepted fact that normally we have 3 to 3½ quarts of blood.

Although our blood contitutes about 1/12 of our body weight, most folks pay no attention to it whatsoever. When they feel tired or under the weather, they always blame it on something else. Actually, at the first sign of fatigue, lack of energy, strength, or when you feel yourself slipping physically, check up on your blood right away.

You know, if your blood is thin, pale and watery, and unable to feed the hungry tissues with life-giving oxygen, sickness and disorders set in more quickly. But if blood is rich and pure, it contains chemical substances and cells capable of repairing damaged body tissues and replenishing our strength and energy.

So don't take chances. Do something about your blood today. Get a bottle of Boncquet (pronounced Bon-Kay) Tablets. Here is an amazing new discovery, by an eminent bio-chemist, that is designed to build rich red fighting blood. It contains, in concentrated quantities, the raw materials so woefully lacking in the modern diet, and so urgently needed by the body tissues . . . the most important being the active principle of raw liver (the red blood cell maturing factor), organic vegetable iron and other minerals, vitamin B complex, fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G, and assimilable calcium and phosphorous. This "liver principle" is sometimes called anti-anemic substance.

Try Boncquet Tablets for 9 days. If you wish, have your blood count taken by your physician before and after this test. If you don't feel better, look better, and have general all-around improvement . . . and most of all, show a marked increase in your red blood cell count . . . your money will be cheerfully refunded.

HAZEL BRUCE, formerly starred with the Artie Shaw, Will Bradley and Clyde Thornhill Orchestras, will open with Layton Bailey's Band in the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park Hotel on Friday.

The Shoreham Terrace will open around May 26 in a glory of pink rambler roses, blue lighted trees and Barnee's sparkly rhythms.

DAZZLING CREATURES. Even the knowing patrons of the Cosmos Room were practically overcome when Dorothy Lamour and Paulette Goddard entered at the same time the other eve.

Sheila Barrett, nationally famous chanteuse (and, incidentally, she's a Washington girl who grew up at Wardman Park Hotel) will open at the Troika on Thursday.

STRICTLY A-1. Venesko, gypsy violinist of the Balalaika, does alluring descriptive numbers, makes you hear all the springtime birds a-twittering . . . The Debonairs of Cafe Caprice put on an elegant song festival every night, vocaling en trio, quartet and solo . . . Singing pianist Jack Neal happifies the big Saturday night overflow in Hi Hat by making music for them in the adjoining Ambassador Room . . . Melvin Henderson, of the Rainbow Room Band, has received no end of merited compliments on his electraharp solos.

No one else in the world has a double electric guitar console like that played by Andy Padova, leader of the Neptune Room's Streamliners. The instrument was made according to Andy's design and he's had it patented.

NOTABLE ANCESTORS. Manager Al Orrison of Mayfair, is the son of Robert Orrison, who figured importantly in the founding of the Congressional Country Club where Manager Al still plays his daily round of golf . . . Owner Ralph Lee of Lee's Stables, is the son of Ralph Lee, famous ball player on the Cleveland team many years ago, later the manager of one of the country's biggest tire and rubber concerns . . . "Mother's Day" means an awful lot to Paul and Dave Young. Their mother, Mrs. Vera Young, is responsible for the delicious and unusual food at Paul Young's . . . Julie Colt, singer in the Pall Mall Room, is the daughter of Prof. Philip Marshall Brown, authority on international law . . . Nancy Murchison, cordial hostess at Restaurant "823," is the daughter of Claudius Murchison, head of the Cotton Texitle Institute.

FLOWING THRILLS. Costello, greeter at Restaurant "400," has invented a palate pleasing "One-Two-Three Cocktail." He says its named for its three ingredients, dubonnet, vermouth and brandy. But we can't help remembering the baseball phrase, "One, two, three—and out!" . . . Rare French wines are no rarity at La Salle du Bois. They say they've enough to last for the duration, even if it's a long war . . . For people who can't make up their minds the Burlington has little table wheels they can spin to choose their drinks. Ours kept stopping on the mint julep space . . . The Casino Royal serves exotic Chinese cordials yclept "Mei Kwe La" and "Ng Ka Py."

Fifth columnists had better not wander into River Bend. They have a squirrel rifle over the fireplace. But we don't think it's been shot off since the Mexican War.

MESSAGE TO MAGGIO. Dear Jack Maggio: That new tune "Ooch Ooch a Goona Tach" sounds as though it was written for your Nightingale Band in their heppest mood. Or maybe you'll be playing it by the time this is printed.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Jimmy Dykes, in an interview the other day, moaned about the cream-puff hitting of his ball club and, half prayerfully, said: "If just one of our guys would get hot, we'd start winning some ball games." It may not have sounded like a hefty request Dykes was making, but the White Sox manager knows the value of one hot hitter on a ball team.

POVICH

One clicking hitter, Jeff Heath, has been more responsible than any other single factor, for keeping the Indians in the league lead. Heath has been going to bat on an average of only four times a game, whereas a team's average times at bat totals 33, but he had been supplying the Indians with the power that brought them a 13-game winning streak. One hitter of the Heath type is constantly putting the tying run on base, or moving the winning run into scoring position, or getting the winning run home and generally keeping his club in the ball game.

Whatever modest success the Nats have had this year has been due chiefly to the batting feats of one hitter—Stan Spence. When Spence hasn't been breaking up ball games with long blows, he has otherwise been putting his .422 average to important use by getting on base and moving runners around Without Spence, the Nats would have at least five fewer victories than they now own.

Doerr Carries Load for Red Sox

The Yankees demonstrated the value of one hot hitter last season when they won the pennant. Joe DiMaggio, during his 56-game hitting streak, brought the Yankees out of fourth place and put them so far in the lead that the race was over by August 15. The Yankees had other assets, notably their infield and pitching, but it was DiMaggio with his amazing hitting on a day-to-day basis that knocked the props from under all challenges.

Ted Williams couldn't win a pennant for the Red Sox with his .406 average last season but his slugging did enable a club with the league's worst pitching staff to finish as high as second. When Williams wasn't winning ball games for the Red Sox they were rarely winning. He drew almost a record total of walks and finished the season as the leading run scorer in the league.

Williams hasn't struck his batting stride as yet this season, but Manager Joe Cronin is in high good luck because all of a sudden Bobby Doerr has blossomed as a game-wrecker. Doerr, as of yesterday, was whacking the ball at a .462 rate and was getting the Red Sox over the hump in close games, offsetting Williams' slump.

At a time when the Yankees might be hard put to stay around the league lead because Joe DiMaggio is off to a slow start, Joe Gordon has come along to carry the load as a hot hitter. Gordon and Bill Dickey, fortunately for Joe McCarthy, have taken up the slack. The batting of these two men, more than any other item, has kept the Yankees on the heels of the leaders.

Manager Del Baker of the Detroit Tigers has Rudy York to thank for his club's lofty position in the race. Barney McCosky, the club's best hitter last season, can't untrack himself this year, but York, a .240 hitter last season, is a hot article. He is leading the league with his seven home runs and as of yesterday was tied with Spence in run-production. The Tigers have been winning because of York, who signed a mere $9000 contract this year with a $5000 bonus clause if he bats in more than 100 runs.

A's Sunk Without Sam Chapman

The Athletics are even more hopeless this season than usual because they lost to the Navy the one man on the club who could break up a ball game consistently with his hitting. Without Sam Chapman, the A's are a punchless crew. With him, the A's this season would be a sure-shot to leave their cellar berth.

The man Dykes is yearning for is Taft Wright who has been missing from the White ox line-up since the start of the season following a spring practice accident in which he suffered a torn stomach muscle. With Wright in the hospital, Dykes is now painfully aware of the fact his club misses his best hitter. Wright led the White Sox in batting last season, which in itself may be no distinction, but he has long been recognized as one of the fine hitters in the league.

"If we had Wright in the line-up," Dykes was saying, "we wouldn't lose half of the games we've been losing this season. Just one hitter like him, and we'd be in the first division. With our guys hitting .175 and .185 we're sunk. Out in Chicago, they print the batting averages of the plpayers next to their names on the scorecard. When I got a look at some of 'em the other day, I had to ask the concessionair 'how long since they've been printing the players' weights on our scorecards?'"

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 5.—What interests you?

RACING?—The Preakness might answer a lot of questions. It often does. Statistics show that its winner usually goes on to win the 3-year-old championship more often than does the Derby winner. In recent years Bimelech, beaten in the Derby by Gallahadion, won at Baltimore the following week and left Gallahadion and others far behind for the remainder of the year. About the same thing happened the year before, when Johnstown won the Derby. But Challendon won the Preakness and outlasted the Woodward whistler.

CONSIDINE

This time the question seems to be whether Shut Out scored the flukey win of a pace-setter who found it necessary to go on to victory because the horse for which he was supposed to stooge couldn't make it. If he can come back and win the 1 3/16-mile classic, nobody will do much grousing after that, for the field may be tougher. It won't be as large. Perhaps 12 will start. But it promises to be tougher if Colchis, Sun Again and the surprising Bleu D'Or get up to the line.

Colchis beat Alsab twice in Maryland. Bleu D'Or would have won the Wood with plenty to spare, if that test had been as long as the Preakness distance.

Sun Again seems to have been affected by the train ride to Baltimore from Louisville, where he had to be withdrawn from the Derby, but Ben Jones may get him in shape. They say Ben groaned when he saw Shut Out's winning time in the Derby, for he felt that Sun Again, even short of his best form, could have beaten 2:04 2-5.

In the meantime, a little number named Whirlaway, who makes most of the current Derby crop look like goats, goes after the $20,000 Dixie Handicap tomorrow at Pimlico. A victory would bring him a little closer to the top of the greatest money-winners in horse history. He now has won a little over $350,000 and is the only living or active horse among the first 20 money-winners. He's third now, behind Seabiscuit ($437,730) and Sun Beau ($376,744). Seabiscuit reached the top in 89 races, Sun Beau in 74. Whirly has gotten where he is with 36 races. We don't see how he can miss topping the field, even though he'll never get the breaks Seabiscuit got—two seconds (worth $20,000 each) and a first in the $100,000 Santa Anita, and the so-called match race with Ligorotti, worth $15,000.

BOXING?—Hardly since Kid Chocolate was dazzling them dead at St. Nick's and Barney Ross and Billy Petrolle were fighting in Mike Jacobs' first show at the Bronx Coliseum, has there been more interest in a New York small-club fight than the one Thursday night between Chalky Wright and Lulu Costantino.

Costantino's 56 straight wins, his origin in the New York East Side fighter-breeding area, his sharp boxing skill, curious nickname (his sister gave it to him) and his prospects of growing into the lightweight division have all conspired to make him a first-class drawing card.

But if the full story of Wright is ever written, it will make Lulu's story pale. Ebony-colored Chalky has been Mae West's chauffeur, Henry Armstrong's boxing partner, a toast in London fight circles and has lost track of the number of fights he has had. Nobody knows his age, save that he was established when Armstrong began, but a lot of fighters have become acquainted with his punches. When his manager, Eddie Walker, can't get featherweights to fight Chalky, Chalky fights lightweights, welters and has even taken on a middleweight or so. The Chalk is by far the toughest nut the unbeaten Constantino has had to crack.

BASEBALL?—Dear Ford Frick and Will Harridge: Why don't you turn over to war charities all the fines you collect from managers and ball players? It must run into a nice piece of change over a season's time, and if you do this the minors probably will follow suit.

You two fined five ball players $175 on Monday. Such money, as we understand it, goes into league funds. A lot of fans join the ball players in resenting this. So why not build good-will all around and give it to Navy relief, Army relief, the Red Cross and USO? Over a season's time it could do a lot more good in those places than it possibly could in league treasuries.

GOLF?—Hope the United States Golf Association, or P. G. A., adopts the suggestion of Granny Rice and puts up a special trophy for Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen to shoot at, during the Hale America tournament. The three golfing immortals will play in their first national championship since 1930, when Jones retired. Rice has suggested that since all three of the men are playing well, that they compete in an inner-circle tournament, with the trophy going to the one with the lowest medal score.

It would be like bringing back Man O'War, Exterminator and Twenty Grand for a race . . . or putting Ruth, Cobb and Speaker back in the outfield.

Boston's Six-Run Attack in Third Clinches Decision; Ken Chase Winner

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 5.—The Boston Red Sox bombarded a trio of Cleveland pitchers for 18 hits and a total of 28 bases today while sweeping their three-game series with the league-leading Indians with a 13-to-3 triumph.

The Indians, who have been jittery since the Sockers broke their 13-game winning streak, again were ragged afield and made four errors, which gave them a total of nine for the series.

They did, however, send the veteran, Vernon Kennedy, off to an encouraging start by scoring in the first inning against Ken Chase, who kept their 12 hits well scattered while going the distance. The first Cleveland miscue, however, gave the Red Sox an unearned run in the second inning and they clinched the game in the third by uncorking a six-run rally that drove Kennedy from the mound.

Williams Leads Attack

Ted Williams led the Boston attack by getting a single, after beating out a bunt against the flat-footed Cleveland infielders, a double and his sixth homer, which came in the fourth frame after Johnny Pesky had singled.

Williams' double came during the big third, with Dom DiMaggio on base. Jimmy Foxx was passed and Jim Tabor scored two runners with a double. Foxx attempted to score on the relay and succeeded only because Gene Desautels dropped Ken Keltner's throw to the plate.

Pete Fox singled and Johnny Peacock doubled before Kennedy was replaced by Harry Eisenstat, who

Outfielder Clouts Two Homers and Triple, Driving Home Winning Run With Latter

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5.—Joe DiMaggio boosted the New York Yankees into second place in the American League today with two home runs and a triple that brought a 5-to-4 10-inning triumph over the Chicago White Sox.

DiMaggio was ably supported by young Hank Borowy, who gave a glittering relief performance in holding the Sox to one hit and fanning seven in 7 1-3 innings.

Rookie John Lindell made his first start on the mound for the Yanks and yielded four runs to the Sox in three innings, two of them through Yankee errors in the first inning and another on a homer by Wally Moses in the second.

Then while Borowy put the brakes on the Sox, DiMaggio hit a homer in the fourth, another with one on in the sixth and finally tripled behind a walk to Tom Henrich for the winning run in the tenth. New York's other tally also came in the sixth on a single by Billy Dickey after Charley Keller walked and stole second.

John Rigney pitched the whole route for Chicago, allowing eight hits. It was the Sox's twelfth loss in 13 games and their ninth setback by one run.

Buck Newsom Gets Pitching Job Today Against Ex-Mates

Buck Newsom today pitches against the club that offered him a $20,000 salary cut last winter. He goes to the mound for the Nats against his old mates, the Detroit Tigers, in the opener of a two-game series at Griffith Stadium.

Newsom asked for today's assignment several weeks ago, following his purchase from the Tigers by the Nats. "I want to pitch against the Tigers the first time they show their noses in Griffith Stadium," Newsom said to Manager Bucky Harris.

Manager Del Baker, who has his Tigers in the thick of the fight for the league lead, will send left-handed Harold Newhouser to the mound. It will be the first Washington appearance of Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth and Outfielder Roger Cramer since they were traded to Detroit last winter.

Golfer Wehrle, Deferred, Will Play In USO Benefits

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 4.—A heart murmur has kept Wilford Wehrle, amateur golfer, from enlisting in the armed service, so he's making his contribution to the war effort in another way.

The 27-year-old Wehrle, who won the Western Amateur Championship in 1937, said tonight he would compete in a series of benefit matches for the Red Cross and the U. S. O this summer.

A Milwaukee medical board turned him down this week after Navy doctors had refused his application for enlistment.

Baksi Deals First Loss To DeChard

D. C. Heavyweight Decisively Beaten In Rousing Battle; Wins Only 1 Round

By Tony Neri

Jimmy DeChard, young Washington heavyweight who was seeking his seventh straight pro victory last night met in its stead his first setback since leaving the Simon pures a year and a half ago. With about 2000 fans sitting in on one of the best heavyweight fights ever seen locally, DeChard was thoroughly licked by big Joe Baksi of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in the eight-round main event at Riverside Stadium. The net gate was $1820.

The outcome left nothing in doubt. Baksi whipped at Jim hard left hooks and shorts, fast right crosses. All this DeChard took, but at the end of the fight it was DeChard who the crowd was cheering, not because he was the local boy but because he staged a game exhibition, which even drew the admiration of his worthy opponent.

With his face cut and bleeding and resembling some grotesque gargoyle, DeChard fought back. When the fans thought that DeChard would go down with the avalanche of blows he gamely rallied but his opponent had too much power and experience.

Jim Wins One Round

Baksi, a young Polish boy who has been fighting only two years as a pro, won seven of the eight rounds. The Post score sheet gave DeChard the fifth round. That was the round Jimmy slashed Baksi's right eye. Sensing that Baksi was hurt, DeChard tore in furiously only to be tied up by the Wilkes Barre fighter.

Baksi entered the ring weighing 206, while DeChard scaled 192.

Wright Wins

Carilli, who once floored Joe Louis in a training session here, took the fight to big Jabbo in the early rounds, hitting mostly in the body with both hands. Kenner came back in the fifth and sixth and stormed over Carilli with his ponderous blows. There were no knockdowns, but the fight never lacked for action. Kenner weighed 214 and Carilli 205.

In the third eight-round bout of the card, Oscar Wright, local colored lightweight, gained a majority decision over Joe Zodda of New York. Oscar survived a torrid

Tigers Snap Tarheel Net Streak at 66

By the Associated Press

Princeton, N. J., May 5.—Princeton University's tennis team snapped the 66-match streak of the University of North Carolina netsters today with a 5-4 triumph decided by the last match.

The teams split even on six singles contests, but the Tigers took two out of three doubles matches to prevail. Dick Bender and Howard Edwards of Princeton topped Harold Maass and Hut Hobs, 6—4, 6—3, to break a 4-4 deadlock in matches won.

It was the fifth straight win for undefeated Princeton and North Carolina's first setback since it was defeated by Yale in 1938.

Milwaukee Girl Picked Derby One, Two, Three—Luck Hinted

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, May 5.—Throw away your forms and tipsheets, boys, here's a new way to beat the bangtails:

Alice Zahn, who works in a newspaper library here, figured it out.

How good is it?

Alice, who saw her first Kentucky Derby last Saturday, bet on Shut Out, Alsab and Valdina Orphan to finish in that order. They did.

How did you pick those horses?" she was asked.

"Well," she explained, "everybody was telling us this horse and that one and finally I just sat down on the grass and picked three horses to get it over with."

"Just quick like, huh?"

"Uh-huh."

"But why those three?"

"Well, I knew Alsab wasn't going to win, but they said he was a good horse, so I picked him for second."

"Yes, yes, but Shut Out to win——?"

"Oh, I didn't really pick him. You see, everybody seemed to think Devil Diver was awfully good and when I found out that 'entry' meant you would get two chances I thought that would be a good bet. It was, too, because Devil Diver didn't win but I won anyway."

"And Valdina Orphan for third?"

"I didn't really pick Valdina Orphan either. That was another entry, so I bet to get two chances."

On second thought, however, maybe you better not use Alice's system. She thought the horse that won was named "Shut Eye."

7-Hit Hurling And Single In 6th Win

Rookie's Big Hit Scores Two Runs; Griffs Make Five Safeties Count

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Rookie Early Wynn, showing effectiveness in the pinches and a great distrust of the Nats' batting attack, swatted two runs home for himself in the sixth inning yesterday and beat the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 3.

Wynn appropriated the ball game for himself when he came to bat with the bases loaded, the score tied at 3-3, and two out in the sixth. The young pitcher slapped a single over second base into center field and prodded the winning runs home.

The burden of winning the ball game devolved upon Wynn because to that point Right Hander Bob Harris, of the Browns, was pitching four-hit ball, and there was great uncertainty as to where the next Washington hit was coming from. So Wynn delivered it himself. It was probably just as well, because the Nats never did get any more hits.

Wynn did all right from the pitching mound, too. He threw a seven-hit performance at the Browns, and after walking the second man to face him, he didn't walk any more. It was his third victory of the season, against one defeat.

Lead Stood Up

After setting himself up in a two-run lead in the sixth, Wynn made it stand up magnificently. In the last three innings, the only hit he allowed was a bunt in his own direction. The Browns got only one ball out of the infield in the last three innings, and just to make sure of everything, Wynn struck out the last two batters in the ninth, including Pinch Hitter Roy Cullenbine.

Wynn played a pretty good game. The Nats made considerable use of the five hits they got off Harris and Rookie Frank Biscan. In fact, they didn't waste a hit. Every Washington blow either advanced a run or drove in a run. The Nats hit safely in only two innings, the fourth and the sixth, when they made all of their runs.

A Mere Oversight

The Browns moved out in front in the ball game, 2 to 0, when they assaulted Wynn for three runs after one was out in the fourth. Judnich singled to right and took third on Laab's double off the right-field fence. In this crisis Wynn got rid of Stephens on a pop foul to Estalella for the second out, but with two out he wasn't ordered to pass Swift, for some reason, with the pitcher coming up. So Swift

Whirlaway, Challedon, Mioland Meet in Rich Dixie Today

Pictor Is Doubtful Starter; Impound, Best Seller Among Horses Competing

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 5.—Derby and Preakness 3-year-olds will be sidetracked today as a gallant field of 11 older horses hold the spotlight in the thirty-eighth running of the $20,000-added Dixie Handicap. The historic test of a mile and three-sixteenths has a line-up that rivals any class this year. It will bring together W. L. Brann's Challedon, the Calumet Farm's Whirlaway and C. S. Howard's Mioland. The three heavy money horses are primed for the test and will have eight others to tackle unless scratches develop. Pictor, stablemate of Challedon, was regarded as a doubtful starter tonight.

Whirlaway, 1941 Derby winner, was shipped from Churchill Downs yesterday, where he was the winner of the Clark Handicap. Ben Jones has the "triple crown winner in excellent shape and ready to carry the top weight of 128 pounds. Mioland, toting 126 pounds, and Challedon with 124, will renew their battle that carried them to the finish line noses apart with Challedon the winner in the Philadelphia Handicap at Havre de Grace two weeks ago.

Among the lesser lights in the field are Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Impound, trying to stage a comeback; E. R. Bradley's Best Seller, second in the Widener at Hialeah last winter; Mrs. P. Corning's always dangerous Attention; Greentree Stable's Century Note, and H. C. Hatch's Filisteo.

With the exception of Louis B. Mayer's Domingo, due here tomorrow from New York, all of the Preakness candidates are assembled at Pimlico. With the arrival from Churchill Downs of the Kentucky Derby contestants Alsab, Valdina Orphan, Requested and Fairy Manah, and of Colchis from Belmont Park, the field is bedded down.

As Alsab was being unloaded, his trainer, August (Sarge) Swenke remarked:

"He ran a wonderful race in the Derby. He just couldn't get there—but he'll get there one of these days, all right. I'm satisfied with his race and I'll ride back Basil James Saturday."

Alsab and all his stablemates occupied one railroad car arriving from Louisville, while in another were Valdina Farms' Valdina Orphan and the older Fairmond. B. F. Whitaker's Requested and Fox Catcher Farm's Fairy Manah.

Trainer Proud

Frank Catrone, the Valdina trainer, came with his horses and had this to say about Valdina Orphan, who was barely nosed out for second honors by Alsab: "He ran a crackin' race. Had to break from way on the outside and then lose some ground around the first turn. Everybody was well satisfied with his race."

Catrone further stated that Carroll Bierman, who handled the colt, had been engaged to do the stable's riding and would be up on the son of Hilltown in the Preakness. Emerson F. Woodward, the Texas cattleman who owns the colt, also will be present for the race.

Rookie Hurler Beats Pirates For Braves, 7-1

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 5.—Jimmy Wallace, a tiny, apple-cheeked boy with a winning smile and a pretzel curve, made his bow as a big-league hurler for the Boston Braves today—and did a man-sized chore of throttling the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7 to 1, on six widely scattered hits.

The 20-year-old Braves' southpaw freshman prepped professionally in his home town of Bridgeport, Conn., is the smallest member of the Boston mound staff. But he was a "little giant" as he unfurled pitching which, coupled with effective Boston hitting, gave the Braves a two-to-two break in a series ending today.

The Braves lambasted three Pirate hurlers for 16 hits in an assault which settled the game as early as the second inning with a two-run outburst. One more run came across in the third and a three-run ninth put the clincher on things.

Old Paul Waner, for years a Pirate, popped out four hits to lead the Braves' stickers, while Manny Fernandez and Lewis Gremp each had two coubles.

Rookie Stops Tigers, 2-1, For Athletics

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 5.—Rookie Russ Christopher, drafted from a Yankee farm, pitched a three-hitter in his first major league start today to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 2-to-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The defeat allowed Christopher's former employers to move into second place in the American League, replacing Detroit.

Dizzy Trout, on the mound for the Tigers, was nicked for seven hits, three of which came in the eighth inning when the A's scored the winning runs. A single by Mike Kreevich, Bob Johnson's double and a single by Dick Siebert accounted for the A's runs.

The Tigers tallied their run without a hit in the ninth, Pete Suder's error setting the stage for the score.

B. C. C. Halts Eastern Rally To Win, 6 to 4

Avenging an earlier loss to the Tide, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High nine yesterday halted a late Eastern rally, to win, 6 to 4, on the suburban field.

Dick Kuster, whom Eastern drove from the mound during its 9-to-5 triumph several weeks ago, lasted out yesterday's game and took credit for an eight-hit performance. Twelve of the opposng battles were struck out in the process.

Both clubs scored twice in the second inning, but before Eastern could summon up another run, the Barons were out front by 6 to 2. Eastern's two-run comeback in the eighth fell just short.

Cameo Wins Over H. & J. To Open Loop

Packing its winning margin into one inning, Cameo Furniture nine launched its Washington Post-Industrial League season yesterday with an 11-3 trouncing of H. & J. Construction on the Ellipse.

Cameo, a strong contender in last year's play, was trailing by a 2-1 count when it went to bat in the third inning. Two walks off Seidel and a single loaded the sacks, and at that point Jimmy Schwab delivered the triple that put the winners ahead for good.

Kenny Deavers, brother of the Furniture nine's star last year, went the route and gave up only seven hits. One of these, however, was Outfielder Hobson's ringing homer in the eighth inning.

Today two more clubs see their first action in the popular weekday league when Center Market and Mellanos Cafe meet on the North Ellipse at 5:30.

Wilson Upset By Anacostia Golfers, 6-3

Woodrow Wilson golfers, the only threat to Roosevelt High's title hopes in the D. C. Schoolboy Golf League, all but passed out of the picture yesterday at Indian Spring when Anacostia pulled a 6-3 upset. The failure of their No. 1 man, Manders, to appear for the match may have been costly to the Wilsonites.

Meanwhile Roosevelt had little trouble in its meeting with Tech, sweeping the event at Bannockburn for its eighth straight triumph.

Wynn Stars, Nats Beat Browns, 5-3

Hitless for three innings, the Nats bounced right back in the fourth and got three runs with the help of Don Gutteridge. Spence and Vernon led off with singles, and after Campbell fouled out, Gutteridge in his haste to start a double play on Early's grounder forgot to pick up the ball. That filled the bases, and Bobby Estalella punched a single to center for two runs. Jimmy Pofahl set the Nats up in a 3-to-2 lead when his long fly to center scored Early from third.

Chet Laabs, who Wynn found the most troublesome of the Browns, tripled off the leftfield wall with one out in the sixth, and Stephen's long fly to Campbell got him home with the tying run at that point.

Then came the Nats' sixth; with Campbell drawing a walk. Early popped up for the first out, but Estalella slugged a single to left and Campbell got to third on the blow when McQuillan bobbled the hit, with Estalella taking second. Pofahl was given an intentional pass and the strategy seemed to be working nicely when Gomez fouled out. Then Wynn won his own ball game.

Bobby Estalella had quite a struggle of it, but he ended up making two fancy catches of pop fouls near the Browns' dugout in the early innings . . . Joe Gomez was a great help to Wynn in the seventh after Pinch Hitter Criscola led off with a safe bunt . . . Gomez flung himself into the path of Gutteridge's line drive and started a double play, and in the next inning, Pofahl eased the burden of Wynn with a fancy play on McQuillan's grounder far to his left . . . one of the reasons Stan Spence didn't increase his run-production total was because there was never anybody on base when he came to bat . . . George McQuinn and Bruce Campbell, the clean-up hitters of the two clubs, couldn't stir up any sort of a hit between them.

was greeted by Chase's two-bagger that drove in Peacock.

After Williams bashed his two-run homer against Eisenstat, the Sockers added another fourth-inning counter when Tabor connected for his second double, a blow that was duplicated by Bobby Doerr. The latter also collected a single but while getting two-for-five, his league-leading batting average dropped 7 points to .460.

Clint Brown replaced Eisenstat in the fifth and gave the Sockers six hits and three more runs before Charlie Embree, a rookie right-hander, replaced him in the eighth.

Oris Hockett, Cleveland's rookie right fielder, was forced to leave the game in the fourth inning when, while diving for a hit, he broke his sunglasses and suffered a gashed nose.

French Pitches, Bats Dodgers to 3-1 Victory Over Cards

Breaks Tie In Eleventh With Single

Veteran Southpaw Drives Home First Dodger Run in 7th; Allows Four Hits

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 5.—Lefty Larry French, the 33-year-old veteran whom the Brooklyn Dodgers almost cut adrift during their Florida training, pitched and batted the National League champions to a 3-to-1 11-inning triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Working against the newest southpaw sensation of the senior circuit, 21-year-old Howard Pollet, the crafty French kept the Cardinals to four scattered hits and would have had a shutout except for an error by Billy Herman in the eighth.

French himself drove in the first run of the game with a single in the seventh and when the bitter duel ran into overtime, French again came through with a single to drive in the run that broke the tie in the eleventh.

Snap Losing Streak

The Dodgers went into the contest with a four-game losing streak, including a double setback by St. Louis Sunday, and were only half a game ahead of the second place Pittsburgh Pirates. To meet this predicament French was called upon for his first starting assignment of the year and the result was spectacular.

For six innings neither team could score. Then in the seventh Mickey Owen singled and was forced by Peewee Reese. With two out Reese raced all the way home on French's smash to right center.

Martin Marion opened the Cards' eighth by bunting safely down the third base line and advanced on a sacrifice by Pollet. Then with two out Herman fumbled Stan Musial's grounder and Marion scored.

As the eleventh opened Jim Brown fumbled Joe Medwick's grounder. Dolph Camilli popped up trying to sacrifice, but Owen singled Medwick to second. Reese lined out. Then French singled Medwick home and Herman singled Owen across. Max Lanier replaced Pollet to get the final out, but French prevented the Cards making a counter rally.

Cubs Beaten By Phils, 4-2, In Series Final

Chicago, May 5.—Johnny Podgajny, a consistent jinx to the Chicago Cubs last season, picked up today where he left off last year and the Philadelphia Phillies whipped Chicago, 4 to 2, in the final game of the series.

Podgajny outpitched Chicago's ace right hander, Claude Passeau. However, loose defensive play on the part of the Cubs helped the league's cellar occupants to the triumph.

The Phils got away to a two-run lead in the first inning, and the Cubs tied it up with a ru nin the fourth and another in the fifth.

Philadelphia scored what proved to be the winning run in the sixth when Nick Etten singled, stole second and continued to third when Catcher Clyde McCullough of the Cubs threw the ball into center field. Etten scored on Ben Warren's single to center.

JACK BELL

The third annual meeting of the Brotherhood of the Jungle Cock, held at Camp Airy near Thurmont, Md., Friday to Sunday May 1 to 3, found sportsmen from Maine to Georgia and North Carolina in attendance. Ohio was represented by a large delegation headed by George Landis, well known attorney of Columbus. George is also a member of the Conservation Commission and was special representative of Gov. George Bricker of Ohio. With him were such other well known sportsmen conservationists and outdoor writers as Assistant Commissioner Buck Rider, Jimmie Stuber, Associated Press writer; Dave Roberts, Dallas Marshall, Stu Snyder and Ken Crawford.

Hinton James, Administrator of Game Fish, headed the delegation from North Carolina. With him were Paul Kelly, Assistant Commissioner of Inland Game Fish, and Charlie Parker, head of the North Carolina Game and Fish News Bureau.

Our neighboring State, Virginia, was represented by a live and entertaining delegation, headed by Winston Montague of Richmond, well known sports writer and radio outdoor commentator. Winston, had in his party, Bobby Cruickshank, golfing figure of another day. Bobby also loves his trout fishing, and he kept the boys up one entire night with his Scotch dry wit—or shall we say wet wit—teaching the boys how to tie scotch pattern flies. The fur and feathers flew along with the scotch, many of the boys still suffering from the resulting tickling sensation—and what flies.

Georgia was represented by Charlie Eliot, of Atlanta. Charlie is well known for his book on conservation, which is used as a textbook is most every school in the country. He is also well known for his outdoor sports photography.

Lawrence Richey and Floyd Akers, owner and lessee of the noted trout fishing preserve on Little Hunting Creek, acted as hosts to out-of-State visiting anglers. The visit, said most anglers we spoke to, was the highlight of their trip and was worth it. Praise was high for the hospitality shown them by this team of sportsman hosts. The boys' eyes popped at sight of what Larry called a snack for lunch. After lunching on baked Smithgfield ham and roast turkey with all the trimmings their tummies almost popped.

John Alden Knight gave an actual fishing exhibition of casting, using Floyd's 1⅛-ounce fly rod. Jack caught several 10 to 14 inch trout from the "home pool" but the big 4 to 6 pounders would not rise while the barometer was dropping.

Two Women Share Honors In Links Play

Mrs. Max Taylor and Mrs. L. G. Pray divided honors in the opening day event of the Manor Club women's golf committee yesterday, Mrs. Taylor winning low net with a 46-47, 93-18, 75, and Mrs. Pray, several times club champion, taking gross honors with a 42-40, 82.

Mrs. J. V. Brownell won in a draw for second low net with a 43-47, 90-13, 77, winning over Mrs. M. Scandissio who had 107-30, 77. Mrs. John R. Daily was among the net winners with a 94-13, 81. Low putts went to the District champion, Mrs. W. R. Stokes, with 29.

Kenwood members finished one-two among the guest net winners, Mrs. E. Foley with 105-24, 81, winning in a draw from Mrs. J. P. Brantley who scored 107-25, 81. Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, Army-Navy, was low putts winner with 31.

A field of 50 members and guests tured out for the initial ladies' day event at the Norbeck club and all winners received defense stamps as prizes.

ARMY AND NAVY

Mrs. J. Y. York became the second two-time winner of the Peabody Cup, one of the highlights of the Army-Navy women's intra-club card, as she defeated her 20-year-old daughter, Anne, in yesterday's playoff by a margin of several strokes.

Mrs. York and her daughter kept the scores a family secret as they were both off form but the mother was closest to her usual game. Mrs. J. S. Phillips was the only other two-time winner of the cup. Mrs. York and Miss York tied with net 78's in Monday's play, the former with 99-21, 78, and Miss York with 93-15, 78.

P. G. A. Bars Heafner From Big Tourney

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., May 5.—Clayton Heafner, the big, blond golfer of the uncertain temper, said today the Professional Golfers Association had barred him from the National P. G. A. Tourney to be held in Absecon, N. J., May 25-31.

News of the ruling against him, Heafner said, was given him by George Slingerland, president of the Carolinas section of the P. G. A., just before he was to tee off with 14 other pros of this area in qualifying play for two berths in the P. G. A. meet. Slingerland told him he would not be permitted to competes, he said, because of alleged "unethical conduct" at the $5000 Asheville tournament this spring.

Heafner said he supposed the "unethical conduct" allegation grew out of the fact that he picked up after playing eight holes at Asheville and later engaged in an argument with another pro in the clubhouse.

This argument, he asserted, was strictly personal.

Cardinals' Lohrman Purchased by Giants

Cincinnati, May 5 (AP).—The New York Giants have purchased Pitcher Bill Lohrman, lanky right-hander, from the St. Louis Cardinals, Traveling Secretary Eddie Brannick of the Giants announced here today.

Lohrman was sent to the Cards with Catcher Kenny O'Dea and a wad of cash in the deal which brought First Baseman Johnny Mize to the Giants last winter. He won nine and lost 10 for the Giants last season and had an earned run average of .402.

Walters Wins First Victory, Beats Giants

By International News Service

Cincinnati, May 5.—Bucky Walters, a four-time loser up today and knocked out in two innings by the Giants Sunday, went back against New York today and pitched and hit himself to a 10-inning 2-to-1 victory, his first success of the season.

With one out in the tenth Walters, Frey and Mike McCormick hit successive singles off the pitching of Hal Schumacher to decide the game. Faulty control and strategy by the Giants helped the Reds to the first run in the fifth. Walker, first up, was struck by a pitched ball. Joost singled him to third. With none out and the score 1 to 0 the New York infielders played back for Lamanno, whose out on a slow grounder, Werber to Wise, let Walker score.

Mize doubled Jurges home from first with two gone in the first inning for the Giants' lone score.

Grey Wing Clings to Early Lead, Wins $2500 The Survivor

Cedar Farm Entry Holds Off Incoming

Rascal 3d in Blanket Finish; 10,000 See Race; Winner Pays $6; Time Very Slow

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, May 5.—Six 3-year-olds who failed to earn their way into the Derby, the Preaknes or the Belmont, staged a brilliant battle here this afternoon in the fifth running of the $2500 added The Survivor. A blanket finish resulted and the Cedar Farm's Grey Wing won by a neck margin over Mrs. D. B. Miller's Incoming, with Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Rascal a head away and third.

With Incoming drawing the chief play from a crowd of 10,000, Grey Wing paid a $6 mutuel. The son of Halycon and War Grey was clocked in 1:46 2-5, the second slowest time for the stake. The victory was worth $2410 to the winner. Previous to this test, two victories had brought Grey Wing $2550 in earnings. Jockey Eddie DeCamillis, who learned to ride horses at this track, did the booting on the winner and was a keen factor in the victory.

Troon stumbled leaving the gate, but Jockey Mannie Berg rushed the long shot to the front on the inside. Grey Wing moved up to join the leader before the field reached the back stretch. Rascal was under a grip and Incoming also was being restrained. At the far turn, Grey Wing was sent to the front and Troon dropped out of contention.

Incoming and Rascal then set out after the flying leader. Grey Wing was taken in on the rail as his two chief rivals moved to him. DeCamillis went to work on the Halcyon colt and the youngster responded in noble fashion. Incoming and Rascal charged at him but Grey Wing met their bids and was holding them safe going into the wire.

Thrilling finishes marked both ends of the daily double races. Flying Junior nosed out Pretty Is in the first race after the two had battled all the way in the 4½ furlong test for juveniles. Third money went to Lanceleaf. Flying Junior paid $5.20.

In the second race, three noses reached for the wire. The camera called them in this order: The Killer, Magnify, Malvois. The double paid $14. The Killer was a $5.10 shot.

Dear Al:

Today's program is a classy one and will be featured by the $20,000 Added Dixie Handicap. There's some real expensive horse flesh scheduled to take the track with Whirlaway, Challedon, Mioland among those slated to battle it out. The remainder of the card is good, although the second race is a cheap affair with a horse named Walter Haight due to go. He looks like he is outclassed for I can't recommend him. Steve Cochrane sliped over to Baltimore yesterday to beat the publicity drums for the Olney Theater where Eddie Dowling opens on May 18 in "George Washington Slept Here" and he says he came out to Pimlico to relax. It cost him $11 for the afternoon. "I could have rented a suite at the Lord Baltimore Hotel and slept there for less," moaned Steve. Jockey Tommy Malley, who has been stealing the riding show here, having won the Pimlico Oaks with Vagrancy and the Jennings Handicap with Ocean Blue, ran afoul of the stewards yesterday He was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding in the first race. He was aboard Pretty Is who was beaten a nose. Trainer Jim Healey advised that the two-ply Chrysler entry in the Preakness of Ramillies and Bleu D'Or would not be among those present. Ramillies is not regarded as ready for the Preakness and Bleu D'Or, a sensational second to Request in the Wood Memorial, came out of that race lame and his condition since has not permitted his being trained properly for Saturday's Pearkness. Trainer Ben Jones of the Calumet Farm forces stated that he would make a definite decision today on Sun Again's Preakness status. The Missourian wants to see how Sun Again works over the Pimlico strip this morning and in what condition he comes out of the training effort. The big question mark of the Preakness: What horse will Arcaro ride—Devil Diver or Shut Out? may be unanswered until one hour before the running of the race Saturday or about 4 p. m. that afternoon. Trainer John Gaver said that Arcaro, as contract rider for the Greentree Stable had his choice and that although he believed Eddie would choose Devil Diver, which he rode in Saturday's Derby, he still wouldn't be obliged to decide until 60 minutes before Preakness post time. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—TRINGLE has been knocking at the door and appears ready to graduate in this field of maiden fillies. COLLEEN M had speed at Bowie and deserves attention. TRIPLE SUN for the show money.

Second race—TRIPOD gets in light and appears headed for a victory in this field of cheap ones. Needs only a ride. GALLACOURT is better than that last. ZORRO for the minor award.

Third race—OSSABAW carries top weight in the day's steeplechase but has class enough to win it. CADDIE is a fair sort and belongs close. CIRCUS for the third money.

Fourth race — HALF CROWN looks like the goods in this distance event for maidens. He has closed ground in most of his tries and I see no reason for mistakes. BAVARDIA has surprised with two good efforts and belongs close. SEA SLAVE to take care of the others.

Fifth race—HANDY TOM appears well placed in this field. Appears ready to carry 114 pounds to the wire ahead of these. ROAD SCRAPER should open a long lead again and is dangerous. PETE, JR., to show.

Sixth race—CHALLEDON gets my call in the Dixie Handicap. He has been improving with each start and goes over a track he loves. WHIRLAWAY hasn't been off the boxcar very long. He is reported fit and looks second best. MIOLAND for the show end.

Seventh race—SUNSET BOY gets my backing in this sprint field. He will get running room on the outside and should be along in time to take the main award. TOMLUTA is dangerous but may be overweighted at 122 pounds. INDIAN SUN to take care of the others.

Eighth race—NORTHPORT may prove best of the cheap ones in the day's finale. WHITE SEA and HEDDA GAB to account for the place and show positions.

Best bet—HANDY TOM.

Broadcasters Ask Cut in FCC Airways' Rule

Declaring that a free radio is "one of the bulwarks of democracy," spokesmen for the National Association of Broadcasters yesterday urged Congress to restrict the Federal Communications control of the airways.

Neville Miller, N. A. B. president, also told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that there was "great apprehension" that the FFC, if given the power, would rule that newspaper ownership of radio stations is "against public policy."

"Public policy should be formulated by Congress and not by the commission," Miller added, referring to an investigation by the commission into newspaper ownership of stations.

"While the commission says that it wants to conduct the investigation to learn the facts, there is great apprehension on the part of newspaper-owned radio stations that the commission will hold that they are against public policy."

Restriction Urged

Frank E. Mullen, vice president and general manager of the National Broadcasting Co., urged the committee to adopt an N. A. B.-backed restrictive amendment to the original 1927 radio act which would read:

"Nothing in this act shall be understood or construed to give the commission the power to regulate the business of the licensee of any radio broadcast station, and no regulation, conditions or requirements shall be promulgated, fixed or imposed by the commission, the effect or result of which shall be to confer upon the commission supervisory control of station programs or program material, control of the business management of the station or control of the policies of the station or of the station licensee."

Developments Cited

Mullen told the committee that "had it not been for the war, we would now find ourselves in one of the most important technical developments in radio history," and said later that radio's "new services are certain to exert a revolutionary influence upon our social and economic life."

He declared that those new services would in years to come "raise problems vastly greater than any problem which may exist in radio today."

At war's outbreak, he said, "we were on the verge of new services and a new industry through the wider use of the ultra-high frequencies in the fields of television, frequency modulation, and facsimile, which is the broadcasting of printed material."

Stan. Brands Head Cites Salary Cut

New York, May 5 (AP).—James S. Adams, president of Standard Brands, Inc., told stockholders at a tempestuous annual meeting today he voluntarily had cut his own salary to $75,000 a year from $100,000 to set an example for "the severe economies I must exact throughout the business."

Adams' salary contract, last February's omission of a common share dividend and the company's pension system—which Adams said had also been revised—were subject to some criticism and for acrimonious debate among the 250 stockholers present.

Adams read a statement in which he said the company's maximum pension rate had been cut to $8000 a year from $25,000 and told of his salary cut.

The new president—he was elected last December 19—told the stockholders that while gross sales were up sharply in the first quarter, net profits for the period were $1,489,980, equal to 10 cents a common share, compared with $2,484,512 or 18 cents a common share in the like period of 1941.

Retailers Given Description of Price Ceilings

Detailed explanation of the general maximum price regulation as it applies to retailers was given to retail trade associations representing more than 700,000 establishments that deal directly with the buying public at an all-day meeting here yesterday with officials of the Office of Price Adimnistration.

The regulation, which becomes effective as to retail sales of commodities on May 18, places a ceiling, with two exceptions, over all prices.

Yesterday's conference was one of hundreds to be held throughout the country over the next two weeks. They are designed to give retailers specific information regarding the regulation as it affects their various situations. Most of the meetings will be arranged and conducted by OPA regional offices, although some will be presided over by members of the Washington staff.

Inter-American Ship Pool Formed

By the Associated Press

Formation of an inter-American shipping pool to alleviate the growing merchant marine problem of the Western Hemisphere was disclosed yesterday by Secretary of State Hull and Uruguayan Ambassador Juan Carlos Blanco.

Blanco said Uruguay was donating one vessel to the pool and that he would sign a transfer contract in the near future.

Hull told his press conference that Uruguay was showing additional interest in the Allies' cause by contributing the ship which he said he believed was a Danish vessel seized by the Uruguayan government last summer.

McNear Fails To Appear at WLB Hearing

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 5.—George P. McNear, jr., president and principal owner of the Government-seized Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad, made no appearance and sent no representative today when a War Labor Board arbitrator convened a hearing on the long-standing dispute between the McNear line and the railroad brotherhoods.

McNear has contended the controversy, involving wage scales and seniority rights, should be handled by the special emergency board provided for under the National Railway Labor Act. He recently announced refusal to participate in arbitration by the WLB, or to accept its finding. At his Peoria offices today, he and his attorneys were reported "out of town."

Judge Benjamin C. Hilliard of the Colorado Supreme Court, designated as the WLB arbitrator, sat for more than an hour in the hearing room, awaiting arrival of a stenographer and otherwise marking time, before opening the proceeding by asking "Who is ready?"

When the only responses came from attorneys for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Judge Hilliard commented that he was "embarrassed that so far the carrier hasn't appeared."

The arbitrator then announced the railroad would be "welcome at any time during this hearing" it might choose to appear, and meanwhile directed the brotherhoods to proceed.

After agreement on the format of procedure, the hearing was recessed until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

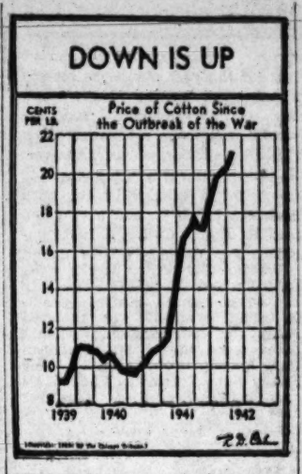
T. P. and W. Brotherhood employes struck last December 28. Road operations continued with repeated disturbances, and the Government took over the line March 22 after McNear's rejection of Federal orders to arbitrate.

Canada May Strip Tires From Pleasure Cars

Ottawa, Ontario, May 5 (Canadian Press). — Nonessential automobiles will be stripped of their tires if rubber requirements cannot be met otherwise, William Knightley, associate national director of salvage, said in an interview today.

"By the end of May we will need 50 million pounds of scrap rubber and if we cannot obtain that amount the stripping of tires from nonessential vehicles is in prospect," Knightly said.

Knightly said that in the United Kingdom and Germany, steel fences, ornamental railings and the like had been torn down for salvage purposes and similar action might have to be taken in Canada.



Late Earnings Statements

Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc. For the quarter ended April 4 reported net profit of $467,676, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $1.36 a common share, compared with $490,707, or $1.43 a share, in the like 1941 period.

Eastern Racing Association, operating the Suffolk Downs race track, reported a net profit of $300,776 after all charges and Federal taxes in the year ended March 31, or the equivalent of $10.03 per share. Profits in the preceding year were $242,965, equivalent to $8.09 per share. Federal tax deducations in the past year aggregated $223,000, compared with $102,315 in the preceding 12 months.

American Viscose Corp. reported net income in the quarter ended March 31 was $1,445,475, equal after requirements for preferred dividends, to 66 cents a common share, compared with $1,548,692, or 72 cents a common share, in the first quarter of 1941. The company said that total income before income taxes was $4,830,475 in the first 1942 period against $2,788,692 in the first 1941 quarter. President William C. Appleton said demand for rayon far exceeded the company's capacity.

Tubize Chatillon Corp. realized net earnings of $406,633 after charges and taxes in the first quarter of 1942, Roland L. Taylor, chairman, said at the annual stockholders meeting. This compared with $459,638 in the comparable quarter of 1941. Net earnings before Federal taxes amounted to $1,167,524 in the first quarter, against $689,457 on the same basis last year, Taylor said.

Life Savers Corp. reported net profit of $256,723, equal to 73 cents a share, in the first quarter. This compared with $253,302, or 72 cents a share, in the like 1941 period.

Kennecott Net Tops 20 Million Before Taxes

New York, May 5 (AP).—Kennecott Copper Corporation earnings, after all charges but before taxes, have been etsimated at $20,400,000 in the first quarter, compared with $17,875,000 in the like 1941 period, E. T. Stannard, president, said today at the annual meeting.

Estimated taxes, based on the highest proposal made so far in the House Ways and Means Committee, Stannard said, would be about 11 million dollars in the March quarter, compared with eight million dollars in the first three months of 1941.

The tax bill for the year 1942 on this basis, he added, would be about 12 million dollars above 1941.

Payment of 17 cents a pound for excess copper production over quotas fixed by the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration would not result in benefit to Kennecott, Stannard said, because quotas in most cases will be difficult to surpass.

North American Unit's Sale to City Held Doubtful

New York, May 5 (AP).—Edward L. Shea, president of the North American Co., commenting on reports the City of Cleveland might buy the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., a North American subsidiary, said it seemed doubtful that a satisfactory offer would be made.

Earlier, Dow, Jones & Co., business news service, said two underwriting groups were being organized for possible bidding on 40 million dollars of City of Cleveland revenue bonds in the event the city and the company agreed on terms for such a deal.

The agency said that instead of selling properties outright, North American might sell its holdings of Cleveland Illuminating common stock, of which it held 75 per cent.

Shea, in a statement, commented: "The North American Co. would, of course, give consideration to any bona fide offer approximating the fair and equitable value of any of its holdings. However, we do not believe that present market prices, affected as they are by the disturbed and uncertain conditions existing throughout the world, reflect the value of such equities as the common stock of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.

"Under these circumstances it seems doubtful that we would receive an offer for our Cleveland stock which we would be justified in accepting."

Rail Coal Movement To East Gains in Week

By the Associated Press

All-rail shipments of coal to New England increased by 601 carloads during the week ended April 25, as the new wartime long-haul rail movement from Southern Appalachian fields offered purchasers additional means of obtaining fuel for protective storage, Solid Fuels Coordinator Harold L. Ickes reported yesterday.

Statistics supplied by the Association of American Railroads showed that 7582 cars of bituminous and anthracite, or approximately 417,000 tons, were moved into the region by rail during the week, as compared with 6981 cars, or about 383,955 tons, during the seven-day period ended April 18.

Telephone Gain Put At 93,700 in April

New York, May 5 (AP).—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today the Bell System added 93,700 telephones to its service during April compared with increases of 105,700 last month and 112,500 in April of 1941.

For the first four months net additions totaled 416,200 against 483,800 in the corresponding period last year, the total in the Bell System at the end of April was 19,254,800 telephones.

Paper Container Market

Manufacturers of paper boxes, fiber containers and other paper packages may retain permanently many of the markets they have been gaining as a result of shortages of competing packaging materials. When the war ends, they will lose their present markets for paper and fiber protective packages for cartridges, shells and for other military supplies, but they will regain markets now lost to them, such as boxes for small electrical appliances and auto parts and accessories. Aside from strictly wartime markets, the paper and fiber container manufacturers have hopes of gaining substantial new markets at the expense of metal and glass containers. The industry has been making rapid progress in developing paper packages for many articles formerly sold in bulk—fresh fruits and vegetables, dairy products, small hardware, and a wide variety of other things—and convincing merchandisers of the sales appeal of proper packaging.

WSA Controls All Shipping

Requisitioning of the remaining oceangoing vessels of the merchant marine removes the last vestige of private control over shipping. Use of or title to 75 per cent of the Nation's freighter tonnage had previously been acquired by the Government, and the acquisition of the remaining ships, estimated to total several hundred, puts all under the control of the War Shipping Administration. The chief effect of the new move will be to slow the movement of those vessels just acquired. It is known that many coastal operators opposed putting ships into ports each night as a means of avoiding submarines, but the WSA can now order that such protective steps be taken where feasible. Thus coastal cargoes will move more slowly—but perhaps more surely.

"Horse Trading" Policy

Although the WPB will place chief emphasis on the production requirements plan as a means of reducing excessive inventories, it intends to take individual action where it finds that supplies are grossly in excess of requirements. Outright requisitioning will be resorted to in some cases, but the inventory and requisitioning branch intends to give holders ample opportunity to dispose of their stocks privately before it resorts to commandeering. WPB refers to this method of "inducement" as its "horse trading" policy. It is a question of trading heavy inventories with others, "or else." The sensible course is to attempt to exchange inventories with someone else in the field who may need them and who may be able to offer some material in exchange.

Outlook for Shoe Producers

Leading shoe producers will probably be able to earn their current dividend rates by an adequate margin in the current fiscal year, and the dividends will probably be maintained. The outlook further ahead, however, is less promising. Most of the leading companies will pay taxes this fiscal year under the 1941 law, because their fiscal years began before January 1. Profit margins before taxes are being fairly well maintained, despite the fact that many companies are using the last-in-first-out method, because selling prices have been raised and some of the less profitable lines discontinued. Production this year is expected to be down only moderately, probably to about 450 million pairs, against 498,300,000 pairs in 1941. In the 1942-43 fiscal year the industry will be confronted with heavier taxes, and prospects for increasing earnings before taxes sufficiently to offset the increased burden are far from promising.

OPA Rolls Back Margins

A recent OPA move that received scant attention was the reduction of a cent a pound in brass material used for small arms ammunition—the cut being mde at the behest of the price administrator. It was said at the time that the reductions might be carried further at a later date. What might have been said is that this represents the start of an effort by OPA to reduce price ceilings wherever it can be done without reducing company earnings below a fair level.

R. C. A. Income Rises Slightly In First Period

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5.—David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corp. of America told stockholders at the annual meeting today net profits in the first three months of 1942 amounted to about $2,030,988, against $1,922,174 in the initial three months of 1941. The figures were after Federal taxes in both instances.

Consolidated gross income in the period, Sarnoff said, reached $44,541,395, compared with $32,576,073 last year.

Commenting on the rapid growth of the radio industry in recent years, Sarnoff said there were at present 900 broadcasting stations in this country and estimated there were now in use 55 million receiving sets.

The meeting ended on a seriocomic note as a husky sergeant at arms by gentle force ejected an elderly man who had persistently heckled Sarnoff throughout the stockholders meeting. His demands for information regarding the circumstances of the formation of Radio Corporation after he had been declared "out of order" irritated not only Sarnoff but many among the approximately 200 shareholders at the meeting.

Aller Criticizes REA Expansion

New York, May 5 (AP).—Sharp criticism of the Rural Electrification Administration for using badly needed war materials to construct competitive power facilities was made by Howard L. Aller, president of the American Power & Light Co. in his annual report to stockholders.

Declaring the REA distribution cooperatives always have had an adequate supply of power, Aller contended the construction of additional transmission lines was unnecessary and such action adversely affected the national interest during the war.

Car & Foundry Sales Top $200,000,000

New York, May 5 (AP).—Sales billed by the American Car & Foundry Co. in the year ended April 30 amounted to nearly $200,000,000 and the current rate of billings exceeds that figure, Charles J. Hardy, president, said in a statement to stockholders.

Because of the company's position in war work, Hardy said, specific information could not be given but he did say it was a recognized fact that the company's mass production of military tanks "is one of the outstanding achievements of our country's war effort."

Parker Pen Net Soars on 'Revival' Of Letter Writing

Janesville, Wis., May 5 (AP).—Increased earnings of the Parker Pen Co. for the fiscal year were attributed today mainly to the rise in letter writing by and to members of the armed forces.

For the fiscal year ended February 28 net profit was $855,416 after provision for taxes and other reserves, or $4.38 a share, compared with $530,390, or $2.70 a share, in the previous year.

Commenting on the company's part in the war effort, Kenneth Parker, president, said activities were devoted to the manufacture of precision parts for munitions during the entire year. "A very much larger schedule of this work," he said, "is under way under contracts which require additional plant facilities and equipment."

2 Church Groups Request Negroes On Ration Boards

Members of the Methodist Negro Conference of the District and vicinity yesterday adopted a resolution urging President Roosevelt to authorize appointment of Negroes on OPA price and rationing boards throughout the country.

Meeting at Asbury Methodist Church, Eleventh and K Streets Northwest, the conference said in its resolution that as "the policy of the OPA is broad and far-reaching in its economic implications, it is imperative to prescribe such equal protection as provided in the Constitution without regard to race, creed or color, so that in the struggle of all Americans against the inexorable high cost of living spiral none will suffer."

The statement was signed by the Rev. H. J. Callis, president of the conference; Bishop James A. Bray, president of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches; the Rev. Robert M. Williams, chairman of the conference's civic committee and host executive secretary and president of Wilberforce University. The Baptist Negro Ministers' Conference of Baltimore, Washington and the District adopted a similar resolution at its meeting yesterday at Vermont Avenue Baptist Church.

Area U. D. C. to Meet Saturday in Manassas

Manassas, Va., May 5.—The Fourth District conference of the Virginia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be held at the Osburn High School here Saturday, with Mrs. MacDuff Green of Aden, chairman, presiding. Beginning at 10 a. m., the program for the all-day meeting will include invocation by the Rev. R. M. Graham, an address of welcome by Town Manager Hunton Tiffany, and reports of the 26 chapters included in the Fourth District.

Merger of Cable, Radio Firms Opposed by Navy Spokesman

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral S. C. Hooper, speaking for the Navy Department, asked Congress yesterday to give the armed forces a veto power over any communications merger, contending that the Communications Commission had "little knowledge of the military requirements and principles involved."

Admiral Hooper appeared before a Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee considering legislation which would authorize a merger of domestic telegraph companies into one system and consolidation of international communication companies into one system, subject to FCC approval.

Hooper expressed disapproval of permitting international radio communications to be merged with cable companies, asserting that under such a merger "Europeans will once again control radio in addition to the cables."

The British, the admiral said, "own and dominate the cable system," except for certain links.

"Whatever you decide," he declared, "we of the Navy Department ask that Congress lay down fundamentals and not turn it over to any one Government agency, and at least allow the armed forces to have a veto in mergers.

"I am opposed to the principle of delegating the responsibility of determining fundamental policies underlying the development and organization of our communications systems to any one agency of the Government, and especially to the Federal Communications Commission, an agency which has so little knowledge of the military requirements and principles involved.

"Experience has shown that a nonmilitary commission has very little sympathy with the needs of the armed services, as compared with those of the public, and that these services must rely upon Congress to protect their interests."

Hooper urged that for the present Congress authorize only the merger of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies, including the cable interests of both.

He also asked that if a merger of international facilities was permitted, that it be done in such a way as to assure ownership by United States citizens of all communications properties within the United States and its possessions.

W. L. Allen, president of the Commercial Telegrapher's Union, opposed the merger, contending that "if the industry were properly regulated a merger would not be necessary."

"Under present war conditions," he said, "when the maintenance of communication facilities is so vital to the armed forces, we believe it to be a very inopportune time for experimentation with one of the most important industries connected with the war effort, and it is our studied opinion that the entire question of a merger should be deferred, at least until the war is won.

"To the employes a merger would mean that thousands of employes would be deprived of employment through the elimination of duplicate facilities, and there would be fewer employment opportunities for those employes fortunate enough to be retained."

Allen asked that if a merger was authorized a prohibition be written into the bill against staff reductions until seven years after it was approved.

Paul Scharrenberg, A. F. of L. representative, testified in support of Allen's statement.

Beverly R. Myles, attorney for the Commercial Cables Staff Association recommended that the Government take over all domestic and international telegraph facilities.

Raid Victims Will Get Cash Aid From U. S.

By Cecil B. Dickson

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Anticipating Axis air raids on Atlantic and Pacific coastal cities and industrial areas in the summer months, the Administration yesterday moved to take care of Americans killed, injured or bombed out of their homes.

The new program will provide cash on the barrel head for immediate relief to bombing victims. It will set up a system of benefit payments to those injured, disabled or put in enemy detention camps. Those killed through enemy action will be buried at Government expense.

Patterned after the British law that gives immediate succor to victims of air raiders, the new program is designed "to enhance the morale of civilians and of members of the armed forces through the provision of funds and services to prevent and relieve such distress."

A bill prepared by the Budget Bureau and introduced by Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat) of Florida lays down a new policy to meet the "conditions of total war where civilians as well as men in the armed forces are exposed to imminent danger from enemy attack."

It is supplemental to the recently enacted law creating the War Damage Corporation to pay for damages on property due to enemy action.

Since American planes bombed Tokyo and other Japanese cities and are now bombing Berlin and German cities, Administration officials confidently predict that the Axis will seek to retaliate by bombing American cities this summer.

The bill will provide for relief payments to dependents of civilians placed in enemy concentration and detention camps. Nearly a thousand American workers were captured by the Jauanese on Wake Island in the Pacific.

Civilian defense workers disabled by bombing attacks on American industries and possessions outside the United States also will receive benefits, the payments to run from $30 to $85 a month.

Wives and children of men killed or disabled are to receive payments, to $15 each a month. A parent will received $20 to $30 a month; a second parent $15 to $22.50.

Payments will be reduced, however, where beneficiaries already are drawing compensation through other laws.

The bill also authorizes funds for evacuaton of civilians from war-stricken areas and their temparary employment.

Pulitzer Award 'Very Nice to Have' Says Ellen Glasgow

Richmond, Va., May 5 (AP).—Ellen Glasgow, Richmond novelist, thinks it is "very nice to have" the Pulitzer Award for the outstading novel of the year.

She was named yesterday to receive the prize for her "In This Our Life," published in March, 1941. The story was of family life in the Town of Queensborough — identified by her readers as Richmond—in the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the present war.

Miss Glasgow is the second Virginia-born writer to win the Pulitzer Award for the outstanding novel. Willa Cather, born in Winchester, won the prize in 1923 for "One of Ours."

The Richmond novelist, because of chronic ailment, will be unable to go to New York to receive the award or to attend the premiere of the motion picture made from it.

Senator Traces K. of C. History

The history of the Knights of Columbus since the first council was established in America 60 years ago was traced by Senator John A. Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, principal speaker last night at a dinner also which commemorated the Washington Council's forty-fifth anniversary.

Senator Vandenberg's speech was mainly in a humorous vein, although he ended on a serious note as he spoke of the Knights' part in fighting against intolerance and in supporting the Nation's war effort.

Toastmaster at the dinner, which was held in the Willard Hotel ballroom, was William E. Leahy, and Alfred A. McGarraghy, banquet chairman also spoke briefly. The banquet was followed by dancing.

County's Freaks Include A Four-Legged Chicken

Chatham, Va., May 5 (AP).—Pittsylvania County has had plenty of freaks of nature lately. Recently a four-legged chicken was reported, then came twin calves, one of which has two tails, and now a hen egg with a likeness of the Japanese rising sun impressed on it.

The chicken was hatched on the farm of Albert J. Hodnett, near Renan; the twin calves belong to George W. Lowe of near Chatham, and the egg bearing the rising sun imprint was laid by a hen in the flock of Herschel G. Barksdale of the Java community.

with Glynn

The idea of having Songstress Kate Smith, Ted Collins and the Nation's three famous service bands—those of the Army, Navy and Marines—on the broadcast known as "The Spirit of '42," which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network every Sunday at 2 p. m., seems to have been a good one.

As evidence, since they started on the revamped program only three weeks ago, the popularity ratings for the show have more than doubled. When a survey was made by the research firm of C. E. Hooper, Inc., in March, the rating was 3.0, which means that three out of every hundred persons in the country was listening. But on April 19, when Kate and Ted and the Navy Band started to take part in the broadcasts, a survey by the same firm showed that the rating had instantly jumped to 7.5.

Kate and Ted are going to continue the good work indefinitely. The plan to have the show largely musical, with the magnificent singing of Kate, the equally magnificent strains of martial music by the massive service bands and short talks by Kate and Ted on what people can do to support their armed forces, was made in response to President Roosevelt's request for stirring music to reflect the martial spirit of America.

It has worked out so well that Kate and Ted plan to include on the programs in the future music by bands from still other branches of the armed services, brought from camps throughout the country.

Bridge

A contributor, G. F. MacN., submits today's swing hand. "Like most old-timers, I have a horror of 'rescue bids,'" he writes, "but a hand dealt recently at a local club illustrates that sometimes they pay handsomely. We were vulnerable and three hearts would have been set 800 points, whereas I made three spades, doubled, with two overtricks.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 10 6 5 ♡ K J 10 6 4 3 2 ◇ Q ♣ A 5
WEST: ♠ A ♡ 5 ◇ A K 9 7 ♣ 6 2 ♣ K Q 9 7 5
EAST: ♠ K ♡ A Q 9 8 7 ◇ J 10 3 ♣ J 10 4 2
SOUTH: ♠ Q J 9 8 7 6 4 3 ♡ None ◇ 8 5 4 ♣ 6 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 ♡	Dbl.	3 ♠	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 5 ♡.

The single heart was opened, the ten forcing the queen, and I ruffed and led a diamond. West hopped up and led the ace of spades, following with the king of clubs. Leading the king of hearts, after winning the club with dummy's ace, set up a discard for my losing club. A profit of 1280 points on the hand, or a swing of 2089 points."

West made a bad double, being so short in spades and long in the two minor suits. East and West just miss making a slam at diaminds by a heart lead from North; South trumps and the club ace does the rest. Five is "cold" and should be reached.

Andrews' Articles On Army Status Praised in House

The introductory article of Marshall Andrews' current series on "Our New Army," published in last Sunday's Post, was placed in the Congressional Record yesterday by Representative Woodruff (Republican) of Michigan.

Praising the article and series as "highly instructive," Woodruff asserted in the House of Representatives:

"It is apparent from the above article that those to follow will not only be most enlightening but also will be so attractively written as to engage and hold the attention of every reader. I wish it were possible for every American citizen to have the privilege of reading them, and I hope that they may all appear in the Congressional Record."
